PRESIDENT ASKS 12 BANKS TO AID SMALLER FIRMS

Message Dispatched with Bills.

Washington, D. C., March 19.—[Special.]—Loans to enable small industries of the country to join in a march toward recovery will be provided if legislation proposed to congress by President Roosevelt today is adopted.

A bill introduced in both houses, accompanied by a message from the President, would set up 12 "credit banks for industry," one in each federal reserve district, with authority to discount or purchase industrial paper, and if necessary to make loans direct to industries.

Mr. Roosevelt told the national legislators that a survey had indicated to him that 700 million dollars in working capital was needed by smaller industries, and that if granted it would insure the continued employment of 346,000 employes and provide new jobs for an additional 378,000 workers.

Approximately 140 million dollars will be advanced to the credit banks from the federal treasury through the federal reserve banks, to start them off. Other funds will become available through sale of common and preferred stocks, notes, debentures, and other securities.

Sponsored by Reserve Board.

The legislation in some quarters was regarded as one more step toward the taking over of the banking business in the United States by the federal government, although in this case, it is pointed out, the legislation is prepared and sponsored by the federal reserve board, which has been rated of conservative intent and thought. In addition the 12 credit banks will be operated under rules and regulations prescribed by the reserve board, and may be dissolved at any time under order of the board.

Under President Roosevelt's suggestion, men chosen from industry would predominate on the boards of directors of the banks.

Loans would be made for a period of not more than five years, and similarly, commercial paper discounted by private banks with the credit banks would be for a term of not more than five years.

See Lack of Credit.

The President and his advisers have declared that industry is restrained from a vigorous attack on the depression by lack of easy credit. Private bankers, heeding the lessons of the perilous times they have been through in the last four years, decline to grant long term loans, and, as the President sees it, short term loans of the 60 and 90 day variety are no help at all in buoying up a sagging or dormant industry or helping new companies to a start.

No limit is put upon the amounts to be loaned or discounted, and interest rates are left to the discretion of the federal reserve board and the separate banks.

Mr. Roosevelt in his message, which was sent in letter form to the banking and currency committees of both houses, said he had been "deeply concerned with the situation in our small industries."

Sees "Improved Condition."

Pointing out that much has been done toward granting federal aid to agriculture, commerce, larger industries and financial institutions, the President said optimistically that "our improved condition of the country nationally furnishes full justification for these efforts."

Then holding that something must be done in behalf of the "medium size man in industry and commerce," Mr. Roosevelt pointed out the need for freer credit, which his survey showed. He urged immediate action on the bill, so that relief may be granted as quickly as possible.

In this connection there has been some mystery attached to a bill sent to the capitol by Jesse Jones, chairman of the RFC, under which that agency would be permitted to make loans direct to industries under five year maturities.

Reported Request Made.

It was reported today that Mr. Jones had been requested by a congressional committee to have such a bill drafted. However, no indication of presidential support for it has been given. It was thought possible that the RFC may, under the proposed legislation

Insull Periled by Raging Ocean Storm

GALE BATTERS SHIP ON WAY TO SECRET REFUGE

Fear Exile May Get New Heart Attack.

(Copyright: 1934: By the Associated Press.)

ATHENS, March 19.—A raging storm on the Mediterranean endangered the life of Samuel Insull tonight as the world speculated on his ultimate destination.

Huge waves pommeled and tossed his expensively chartered little tramp steamer which creaked and groaned in the terrific wind, and it was feared the most famous of all present day fugitives from justice might collapse with another heart attack.

Insull, a poor sailor on a fair day, was believed facing grave danger. On his first flight from Greece last week, the 74 year old former utilities czar suffered a heart attack in good weather, was seasick and could not eat, requiring medical attention.

Ship on Zigzag Course.

The freighter was believed well off the coast, cruising in a zigzag course, awaiting final instructions from the shore as to the possible places Insull might use as a haven from arrest for American authorities. He is sought for grand larceny and embezzlement in conjection with his crumpled utilities empire.

No one here knew anything of his plans and the officials of a score of nations were known to be wondering where he will attempt to land.

May Change Ships at Sea.

Others advanced a theory that he might change ships at sea and head in a different direction.

[In Paris it was reported he could go to Syria without danger of detention by the French government because Syria is only a mandated country. In Washington, the state department prepared to take "appropriate action"—officials would say no more—to bring Insull back to Chicago. London officials said they would do anything in their power to meet any American request in case Insull tries to land in British territory.]

Homer, who told of the wanderings of Ulysses after the siege of Troy, wrote no more thrillingly than history is writing the modern odyssey of the aged American who, at considerable expense, has kept out of the hands of the authorities of his adopted land for a year and a half, and is now in the midst of probably his most sensational exploit.

Wild rumors and intense excitement pervaded the Athenian air as the storm whipped the Maiotis. Some reports said alleged gangsters were on the ship and that they expected to seize Insull and hold him for ransom. The reports, however, were discounted.

Storm Sweeps Vast Area.

Police said it was impossible for any kidnapers to be aboard the vessel because of the guard which was thrown about the freighter when she was in port Saturday at the time she was recalled for a few hours to comply with port regulations. Insull first sailed on the Maiotis secretly.

But while the danger from gangsters was theoretical, there was real danger from the storm. The storm was reported sweeping a vast area, and it was presumed that the captain was trying to keep the ship headed out, though some reports said he might be trying to get in the lee of the shore somewhere.

The last radio report late in the afternoon said the vessel was making slow progress, but officials said they did not know the exact location of the ship. They thought the Maiotis could not be far beyond the iland of Crete.

May Head for Persia.

If Insull does not go to Syria, there were persons who felt he might try to get through the Suez canal, taking a chance that he would not be detained.

Once through the canal, they said, he might head for Persia. Though the Persians declined to grant him a visa, he could, well informed persons remarked, land at some small port and endeavor to obtain permission to live there temporarily.

Others profess a knowledge of alleged plans that he intends to go to Abyssinia, but they could not figure out how he would get there without being halted.

Mrs. Insull Not Aboard Train.

When persons called at the Insull apartment tonight the lights in Mrs. Insull's room were turned out and

Cudahy Says Wife Nagged, Slurred Him

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., March 19.—[Special.]—Michael F. Cudahy, president of Cudahy Brothers company, internationally known packers, sat in a witness chair in Circuit Judge Charles Aarons' court all day today, detailing the acts of cruelty he alleged he suffered at the hands of Mrs. Alice Dickson Pinto Cudahy, whom he is suing for divorce and custody of their son, Richard, 8.

The greater part of his married life of thirteen years, Mr. Cudahy related, was one of humiliation, of fault finding, of nagging, of constant irritations and annoyances by Mrs. Cudahy. She would compare him unfavorably with her first husband, Pinto, whom she described as a coward, and in other ways made him feel that she had a low opinion of him and his family, the wealthy packer said.

Tells of Specific Instances.

"She would refer to the Cudahys as the scum of the earth and make slurring remarks about members of my family and my religion. She would make slurring remarks about her own mother, which also distressed me very much," Mr. Cudahy testified, his voice shaking. Requested by his counsel, James Shaw, to state specific instances of fault finding and nagging by the defendant, Mr. Cudahy recited:

"She corrected me when she thought I was not properly seated at the table. She criticized slips of speech—for instance, when I used the word phone instead of telephone.

"Always she insisted that she enter the automobile first and that I go around to the driver's seat after the door had been closed for her. She would remark about dandruff on my shoulders, protest against my wearing colored shirts and find fault with the color of my face, objecting to its redness.

Says She Flouted His Views.

"She insisted on my wearing formal attire at times when changing clothes inconvenienced me and knowing that I was not given to these formalities. At the table and in the presence of other people she would take sides against me and show disregard for my views and opinions.

"My wife's fault finding," the witness continued, "included the city of Milwaukee, its people, its climate, its shops, and its manners.

"She would say that she was not made to live in this cold climate, though she had lived here most of her life," he continued. "Milwaukee shops could not satisfy her tastes for clothing and she preferred Chicago and New York as shopping centers."

The Cudahys, from the plaintiff's opening statement, were married by a Probate judge at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., July 15, 1921, while they were the guests of the Robert Uihleins on a yachting party. They had been engaged but three or four days.

"We had been engaged once before," Cudahy said, "but that was broken off in December, 1920, and was only renewed on the trip."

Mrs. Cudahy has filed a denial of her husband's charges of cruelty, coupled with a request that his complaint be dismissed. She has not made any counter charges.

TWO YOUNG GUNMEN DEFIED IN HOLDUP BY WOMAN OF 74

A woman of 74 who weighs about 100 pounds defied two young gunmen who tried to hold her up last night in the Sacramento boulevard elevated station of the Garfield Park line, where she is employed as a ticket agent. She is Miss Catherine Marsh, 2934 West Congress street. "Open up that door or we'll fill you full of lead," ordered one of the bandits as he approached the wire meshed ticket cage and pointed a revolver at Miss Marsh. She shook her head. "I'm not going to let you in here," she said. "Go ahead and shoot if you've a mind to, I guess I've lived long enough anyway, but I won't unlock the door." The robbers went away.

An Eagle Alights on Mule; but Fails to Ride Far

Nashville, Tenn., March 19.—(AP)—A bald eagle descended near here today, but unfortunately came down on the back of a mule. Also on the back of the mule was Dan Cook, 16 year old dairy farm employe. Following along was Dan's shepherd dog, Doss. The mule ceased to be there. Dan and the eagle stayed behind—on the ground. Doss killed the eagle. The bird had a wing spread of more than six feet.

Queen Mother of Holland Is Dead at 75

AMSTERDAM, March 20.—(AP)—The dowager queen of Holland died early today after a protracted illness from bronchitis. She was 75 years old.

The condition of the queen mother, Emma, became critical yesterday. Queen Wilhelmina and Princess Juliana had been in constant attendance at the palace for several days.

Was German Princess.

Emma was born princess of Waldeck-Pyrmont, a member of one of the poorest reigning families of Germany. When the rich William III. of Holland married her it seemed to be a grand match for the little princess, but William loved a gay life and Emma's heart was nearly broken time and again. She sought consolation in the education of her daughter and in charities.

When acting as regent for Wilhelmina, after William's death in 1890, Emma organized a campaign against tuberculosis for the improvement of the national health, for which doctors to this day admire her.

Her later life was darkened when she found that her only daughter's married life was not really happy. the prince consort, Prince Henry of Mecklenburg-Schwering, German born, like Emma, failed to enjoy the severity of Wilhelmina's court, and for years has been taking long vacations abroad.

Tries to Find Suitors.

In recent years Emma had concentrated her devotion on her grandchild, Juliana, who some day will be queen of Holland. It was her dearest wish to see Juliana engaged before her death. But it was hard to find a suitor for 25 year old Juliana, doctor of philosophy, a gay but slightly buxom girl, brought up severely unaware of fashion secrets. Holland would like for her to marry a British or Scandinavian prince, but love has failed to kindle when meetings between Juliana and her possible suitors were staged.

Emma, behind the scenes, had negotiated for meetings with princes in romantic settings for her beloved grandchild. Recently she had tried to induce Wilhelmina to help her daughter find a spouse among wealthy Hollanders, instead of restricting the choice to eligible princes.

When the Hohenzollerns sought refuge in Holland it was Emma who extended the hand of friendship to the exiles.

JOHNSON PREPARED FOR AIR TRIP TO DETROIT

Turn Down A. F. of L.

Employes of the J. I. Case company and the Oster Manufacturing company at Racine yesterday voted to rest their case with the Racine county workers' committee as a bargaining group. The employes voted against affiliation with the A. F. of L. or the formation of company unions. Whether or not the employers will deal with the workers' committee is not yet known.

Detroit, Mich., March 19.—(AP)—With strike votes already taken by union employes of nine automobile and parts plants, and referenda underway tonight in others, a widespread strike on Wednesday seemed inevitable unless their union is granted recognition by the manufacturers.

In reply to the auto manufacturers' charge that the A. F. of L. is seeking control, William Collins, its representative, said: "If, after an election outside the plants and under the supervision of the NRA, the automobile workmen vote in favor of company unions, or any other program of representation, the American Federation of Labor will bow its way out of the picture."

Plants Voting on Strike.

The plants in which union employes have voted to strike Wednesday, at 9 a. m., unless they are at least given a right to vote on ending the automobile industry's traditional open shop policy are: Hudson Motor Car company, Detroit; Chevrolet Motor company, Flint; Fisher Body company, plant No. 1, Flint; Pontiac Motor company, Pontiac; General Motors Truck corporation, Pontiac; Fisher Body company, Pontiac; Fisher Body company, Lansing; American Forging and Socket company, Pontiac, and Motor Products corporation, Detroit. In addition, 100 union employes of the Plymouth company were reported by labor leaders to have voted by acclamation to join in any strike called.

Union employes of Fisher Body company, plant No. 2, in Flint are voting tonight, referenda among union employes in the E. I. du Pont de Nemours and A. C. spark plug plants are being held tonight and tomorrow, and in the Buick plant, also in Flint, tomorrow.

Number Involved Doubtful.

The number of workers who would be involved if the strikes should materialize Wednesday is a moot question. Hudson, with a claimed union membership of around 7,000 out of 13,000 employes, Chevrolet with 9,000, and Buick with a claimed 4,000 members out of 15,000 are among the largest plants affected.

Matthew Smith, secretary of the Mechanics' Educational Society of America, the nonfederation union of tool and diemakers that struck last fall, said today his organization would take no direct part in the threatened strike.

"Shudders" at Prospect.

This afternoon the Detroit city council voted to appeal directly to

Points at Issue in Auto Dispute

Washington, D. C. March 19.—(AP)—Essential points in dispute in the automobile strike threat are:

The American Federation of Labor unions demand recognition for collective bargaining, reinstatement of discharged union men and an end to discrimination against them, elections to choose the spokesmen in collective bargaining, and a 20 per cent wage increase.

The employers' stand in brief is: Refusal to recognize unions as such, denial of any discrimination against union men, request that rolls of union members be submitted to them as evidence before union leaders are bargained with, and a plan to increase pay probably 10 per cent.

New York, March 19.—[Special.]—After an all day meeting at which proposals by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, national recovery administrator, designed to avert the threatened general strike of workers in the automobile industry were heard, the board of directors of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce adjourned tonight with the cryptic announcement that "progress is being made."

A last minute effort to avert the threatened strike will be made tomorrow when the board, which is also the code authority for the automobile industry, reconvenes further to consider Gen. Johnson's proposals. Accompanied by Edward F. McGrady, assistant secretary of labor, and labor adviser to the NRA, Gen. Johnson is prepared to fly to Detroit tomorrow to lay before the A. F. of L. unions the proposals that may be evolved.

Upon the outcome of tomorrow's negotiations will depend whether scores of thousands of workers in automobile plants in Detroit and other centers will drop tools Wednesday morning. Unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor have set the strike for Wednesday unless their demands are granted.

Demand Poll of Workers.

These include a poll, under the supervision of the NRA, of all the workers in the industry to determine whether they desire to be affiliated with so-called company unions or join the A. F. of L., and reinstatement of men alleged to have been dismissed for unionization activity after review of their cases by an impartial board appointed by the NRA.

The automobile manufacturers have declined to deal with the A. F. of L. in any way. Coincident with today's meeting at the office of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, the chamber, through advertisments in newspapers, issued an appeal to all employés in the industry reaffirming its stand and declaring once more the industry would not yield.

In the course of the meeting here, Gen. Johnson conferred for a short time with the automobile magnates, but the strictest secrecy was maintained. When the session adjourned tonight it was impossible to determine whether it had been a peace meeting or a council of war. The only other information contained in the official statement was that it was understood by those attending the meeting that "no statement would be made as to the matters under discussion until a conclusion has been reached."

Neither upon leaving the hotel nor upon his return would Johnson make any statement. His face was grim and determined, but there was no indication either in his speech or manner what the prospects for a peaceful adjustment of the threatened conflict were.

Study Three Point Truce.

Specifically, the automobile manufacturers had before them a three point proposal for a truce from Gen. Johnson. These included cessation of strike preparations, creation of a board of review, with NRA officials presumably as mediators, to hear the grievances of workers who charge they have been dismissed for unionization activity, and a possible vote of workers in the industry to determine whether they desired to be represented by the American Federation of Labor or the company unions maintained by the manufacturers.

While the statement that "progress is being made" was taken as a possible indication that the threatened strike may yet be averted, the publication of the appeal to the employés of the industry by the manufacturers served to weaken whatever peace hopes were being entertained. Signed by 32 motor manufacturers and the Fisher Body division of the General Motors corporation, the appeal to the workers declared that "it is up to you to say whether you want to surrender to professional labor leaders your own right to deal with the management of your companies."

Calling attention to recent reductions in working hours in member plants to an annual average of 36 hours per week and wage increases of "more than 30 per cent" within the last year, the automobile chamber's statement declared that wage rates "in many cases are higher than they were in 1929 at the peak of prosperity, and that twice as many men are at work today as during the depression."

Calls A. F. of L. Unpatriotic.

"Unasked and unwanted," the statement concluded, "the American Federation of Labor is now trying to get control of this industry and destroy what we have taken years to build. Regardless of what you want, these labor leaders want the right to speak for all of you. They want dues paying members. This industry does not intend to yield to such an un-American and unpatriotic procedure."

Henry Ford, not being a member of the chamber, did not sign the statement.

Among those who attended today's meeting, in addition to Mr. Sloan and Alvan McCaulay, president of Packard and the the chamber, were Walter P. Chrysler, president of the Chrysler corporation; Roy D. Chapin, president of the Hudson Motor Car company; Alfred Reeves, general manager of the chamber, and Pike Johnson, head of the Washington office of the chamber.

VOTE FOR COMMITTEE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Racine, Wis., March 19.—[Special.]—Workers of the J. I. Case company and the Oster Manufacturing company voted today in favor of the Racine county workers committee as their bargaining committee. The Case company workers now are on strike and men at the Oster company turned to work after a strike only recently, pending the outcome of today's voting. The question of whether the employers will recognize the committee or defy the mandate of the national and regional labor boards was unanswered tonight.

Both concerns voted majorities in favor of the workers' committee which have presented the idea of vertical unions in which all employés of a company including the clerical are united in a union in contrast to the Federation of Labor organizations which are based on craft unions.

Mandatory on Employers?

A decision one way or the other must be made by the manufacturers. The vote makes it mandatory upon the companies to recognize the county workers' union, declared Maj. John D. Moore of Washington, D. C., national NRA board representative, and R. C. Jacobson, executive secretary of the regional labor board, Chicago. The election was conducted under the supervision of the two men.

Maj. Moore said he would call tomorrow morning upon Leon Clausen, president of the Case company, and John Oster of the Oster company, and present them with a statement certifying the election outcome.

In effect, it will be a notification that the bargaining committee chosen by the striking employés must be recognized.

Complain to Regional Board.

Asked what action would be taken if recognition is refused, Maj. Moore explained that first the workers' committee would make a complaint to the regional board. If the regional board's authority is denied, the complaint would be referred to the national labor board.

"The national labor board," Maj. Moore continued, "may cite to the department of justice for prosecution any employer who fails to bargain collectively with a bargaining committee chosen by a majority of his employés. Of course, that would apply to the Racine case as well as any other."

The vote in the Case election was announced as follows: There were 1,196 eligible to vote and 1,127 votes were cast. Of those, 887 voted in favor of the workers' committee, while 196 voted against it. A blank was left on the ballot to indicate any other representative choices. Just 28 voted in favor of a company union and 12 for an American Federation of Labor union. Four ballots were thrown out as improperly marked.

In the Oster election 103 were eligible to vote and 101 voted; 68 voted in favor of the workers' committee, 28 against, and five in favor of an A. F. of L. union.

RAIL LEADERS READY TO CLOSE PARLEYS ON PAY

Return to 15% Cut as 10% Is Rejected.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 19.—[Special.]—Following a conference on the labor situation between President Roosevelt and Attorney General Cummings, it was announced that the President does not intend to intervene either in the automobile or the railroad situation at the present time.

The railroad labor controversy was further complicated. The carriers announced their determination to invoke a 15 per cent cut in basic wages, as originally proposed, unless the railroad brotherhoods agree to a continuation of the present 10 per cent slash.

In response to railroad labor's refusal on Saturday to accept the wage cut continuation, which was suggested as a compromise by President Roosevelt, the railroad operators today declared they saw no point, in view of that rejection, in continuing the current negotiations.

Ready to End Sessions.

W. H. Thiehoff, chairman of the conference committee of railroad managers tersely advised spokesmen for the Railway Labor Executives' association that if labor's decision not to accept the compromise suggested by President Roosevelt were final, "it would seem that nothing further is to be accomplished by continuing this conference."

The compromise proferred by Mr. Roosevelt would call for a continuation of the present ten per cent pay cut to April 30, 1935, as an alternative to the imposition of a 15 per cent cut proposed by the carriers.

On Saturday the rail brotherhoods rejected the plan and demanded a full restoration of pre-depression wages.

The conferences between the embattled railroad operators and labor representatives are expected to be continued tomorrow in an effort to arrive at some amicable settlement of the controversy.

Denies Roads Fare Better.

Meanwhile, today Mr. Thiehoff emphatically denied labor's statement that the carriers of the country enjoyed a measurably improved financial condition during 1933. Analyzing the data set forth by the labor executives in support of this contention, Mr. Thiehoff asserted:

"The ultimate fact remains that in the year just ended the railroads which we represent operated at a deficit. As a whole they failed to earn fixed charges. You assert that the capital structure of the railroads should be readjusted, presumably so that there would be less bonded indebtedness and consequently lower interest charges; this so that the ten per cent deduction in railroad wages may be eliminated and the peak rates of 1929 restored on July 1. We cannot acquiesce in such a program as this."

Mr. Thiehoff left a door open for further negotiations with the brotherhoods, however, by asking for a statement as to whether their rejection of the President's compromise plan is actually final.

DECIDE S. BEND WOMEN SHALL DRINK AT TABLES

South Bend, Ind., March 19.—[Special.]—Women will have to do their drinking at tables in South Bend henceforth, and all night club entertainment must halt at 1 a. m., as a result of an ordinance passed here tonight by the city council.

The ordinance, which provides a $25 license fee for night clubs, stipulates that no women shall be served drinks at a bar, and that no entertainment may be provided from 1 a. m. to 2 p. m.

Regulations for night clubs here followed a long drawn out fight by the ministers, who had proposed a $1,000 fee for the resorts, with the backing of Mayor W. R. Hinkle. The ordinance as passed, however, conformed to the council's ideas of control.

Clubs and restaurants may remain open 24 hours.

BILL PROVIDING CUT IN DELINQUENT TAX PENALTIES ORDERED

Preparation of a bill providing for a reduction in penalties on delinquent taxes from 1 per cent a month to 6 per cent a year was ordered yesterday by the executive committee of the Chicago Recovery administration. The bill, which the committee intends to submit to the legislature, also will give taxpayers the option of paying delinquent taxes by instalments, providing the current 1932 taxes are paid.

In the discussion that preceded the committee's action, Michael O'Connor, chief deputy county controler, fought against the inclusion of the interest reduction provision in the measure, because appropriations in the 1934 county budget are based in part on the expectation of collecting $4,800,000 in penalties.

Members of the committee argued that the lower interest rate would result in the payment of delinquent taxes that might not otherwise be paid, giving the county the same cash return as if the higher rate were retained.

The committee also directed a subcommittee, headed by George O. Fairweather, assistant business manager of the University of Chicago, to report next Monday on progress made with the county board on placing employés of the county assessor's office under civil service.

DETROIT COUNCIL ASKS ROOSEVELT TO STOP STRIKE

Say Damage Would Be Irreparable.

President Roosevelt to do everything possible to avert the threatening strike. The subject was introduced by Council President John Smith, who declared the impending strike would do "irreparable damage to the President's recovery program."

"We thought we could see the sunshine again in the industrial world, but I shudder to think what such a strike would mean to Detroit and the entire nation," Smith said.

Washington dispatches express alarm by officials of the NRA at the evidence of unrest not only in Detroit but in St. Louis and Cleveland as well.

BLAZE SWEEPS BUILDING NEAR NEW POSTOFFICE

Damage of $25,000 was caused by a fire which swept a six story building at 550-552 West Harrison street last night, less than a block from the new Chicago postoffice.

The alarm was turned in from Canal and Harrison streets, and fear that it might be the postoffice, led to the 3-11 alarm, which followed.

According to Chief Fire Marshall Michael J. Corrigan, the fire started in the rear of the first floor rooms occupied by the Steffenson Brothers, manufacturers of screw machine products. A short circuit was thought to have been responsible.

The entire building, except for the fourth floor, which is vacant, is occupied by small manufacturing firms. Fire was confined to the first and second stories.

4 Gunmen Hijack Truck, Get $1,800 in Woolens

Four gunmen last night kidnaped Jens Olsen, 60 years old, 5249 North Moody avenue, a trucking contractor, and his helper, John Kolling, 5229 Mason avenue, and robbed them of their truck, $1,800 worth of woolens, $127 in cash, and $30 in checks. The bandits, driving a large sedan, forced the truck to the curb at 408 South Franklin street. The woolens were the property of the Ferris Woolen company, 300 West Adams street.

Mother Falls Dead; Girl, 3, Alone, Fasts Four Days

Mount Vernon, N. Y., March 19.—[Special.]—A three year old child, the daughter of Mrs. Helen Hughes Wilson, groped for four days around the lonely rooms of an apartment while her mother lay dead of heart disease on the floor. The child was weak from hunger when neighbors broke in. Neighbors said the mother drank heavily after the death of her husband last September in an automobile accident.

COMPLAINTS CITE INACCURACY IN '32 TAX ASSESSMENT

Charge Personalty Values Set by Locality Alone.

Inaccuracies in the 1932 personal property assessment allegedly due to incomplete investigation's by Assessor Jacobs' staf into the status of individuals in households has resulted in many complaints recently to the effect that the valuations were made solely on the basis of addresses. Servants and janitors, whose addresses are given in the better residential districts, have complained that they were assessed indiscriminately without regard to their actual small personal property holdings.

In one instance, taken yesterday from the records of the board of tax appeals, Miss A. E. McCormick, housekeeper for Cardinal Mundelein, was assessed $167,000 for 1932 personal property. She had given her address as 1555 North State street where the cardinal lives. Miss McCormick complained to the board of appeals, stating that she owned no personal property. George F. Nixon and Fred Brummel, the members of the board, canceled the assessment.

Mentions Similar Cases.

"There have been many other cases like this," Mr. Nixon said yesterday, "and whenever complaints are duly filed before us we do everything we can to adjust the assessments. A friend of mine told me that his personal property assessment was $55,000 and that his chauffeur and cook were assessed the same amounts, merely because their addresses were given as his home."

Other complaints filed against the assessment are that furnishings and personal effects were valued at their 1929 figures without consideration of depreciation and lower market value in 1932, and that reductions in rent in high priced apartments were not reflected in the assessment. Assessor Jacobs denied yesterday that these factors were not taken into account. He also stated that his field men had investigated addresses.

Cites 'Individual's Duty.'

"The first duty of the individual is to tell us what property he has," the assessor said, "by filling out the schedule we send him. If this is not done my appraisers must investigate the case and fix the assessment. To this assessment we add 50 per cent as a penalty.

"The complaint has been made in previous years that we disregarded sworn schedules and fixed arbitrary assessments. In the 1932 assessment, however, when our investigations showed that the individual had not scheduled all his property, we sent him a letter requesting him to call at the office to complete his schedule. This practice will be followed in the future. If he does not appear we use the assessment based on our appraisal. Recourse can then be had to the board of appeals if there was an overvaluation.

No Check on Janitors.

"By what method do you check the personal property of janitors and servants in good residential districts?" Mr. Jacobs was asked.

"Frankly, we are up against it there," he replied, "and have to use the best basis we can."

Blaine Harrison, in charge of the personal property division of the assessor's office, admitted that "there might have ben a slip-up" in the assessments on servants' and janitors' properties.

Mr. Jacobs disclosed his method of assessing the personal property of individuals living in medium priced apartments.

"If these people do not return schedules," he said, "we take 50 per cent of their yearly rent as our basis for assessing. On this we apply the 37 per cent equalization factor and then add 50 per cent for penalty.

Mr. Nixon said he knew of this method, but asserted: "That's no assessment."

In cases where individuals charge they have been over assessed but neglected to file complaints with the board of appeals, which has closed the 1932 personal property hearings, they must either pay in full or protest in court when the state's attorney files suit against them next year.

The members of the board of appeals announced yesterday that they will begin to hear complaints to 1933 real estate assessments today.

TAX COLLECTIONS.

Real estate tax collections yesterday, including those for 1933, were $1,013,763, making a total of $117,745,219 collected since enforcement of the Kerner-Skarda act began on April 26, 1933. The day's collections of real estate taxes and the uncollected taxes for four years follow:

March 19	$ 23,649	$ 45,949
Uncollected	14,890,086	40,025,501
	1930.	1931.
March 19....	$ 56,043	$ 173,334
Uncollected	63,826,169	99,131,895

The day's collections of 1929 real estate taxes totaled $711,789; of 1931 personal taxes $11,679, and of 1932 personal property taxes $373,383.

JOHN ROOSEVELT IN FINE CONDITION AFTER OPERATION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 19.—[Special.]—John Roosevelt, youngest son of President and Mrs. Roosevelt was reported tonight in excellent condition after an operation for appendicitis this morning at the naval hospital. Dr. Ross T. McIntire, White House physician, announced, "Everything is fine."

The operation, which was not of an emergency nature, was performed by Capt. Ralph McDowell, chief surgeon of the hospital. Before he left the White House, John joked with his father about the operation and was sent on his way with a hearty slap on the back.

Late in the afternoon Mr. Roosevelt went unannounced to the hospital to chat briefly with a cheerful patient. The President had been kept informed of his condition during the day by Mrs. Roosevelt, who followed her son to the hospital and remained there during the operation.

John, who is 18 years old and well over six feet tall, came to Washington for his Easter holiday Saturday from Groton school in Groton, Mass., which his father attended.

He attended the dinner in the White House that evening commemorating his parents' twenty-ninth wedding anniversary. Later he decided to undergo the operation during the vacation period.

On his third hunting expedition, today he accidentally shot and killed John Labranch, 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Labranch, a hunting companion. The gun went off as he was showing how the safety worked. Officers say the safety was defective.

HOODLUMS' UNION PLOT IS RELATED IN RACKET TRIAL

Story of Steve Sumner; State Closes Case.

BY GEORGE WRIGHT.

Steve C. Sumner, 54 years old, leader of the Milk Wagon Drivers' union, took the witness stand yesterday in the racket conspiracy trial and told of the efforts of Capone hoodlums to seize control of the $1,000,000 treasury of his union.

Shortly after Sumner gave his testimony, most of which was not heard by the jury, the prosecution rested its case. The state's presentation of evidence required 39 days. During that time 170 witnesses were questioned by Special Prosecutor Edwin J. Raber and his assistants.

Today the defense will open its side of the case with a demand for directed verdicts of acquittal for Dr. Benjamin M. Squires, economist; Ald. Oscar Nelson, Attorney Aaron Sapiro and several others of the 18 defendants. The 18 are charged with racketeering in the cleaning and dyeing, laundry and linen supply and carbonated beverage industries.

Sumner Tells His Story.

Defense objections, which were sustained by Judge Philip J. Finnegan, kept the major part of Sumner's testimony from the jury. Before the court's ruling, however, the veteran labor leader, whose vigor gives him the appearance of a much younger man, told all of his story to the judge, prosecutors and defense attorneys.

Sumner told the judge that Murray Humphreys, a Capone gang leader, indicted in the racket case but a fugitive, had boasted to him [Sumner] that the gang controled judges, the state's attorney's office, the Chicago police department, and even congressmen.

Humphreys also bragged, according to Sumner, that the gang reached into every town in the United States and Canada, and within two hours could exert enough influence anywhere to liberate any person it desired.

Veteran Eager to Testify.

Sumner, who is given credit for leading the fight that defeated gang efforts to seize his union, seemed eager to testify for the prosecution. He told with relish of refusing an offer of $100,000 to sell out the milk drivers to the hoodlums, and of fortifying the union headquarters at 220 South Ashland avenue against gang attacks.

As the beer and booze rackets declined, the Capone gang sought a place to put its army of bootleggers and settled on the milk business as a good field, Sumner said. It was about that time, he testified, that Humphreys approached him.

The testimony of Sumner while the jury was still present proceeded as follows, with Prosecutor Raber doing the questioning:

Q.—When did you first see Humphreys? A.—It was either in February or March, 1932. Frank Diamond [a relative of Al Capone] was with him.

Q.—After you talked with Humphreys, did you see Donovan? A.—Yes, about six weeks after. He [Donovan] seemed very friendly. He said to me: "Why don't you meet Humphreys and settle up your troubles and difficulties with him? You are too old a man to play that game." I said I would think it over. He said Humphreys was willing to meet me.

Defense Makes Objection.

Q.—Now tell us of your conversation with Humphreys and Diamond.

This was a question which brought Defense Attorney Benedict J. Short to his feet shouting an objection. The jury was sent from the room. Attorney Short declared that the milk industry was not named in the indictment and therefore could not be involved in the case. Judge Finnegan then decided to hear Sumner's story outside the presence of the jury.

"When Humphreys started to talk to me he said he and others were about to start the Meadowmoor dairy," Sumner began. "He said the union should let him alone for six weeks until he had the dairy filled up with customers at cut prices. He said that after six weeks we could call a strike and then he would be able to say that his organization had to pay the union scale and would have to raise the price of milk.

Sumner Denies any "Take."

"He said to me: 'All you lose is your 'take' for six weeks or two months.' I asked him what he meant by 'take' and he said 'rake off.' I told him we never took a penny from the milk dealers.

"I asked Humphreys why he was bothering us. I said we had a clean, decent union.

"Humphreys replied that the prohibition racket would soon be over and that they wanted a place to put their men. He said: 'The milk business looks good to me.'

"He told me that his outfit owned judges, congressmen, the police force, and the state's attorney's office. He said that if any of his men got in trouble in any part of the county all they had to do was to call him and they would be out in two hours."

Testimony Brings Laughter.

Sumner caused laughter in court when he said he had told Humphreys that gang gorillas would not look well on the drivers' seats of milk wagons. He said Humphreys retorted that the gang did not intend to make drivers out of the hoodlums, but to use them to collect bills and solicit trade, perhaps by machine guns and bombs.

"Humphreys told me it was no use fighting him, that his gang was in a lot of unions," testified Sumner. "I told him to leave us alone, that we paid out sick benefits and unemployment benefits to our members and that everybody was satisfied. I said that was why our members paid dues. He said: 'That's all hooey.'

"I told Humphreys that the dealers would never stand for him in the union and he replied: 'A few sticks of dynamite will take care of that.'

"He said to me: 'You're just letting a gold mine get away from you.' He also told me: 'Unions are a great thing if run right, but you are not running yours right.'"

Charges $100,000 Bribe Offer.

At this point Sumner paused in his quick fire narration and began to wait for questions. He soon resumed his story, however, when Prosecutor Raber asked him if Humphreys had said anything about the funds of the union. He testified:

"Humphreys said to me: 'You are a pretty decent old fellow, Steve, and if you step out and let us in we will pay you $100,000.' I said that was not so bad; that if I took his $100,000 and the $1,000,000 in the treasury I could get along pretty well."

Q.—What did he say to that? A.—He said: "O, no. We want the treasury. We will give you $100,000 in cash for yourself, but that is all you get." I said to him: "Nothing doing." He said: "Steve, in your time it was blackjacks and brass knuckles, but now it is machine guns and bombs."

He Fortifies His Headquarters.

Q.—After your talk with Humphreys, what did you do? A.—We fortified the union headquarters. [Armor plate was placed over the front of the headquarters and other steps were taken to protect the place from gang assault.]

This completed Sumner's story. Judge Finnegan ruled the jurors could not hear any more of it than they had already heard, because it was prejudicial and not connected with the case on trial.

Miss Roland threw her right arm to her head to protect her neck and was bitten twice. The animal was impounded for observation for possible rabies. Miss Dove, who is the wife of Robert Kenaston, a business man, expects the birth of a child soon.

PLAYBOY HABITS OF W. O. COLVIN RELATED BY WIFE

She Asks Alimony of $1,000 a Month.

The playboy tendencies of Willard O. Colvin, which carried him from party to party in Spain, in Paris, and along the Riviera, were described yesterday in the court of Circuit Judge Joseph Burke.

The story was told by Mrs. Hally McLeod Colvin, the estranged wife of Colvin, who was the heir to the estate of his father, late vice president o the W. F. Hall Printing company.

Asks $1,000 Month Alimony.

She is suing for separate maintenance for the second time, charging nonsupport, drunkenness, and cruelty. Yesterday's hearing was on her plea for $1,000 a month temporary alimony. That amount isn't excessive, she claims, because the couple used to spend far more than that on household expenses alone while living "in our magnificent 20 room house on the Riviera."

Colvin, who was on the stand later, protested that he now receives only $400 a month income from his father's estate and that consequently it would be impossible for him to pay any such alimony as his wife asks.

Calls Him a Wastrel.

Mrs. Colvin's claim is that, following the death of his father in 1928, her husband flatly declined to work, but instead became a drunkard and a wastrel.

On their last trip to Europe, according to her testimony, they were accompanied by Miss Betty Hally, one of four aunts of Mrs. Colvin, with whom she is now living at 100 E. Chicago avenue.

In the Riviera mansion, she said under questioning by her attorney, Samuel A. Rinell, the household expenses ran to $1,200 to $1,800 a month.

Mrs. Colvin testified that her husband drank himself into such a condition that he had to be treated in clinics in both France and Spain.

Admits Social Tippling.

On cross-examination by David K. Tone, Colvin's attorney, she admitted that she, too, had done some drinking, but "only in a social way."

The crisis came, she went on, when her husband deserted her in Palma, Majorca.

"Did he leave you any money?" she was asked.

"Only a few pennies. The tradespeople had been unpaid for five months, the servants for three months. I had to borrow $800 from a friend. Later my husband did send me $950, and I came back to the United States."

Colvin was intoxicated for two days before she finally left him on Feb. 26, his wife testified, and added that when she filed suit against him, deputies had to wait until he sobered up before papers could be served.

Aunt Backs Her Story.

Miss Betty Hally, the aunt, followed Mrs. Colvin to the stand and substantiated her niece's story.

"What was your share of the expense on the trip?" she was asked.

"I made his bad checks good when he was tight," she replied.

"You mean when he was a tightwad?" asked the attorney.

"No," said Miss Hally shortly, "when he was drunk."

She added that when Colvin was intoxicated, he made a habit of passing out $10 bills.

When Colvin was called he gave his address as Kenilworth and stated that he had long since dissipated the money left him by his father.

HITCH APPEARS IN SETTLEMENT OF WILLETT SUIT

Hearing Brings Hint of Disagreement.

The much publicized divorce settlement of Mrs. Grace W. Willett and Howard L. Willett, wealthy head of a trucking company, which was announced ten days ago, has not yet been settled, it became known yesterday. According to reports, Mrs. Willett is balking.

Under the agreement she was to drop her separate maintenance suit and sue for divorce. She also was to dismiss her million dollar alienation of affections suit against Mrs. Mary Cave Hall. For this she was to receive a guaranteed income of $17,500 a year for five years and a probable income of practically the same amount after that period from a trust consisting of stock in the Willett company.

Hitch Is Revealed.

Indications of a hitch in the settlement came yesterday at a scheduled hearing before Master in Chancery James P. Harrold.

This hearing was instituted by Mr. Willett some time ago for the purpose of laying a foundation for a cross bill for a divorce against Mrs. Willett. If the settlement of ten days ago were certain of being carried out there would be no need for this hearing. That it is going on is due, it was explained, to the doubt that Mrs. Willett will abide by the settlement.

Harris Fails to Appear.

The principal witness yesterday was to have been Edmund Harris Jr., Baltimore architect, who helped to build the roof garden on Mrs. Willett's penthouse at 2130 Lincoln Park West. It was planned to question him about his alleged courtship of Mrs. Willett in 1932.

Harris did not appear at the master's hearing. His attorney, John Elliott Byrne, asserted that Harris, being under federal indictment in Chicago on a charge of writing an extortion letter to Mrs. Hall, was not required to respond to the master's subpena. Attorney Jay Fred Reeve, who represents Mr. Willett, warned that if Harris does not show up in a few days contempt action will be started against him before Judge Rudolph Desort.

WOMAN ENDS LIFE BY GAS.

Buds, Birds and Bees Say Spring Is Here Tomorrow

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

Warmer weather is forecast for tomorrow to break up the current chilly spell and signs of spring are multiplying.

Flowers on poplars are ready to burst open, American ash trees are swelling and the pussy willows appear woolly, all certain signs of spring. August Koch reported hearing the song of a first robin in Garfield park, where his office as chief florist of the west parks is located.

Cherry Trees Loaded.

Cultivated cherry trees throughout the county are loaded with fruit buds which are swelling nicely, while the swelling of pear buds is a pace behind but still noticeable, Mr. Koch said. The daffodils are coming out of the ground throughout the parks, he said, and tulips, lagging, are in a few instances peeping out.

The forsythia [golden bell], whose yellow flowers properly classify as spring's first, usually makes its appearance shortly after the vernal equinox, but it will be delayed a little this year, Mr. Koch said. The vernal equinox will occur at 1:28 a. m. tomorrow, when the sun's direct rays fall on the equator at noon. This marks the official end of winter.

Bees Out For Exercise.

Bees in Chicagoland already have crawled out of their winter hives, where their winter store of honey is greatly reduced, and limbered up by indulging in their annual spring exercises. They have made three known flights in the last week or more, said C. L. Duax, 3414 South Western avenue, chief bee inspector of the state. These flights are not foraging flights, which begin a little later, but merely a product of spring wanderlust.

Any day now the queen bees are expected to begin to lay the eggs which will hatch into the spring brood of bees. Pussy willows provide the first pollen for the younger generation, fruit trees following.

Farmers in Cook county are planting lettuce, radish and onion seeds, according to O. G. Barrett, Cook county farm adviser.

1,200 Trees Planted.

Twelve hundred trees, 4 to 16 inches high, including American elm, English elm, silver maple, Norway maple, sycamore and three kinds of lindens, have been planted on the newly extended north outer drive from Montrose avenue to Foster avenue, according to Carl Poppe, Lincoln park forester. Elsewhere in the park maple trees are just waiting for a warm day to burst into flower and pussy willows are fuzzy, said Mr. Poppe.

The forest preserve's new plantings of shrubs and trees put in last fall have wintered well, due to a fairly steady cold, Capt. Charles G. Sauers, superintendent, reported. About 500 relief men will be put to work next month, he said, sodding around new parking spaces and other construction in the park. Sodding of new ditches on county highways also will be started.

March weather to date has been normal, following a cold February which averaged 22.9 degrees compared to 20.2 averaged in February, 1933, according to C. A. Donnel of the weather bureau. A normal March in Chicago averages 35.3 degrees.

Chicagoland is shy of precipitation this year, said Mr. Donnel, with only 1.96 inches since Jan. 1, 3½ inches below normal.

DOUGLAS, U. OF C., URGES BILLIONS FOR U. S. HOUSING

Paducah, Ky., March 19.—[Special.]—Gigantic housing program, financed by two billion dollars taken from profits made on gold and now held as a stabilization fund, was advocated here today by Dr. Paul H. Douglas of the University of Chicago.

Dr. Douglas told a luncheon club the housing idea was "his solution to the problem facing the government in the event industry has not absorbed unemployment after CWA ends." He added the plan had been told to officials at Washington and had been viewed "favorably."

Dr. Douglas said the "several hundred million dollars remaining" after the use of his plan would be enough for the dollar stabilization pool.

"The housing idea is a gigantic and daring experiment," he said, "but I believe it will be the only thing capable of filling in, if industry is unable to take up what CWA throws off."

A new spring "offensive" against President Roosevelt was regarded as probable by Dr. Douglas. He said it would be greatly like that of last fall when "opposing newspapers and Wall street attempted to whip him—and for a while thought they had him down. But they didn't."

NEW AIR MAIL BILL IN SENATE; FOR SUBSIDIES

O'Mahoney Has Substitute for Roosevelt Idea.

BY JOHN HERRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 19.—[Special.]—Growing dissatisfaction over the administration's air mail policy came to the surface today within the ranks of the President's own party.

A new bill which would junk the formula suggested by the President and place air mail immediately on the basis of railroad mail was introduced in the senate today by Senators Joseph C. O'Mahoney [Dem., Wyo.], George McGill [Dem., Kas.], M. M. Logan [Dem., Ky.], and John E. Erickson [Dem., Mont.].

The measure was introduced while the senate postoffice committee, preparing to conclude its open hearings on the administration bill, listened to witnesses attack the President's plan to punish the big operators formerly holding contracts and open the mail routes to small independent companies.

O'Mahoney Aid of Farley.

The introduction of the new bill carried a double significance. It came from Democratic members of the postoffice committee and it had as its chief sponsor Senator O'Mahoney, who until recently was first assistant to Postmaster General Farley.

Under the plan proposed by the four senators, air carriers, like rail carriers, would be required to transport such mail as was offered them by the postoffice department.

"What I suggest is not in any sense a condonation of fraud in the past," Senator O'Mahoney said. "It is a new system designed to preserve to the American people the aviation system they have bought and paid for."

Overlooked During Fight.

The senator said two primary factors had been overlooked in the turmoil surrounding the air mail controversy.

"The first," he said, "is that the government has been paying subsidies to certain aviation companies in the guise of compensation for carrying the mail, and the second that these companies have used that subsidy as an instrumentality for establishing a practical monopoly of all branches of aviation.

"The vice of the subsidy has been that under the present law the postoffice department could pay it to one company and refuse it to another." Senator O'Mahoney continued, "This opened the door to gross favoritism and made possible the establishment of monopolistic control.

Few Control Aviation.

"The result has been that a comparatively few persons have been enabled to shape the development of the entire aviation industry for their own personal profit through the use of the subsidy and through stock market manipulation.

"It seems absolutely clear to me that if the government is to pay a subsidy it should not do it through competitive bidding in the guise of paying for service rendered to the postoffice department.

"The postoffice is a business institution. It should be managed as such and it should not be made the vehicle for the payment of subsidies.

"The department is entitled to have the mail carried at a reasonable cost. Therefore it seems to me that the government should require every airplane carrier to transport mail when offered by the postoffice department, just as the government requires every railroad to do.

"The airplane carrier, like the railroad, should receive a reasonable compensation for this service based upon costs.

"If aviation needs a subsidy that should be paid on a different basis through the department of commerce or some other agency and it should be paid in accordance with a definite principle of law and not according to the discretion of any executive officer. In other words, no favoritism should be possible in the distribution of the subsidy. It should go to all alike."

Under Federal Control.

The bill advocated by Senator O'Mahoney and his three colleagues would place carriage of the air mail under the regulatory authority of the interstate commerce commission. The postmaster general would be required to file with the commission recommendations for a plan for air mail transportation and rates of pay. Those rates would go into effect immediately and would be paid until such time as the commission determined new ones. Should the new rates fixed by the commission be higher, the difference would be paid retroactively to the carriers.

In some features the new bill resembled the administration measure, but its provisions as to reorganization of the old contract holders were far less drastic. No carrier would be eligible to carry the mails which controled, through ownership of 20 per cent or more of stock, any company engaged in any phase of the aviation industry. Interlocking directorates would be prohibited. And no company would be eligible to carry mail "which has as any officer or director any person who has heretofore entered into any combination to prevent the making of any bids for carrying the mails."

Other Witnesses Heard.

Among the final witnesses to appear before the postoffice committee were Paul Goldsborough, president of International Radio, Inc.; Pilot Harlan Hull of Kansas City, president of the Pilots' Association of Transcontinental and Western Air, and Crail Hunter, vice president and general manager of Northwest Airways.

As head of the radio system maintained by the former mail carriers, Mr. Goldsborough was especially vigorous in his condemnation of provisions in the administration bill seeking to outlaw the old companies and let in small independents. The smaller companies, he said, were incapable of giving adequate service. Particularly would this be true, he pointed out, if—as the bill would permit—contracts were let to companies not now even in existence, but which might be formed in order to make a bid.

"If this bill is passed," he said, "the recent experience with the army air corps will be a pleasant memory in the light of what will happen."

Claims Pioneer Right.

Vice President Hunter of Northwest Airways argued earnestly in defense of the companies whose contracts were canceled. It was L. H. Brittin, former executive vice president of Northwest Airways, who was found guilty of contempt by the senate recently in connection with the air mail investigation. Brittin served ten days in jail.

Mr. Hunter maintained that the air mail operators in flying their former routes had "acquired a pioneer right to those routes just as tangible as the claim of the railroads to their right of way."

BANDITS MENACE FOUR WOMEN.

Four women employes of the American Printers' Roller company at 1342 North Halsted street were compelled to lie face down on the floor yesterday by three young bandits who took $100.

Find Air Lines Still Flying Mail and Express Packages

New York, March 19.—[Special.]—Despite the abrogation of all air mail contracts and the subsequent grounding of the army air corps, the commercial air mail flyers of the nation have continued to fly letters and packages, it was revealed today.

The large users of the air mail system made an exhaustive study of the postal regulations and became satisfied that no law existed which prohibited the hiring of an airplane company or any other messenger from posting letters at distant points. Consequently those users of the air mail systems have sent their parcels of sorted mail by air express over the regular commercial air lines since the army mail flyers were grounded on March 10.

Almost coincident with the grounding of the army pilots the air express poundage of the air lines increased by leaps and bounds, it was revealed. On several lines the increase has been as high as 120 per cent since March 10. The cargoes were put in charge of the Railway Express agency and the ultimate distribution of the items shipped was kept secret.

Postal Officials Secretive.

A bulletin by First Assistant Postmaster W. W. Howes was reported to have been issued on March 11 amending Article 1710 of the postal regulations covering the situation, but local postoffice employes and executives denied knowledge of the order.

Harlee Branch, second assistant postmaster general, said in Washington that any report of shipment of the lighter mail loads of the country over the commercial air lines was untrue. At the same time he added that on March 12 C. B. Eilenberger, third assistant postmaster general, ruled that if letters were sent bunched as air express, the full air mail rate must be charged on each letter so dispatched.

Rates Vary by Quantity.

The rate for air express on the commercial lines between New York and Chicago varied between a minimum charge of $1.25 a package, to 30 cents a pound in units of more than twenty pounds and commensurately on other lines in proportion to the distance covered, whereas the rates for air mail carrying under government contract prior to Feb. 19 varied from 86 cents a pound to $1.25 a pound for cargo carrying.

In his statement tonight, Assistant Postmaster General Branch declared that the practice of shipping such mail in bulk for postage at a distant point must be stopped. The air express agents, however, gave no indication that they had any intention of discontinuing the shipping of bulk mail so long as the shipper used the required amount of postage on each letter packed in the shipment.

Officials of the air lines, acting as agents of a common carrier, denied liability in so far as they were officially ignorant of the contents of the packages shipped over their lines by express. They said that until some further action by the postoffice department is taken that they would continue to accept express shipments, regardless of instructions at destination.

TALK OF AIR MAIL 'SUBSIDY' DECRIED BY RICKENBACKER

Says Only 3 of 17 Postal Services Really Pay.

Detroit, Mich., March 19.—[Special.]—"By implication and by direct statement the stigma of 'subsidy' has been attached to domestic air mail," Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker declared tonight before the Society of Automotive Engineers.

"The impression has been very definitly given," the war ace asserted in his discussion of "The Net Cost of Air Mail," that the service "is one of the most unprofitable of the postoffice department's operations, if not, in fact, the most unprofitable.

"Such charges are false.

"In the first place, in addition to its miscellaneous operations, only three out of the postoffice department's seventeen services are conducted on a profitable basis. Those three are first class mail, special handling, and postal savings. The two latter services account for an operating profit of only $2,551,000. All the other fourteen services result in deficits.

Third Class Deficit.

"In reviewing those deficits it is shown that the deficit for domestic air mail is well down the list as to size and proportion of the total deficit of the department. The greatest deficit is for second class mail and amounted to $88,203,000 for 1933, which was equivalent to 30.18 per cent of the total deficit.

"The next largest deficit was for fourth class mail and amounted to $32,316,000, equal to 29.38 per cent of the total deficit. The deficit for third class mail was the third largest, equivalent to 25.72 per cent of the total deficit, and amounted to $28,297,000. Foreign mail accounted for the fourth largest deficit, which was $26,433,000, and equivalent to 24.08 per cent of the total deficit.

Service o' Three Sorts.

"There is never any mention of the second class mail subsidy. The railroads are not required to carry that mail at rates equal to the postage, nor is the public required to pay postage equal to the carriers' rates.

"Therefore it seems most unreasonable that the deficit of domestic air mail should be held up to the public as the one big subsidy, when actually, on a service or pound-mile basis, that deficit at the time when the contracts were canceled was about one-third of the deficit of the second class mail service.

"Moreover, while practically all of the other services of the postoffice department render the public one service and one only, the payments of domestic air mail help to keep going a transport system on which the public itself may travel and ship those goods too large for mailing."

He cited, too, defense value.

Additional Planes Are Made Ready Here.

BY WAYNE THOMIS.

Army air mail service authorities here yesterday hinted that the skeleton schedules now flown on the mail routes by army pilots will be supplemented within a few days by the addition of a number of routes and increased daily trips on existing routes. It was anticipated that the service will be increased on Wednesday when Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of army air corps, returns to his headquarters in Washington.

An indication that the army plans to expand the routes upon which they now fly in the central zone at least, was evidenced in the concentration of ships at the headquarters in the 33d division, Illinois National Guard hangar at Chicago airport yesterday. In addition to the Curtiss A-12 attack ships [Wright Cyclone 675 horse power motor] which are now in use on the transcontinental routes, there were a number of observation craft.

Awaits Word from Foulois.

Lieut. Col. Horace Hickam, commandant of the central air mail zone, refused to confirm the rumored expansion, asserting that orders for new routes would come from Gen. Foulois, who yesterday was completing his personal inspection tour of the mail service in Atlanta. Col. Hickam asserted, however, that between 10 and 12 of the Douglas T-3B [Wasp 450 horse power motors] and the Thomas-Morse O-19 [Wasp 450 horse power motor], normally observation ships, would be used on new routes "when they are opened."

Use Attack Ships for Speed.

At the present time, the colonel said, the army is using the low wing Curtiss attack planes exclusively because their cruising speed is 160 miles an hour with the military load removed and light mail burdens, as compared to the observation crafts' cruising speeds ranging from 125 to 140 miles an hour.

Last evening eight planes had landed and departed as the army carried on under the new schedules at the Municipal airport. However, all loads were light, averaging 60 to 70 pounds of mail to the plane. Postoffice officials explained that since the service did not start until midnight, Sunday, the accumulations of mail from the west coast, which ordinarily are a large part of the cargo of eastbound planes from here, had not materialized.

Full Service Today.

Not until today will the service actually be in full operation, since the new schedules did not call for departure of Pacific coastal planes until so late yesterday that they had not arrived here last evening. Only from Atlanta yesterday was there word that scheduled departures were not made. Low ceiling and poor visibility due to heavy rainfall, clouds and fog, caused cancelation of a northbound trip scheduled at 1:30 p. m.

Fine weather prevailed along the transcontinental runs and trips were being made on scheduled time. The new radio equipment installed in all the attack planes, taking the place of the "command" radio sets with a range of only 10 miles, which were used for military service, was aiding in the schedule maintenance, pilots reported.

AIR MAIL VICTIM'S FUNERAL WILL BE HELD IN SIOUX CITY

Sioux City, Ia., March 19.—(AP)—The body of Harold G. "Scotty" Richardson, army air mail flyer killed in a test night, was to arrive about midnight tonight from Fort Warren, Wyo. It will be accompanied by Lieut. C. B. Collier of Wyoming. Funeral services will be held at the Morningside Presbyterian church Tuesday afternoon. Masons will have charge of the funeral. The widow was visiting her parents in Sioux City when news came of the flyer's death.

Negro Robber Killed in Battle with Policeman

A Negro identified as Benjamin Harold, 27 years old, 5220 Federal street, was shot and killed in a gun fight last night with Policeman Sylvester Washington of the Wabash avenue station. Washington, who is also colored, caught Harold holding up a white man in front of 5121 South State street. Harold fired five times at Washington. The policeman returned four shots, hitting Harold. The robber died in the Bridewell hospital.

Shotgun Robbers Hold Up Dearborn Street Drug Store

Four robbers, one carrying a sawed-off shotgun, menaced several employes and patrons in the Maborn drug store at 1100 North Dearborn street last night and escaped with $150. The robber carrying the shotgun wore a red stocking cap and a slipover sweater. Saul Nachenburg, 3307 Douglas boulevard, manager of the store, notified police.

FIRE CAUSES $5,000 DAMAGE.

Three families were driven from their homes when fire broke out in a drug store on the first floor of a three story building at 2600-2604 North Halsted street early yesterday, causing damage of $5,000.

U. S. TO SEE IF IT CAN BUILD OWN NAVY AIRPLANES

Washington, D. C., March 19.—(AP)—Word that the administration plans to experiment in the building of its own naval aircraft to see if it can take some of the private profits out of war equipment reached congress today as conferees resolved differences between the senate and house over the half billion dollar naval construction bill.

The conferees compromised on a plan providing that not less than 10 per cent of the more than 1,000 planes authorized in the bill shall be constructed in government plants.

At the same time it was authoritatively reported that the budget bureau soon would send an estimate to congress of $4,000,000 for extending the naval aircraft factory at Philadelphia to carry out the experiment.

At the present time all army and navy planes are constructed in private plants; only experimental craft and parts have been produced in the few government airplane shops.

BRITAIN EASES UP IN CAMPAIGN TO GET FACTOR

Ambassador Says He Will Not Press Matter Now.

Great Britain will not demand the immediate extradition of John Factor on charges of swindling British investors of $7,000,000, according to word received in Chicago yesterday from Washington.

This development was the result of a conference in the capital between Sir Ronald Lindsay, British ambassador, and Secretary of State Cordell Hull. Dispatches from Washington quoted Sir Ronald as saying after the conference that he would not press for Factor's extradition at this time and would transmit his decision to Chicago lawyers representing the British crown.

Chicago Hearing Delayed a Day.

Meanwhile in Chicago a motion pending before Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan to discharge a writ of habeas corpus and place Factor in jail pending his return to England was continued until this morning. The delay was granted so that the outcome of the Washington conference might be learned before further action is taken here.

G. Gale Gilbert, counsel for Factor, told Judge Sullivan that the wealthy speculator is still needed here to wind up his fight against the Touhy gang which kidnaped him for $70,000 ransom last July. The pending appeals of Roger Touhy and three of his henchmen who are in prison serving 99 year sentences may make it necessary for Factor to appear as a prosecution witness again, Attorney Gilbert said. He declared this opinion is also held by State's Attorney Courtney.

Overmyer Demands Action.

Franklin R. Overmyer, representing the British crown, told the court that he wanted action in the matter in return for the patience shown by the British government while Factor was appearing against the gangsters. United States Attorney Dwight H. Green then suggested that the hearing be deferred until today.

Factor, accompanied by a guard from the state's attorney's office, was his usual natty self in court. He is at liberty on a $50,000 bond.

"I don't see why I should lie around in jail while I'm waiting," he said later. "I'm in technical custody now, you might say. There's always a guard with me. I've never made any attempt to run away in the three years since the extradition matter was started."

Keenan Praises Courtney.

Meanwhile a letter of praise for the prosecution of the Touhy gang was received by State's Attorney Courtney from Assistant United States Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan, who has been designated by the President to stamp out kidnaping.

"I have observed with considerable ratification the efficient and complete victory of government under your direction in the speed and vigorous prosecution of the kidnapers of John Fact r," the letter read. "I hope that you will continue to perform this much needed service for your community."

Washington dispatches quoted Mr. Keenan as saying there was no doubt that Factor should be kept in this country for the time being.

NAMED HERE AS ROBBERS, 2 FACE MILWAUKEE TRIAL

CRIMINAL COURT.

Clarence Bailey, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in the penitentiary; Albert Caponetto and Joe Caponetto, burglary, sentenced to 1 year to life each in the penitentiary; Joseph Stackwiski, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 10 years in the penitentiary by Judge Harry B. Miller.

Judge Grover C. Niemeyer in the Criminal court yesterday ordered Joseph O'Brien, 60 years old, and William Hunke, 40 years old, both ex-convicts with long records, turned over to the Milwaukee, Wis., authorities to stand trial there for the $20,000 robbery of the home of Miss Cecilia Dix, 2471 Graham street in that city, on Jan. 8.

Miss Dix, who was bound and gagged by the two robbers who broke into the house safe, identified the two men in Judge Niemeyer's court yesterday as the holdup men. Orville Jecklin, an accomplice, who is under arrest in Milwaukee, is said to have named the two men as the actual robbers.

Although the robbery occurred in the Dix home at 9:30 o'clock in the morning, Dr. Francis B. Wilford, 4167 South Halsted street, testified at the habeas corpus hearing yesterday in the Criminal court that he had treated O'Brien for rheumatism in his office on that day between 11 o'clock in the morning and noon.

Evanston Sells Warants, Stays on a Cash Basis

Evanston has sold $324,000 of its 1934 tax warants, maintaining the city on a cash basis and within its budget appropriations. This was announced last night at the city council meeting by Ald. Herbert Simpson, chairman of the finance committee.

JURY CALLS WOMAN SHERIF 3 TIMES ON DILLINGER'S ESCAPE

Mrs. Lillian Holley, woman sheriff of Lake county, Indiana, was called before a special grand jury at Crown Point yesterday on three different occasions in connection with the investigation into the escape from the jail of John Dillinger, the outlaw.

The nature of Mrs. Holley's testimony could not be learned. She had already appeared twice before the grand jury to explain all she knew about the prison break which has provoked a political scandal in Indiana.

The only other witness during the day was Kenneth Houk, a deputy sheriff, who sometimes acted as a guard and who was one of those in the jail when Dillinger made his break for freedom.

At Indianapolis, Gov. Paul V. McNutt yesterday invited the special grand jury to investigate his parole of Dillinger from the state prison in May, 1933, on a charge of robbery. He charged that political opponents are attempting to make campaign material out of the Dillinger case.

THIRD DILLINGER AID ON TRIAL AS SHERIF'S SLAYER

State May Call Piquett as Witness.

Lima, O., March 19.—(AP)—Two surprise legal manuvers, one each by the state and the defense, took the trial of the Dillinger gangster, Russell Clark, out of the doldrums of jury picking today.

First Clark's attorney, Clarence C. Miller, objected to the whole proceedings on the ground that Clark does not believe in capital punishment.

After the objection had been overruled, the state disclosed a plan to call as a witness Louis P. Piquett, Chicago attorney who came to Lima Saturday to represent Clark—and who faces a charge of attempted bribery and disorderly conduct.

County Prosecutor Ernest M. Botkin said late today he intended to subpoena Piquett as a rebuttal witness for appearance Friday. Piquett was an attorney for the Whittier of Crown Point, John Dillinger.

Two Others Face Execution.

Clark is the third Dillinger gangster to go on trial here in as many weeks. Harry Pierpont and Charles Makley already have been found guilty and given death in the electric chair for killing Sheriff Jess Sarber when Dillinger was liberated from jail here Oct. 12. Clark is charged by the state with being a member of the raiding party that night. The state asks the death penalty in his case, too.

Attorney Miller appeared for Clark after Piquett found himself in jail over the week-end because of a few statements he made in a hotel and to a police officer.

In arguing his objection, Miller pointed out that Judge E. E. Everett had excused 27 prospective jurors because they did not believe in capital punishment.

The attorney contended that since jurors in the case will all believe in capital punishment in opposition to Clark's views, the defendant will not be receiving a trial by his peers as guaranteed in the constitution, state and national. Judge Everett overruled the objection without comment.

In Court Short Time.

Clark made only a short appearance in court today as Judge Everett granted a postponement requested by defense counsel shortly after the session opened. He smiled briefly when he saw his mother, Mrs. May Clark of Detroit, and then returned to the stolid expression which he has worn since being returned here from Indiana state prison.

Mrs. Clark said she would testify that Clark was in Detroit last Oct. 12 when Sheriff Sarber was shot to death vainly trying to hold Dillinger as his prisoner.

Judges to Suspend Shyster Lawyers in Criminal Court

The judges of the Criminal court yesterday adopted a rule under which lawyers who are unethical or dilatory in their conduct of cases will be disciplined. The penalties are to be suspension for a definite period from practicing in the Criminal court, suspension forever, or a recommendation for disbarment. The disbarment recommendation would be made to the Chicago Bar association.

The new rule, No. 22 in the list of regulations of the court, was adopted at the regular weekly meeting of the judges. It was drafted and recommended by a committee composed of Judges Donald S. McKinlay, Walter P. Steffen, and Harry B. Miller.

Public Resentment Cited.

Aside from the growing general resentment against a class of criminal lawyers who are able to abuse legal processes and protect criminals because the lawyers are officers of the court, the immediate cause for the action was said to be the recent experiences of several Criminal court judges.

Chief Justice Philip J. Finnegan declined to discuss any particular cases that led to the adoption of the rule, but he said it would be strictly enforced.

Frank J. Loesch, president of the Chicago Crime commission, called the action a step forward in the administration of justice. John D. Black, president of the Chicago Bar association, said the rule was a "good thing."

Provisions of the Rule.

Under the new regulation the Criminal court judges may suspend any member of the bar from practice before the court for malconduct. Malconduct is defined as any of the following:

1. Conduct exhibiting a lack of honesty or good moral character.
2. Conduct of any other description that manifests a lawyer's unfitness for the confidence or trust of the court.
3. The persistent engaging in unfair practices tending to delay or embarrass the disposition of causes in the court.
4. The persistent employment of unfair methods in the examination of jurors and witnesses after judicial warning has been given to desist from such practices.
5. Conduct contemptuously disrespectful to the court.

Basis for Action Described.

The rule says that a judge's own observation in court or a complaint in writing sworn to by a person acquainted with the facts, and this person's subsequent testimony as to the lawyer's conduct, may be the basis for entering a rule ordering the attorney to show cause why he should not be suspended from practice.

After considering the answer to the rule to show cause, a judge may suspend the offending lawyer from practice in his court.

If the offense is sufficiently serious the lawyer may be suspended from practice in all branches of the Criminal court. Before this is done, however, a judge must refer his complaint to the chief justice, who will grant the lawyer a hearing before a majority of the judges. If they approve the suspension it would then become effective throughout the Criminal court.

The power to suspend attorneys is considered by jurists to be inherent in any court, but previously only the Circuit and Superior courts had similar rules and these controled only lawyers in civil cases.

DRIVERS LACKING '34 LICENSES FACE ARRESTS TODAY

With the assurance that he really "means business" this time, Police Commissioner Allman issued the warning yesterday that motorists who haven't purchased 1934 state and city licenses will be arrested on sight today.

"We've given everybody sufficient time to get the new licenses," he said, "and I'm getting tired of this fooling around. Arrests will begin."

Posting of a bond of $10 for each of the licenses missing, will be required, he said, and the cases will be handled in the traffic court. It was recalled that the first campaign of arrests late in February resulted in a million dollar run of business at the collector's office.

FALLS FROM PLATFORM, DIES.

Jacob Halek, 61 years old, 1407 South 61st court, Cicero, was fatally injured yesterday when he fell five feet from a platform in the yards of the Chicago and North Western railroad at Crawford avenue and Kinzie street, where he was employed.

PRESIDENT ASKS 12 BANKS TO AID SMALLER FIRMS

Bill Introduced; Message Is Forwarded.

make loans which the credit banks, under strict banking rules prescribed by the federal reserve board, would or could not make.

The administration bill for the creation of "credit banks for industry," as they are to be called, sets up the method of forming the banks and authorizes the federal reserve board to prescribe regulations for their operation. It is provided that branches and agencies may be set up in other cities within a district as becomes necessary.

The boards of directors of the credit banks shall be constituted in accordance with regulations, and shall be selected by the common stock holders subject to the approval of the federal reserve board. A majority of the directors in each bank shall "be actively engaged in its district in some industrial pursuit."

Powers of Banks Fixed.

Fixing the powers of the banks, the bill provides:

"Each credit bank shall have power to discount for, or purchase from, any bank, trust company, mortgage company, credit corporation for industry, or other financing institution operating in its district, obligations having maturities not exceeding five years, entered into for the purpose of obtaining working capital for any established industrial or commercial business; to make loans or advances direct to any such institution on the security of such obligations; and to make commitments with regard to such loans or advances on the security thereof, including commitments made in advance of the actual undertaking of such obligations.

"Each such financing institution shall obligate itself to the satisfaction of the credit bank for at least 20 per cent of any loss which may be sustained by the credit bank upon any of the obligations acquired from such financing institution, the existence and amount of such loss to be determined in accordance with regulations of the federal reserve board.

Five Years' Loan Limit.

"In exceptional circumstances, when it appears to the satisfaction of a credit bank that an established industrial or commercial business located in its district is unable to obtain requisite financial assistance on a reasonable basis from the usual sources, the credit bank may make advances to, or purchase obligations of, such business, or may make commitments with respect thereto, for the purpose of providing it with working capital. No obligation shall be acquired or commitment made hereunder with a maturity exceeding five years.

"Any credit bank, subject to regulations prescribed by the federal reserve board, may assist in developing and effectuating plans for the reorganization or refinancing of any such business and in connection therewith may act under proper appointment as receiver therefor or in any capacity similar thereto, when it appears that the services of the credit bank would be helpful in order to place the operation of such business on a sound and economical basis."

At the outset, the credit banks will be financed through the federal reserve board. The bill provides that the federal treasury shall purchase from each reserve bank the stock it has acquired in the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation, and that the reserve bank shall pay an equivalent amount into the credit bank.

The credit banks are then empowered to issue and sell preferred stock as authorized by the directorates. The banks are also permitted to issue notes, debentures, bonds or other such obligations, for the repayment of which all the credit banks shall be jointly liable.

The aggregate amount of such obligations to be outstanding shall not be more than five times the aggregate capital and surplus of all the credit banks. The United States government assumes no liability whatever for any of the obligations of the banks. The obligations shall be tax exempt.

Fees Must Be Public.

An unusual clause in the bill reflects the new policy promulgated by President Roosevelt to prevent politico-lawyers from collecting fees for obtaining favors from the government.

The clause stipulates that any one receiving a fee for procuring any loan or other favor from a credit bank must file in writing with the application the amount of his fee and all the facts pertaining to his employment. Failure to do so would be punishable by a year's imprisonment or a fine of $500 or both. If any officer of a credit bank violated this clause he would be held personally liable for any loss or damage sustained by the bank as a result of the transaction.

Roosevelt's Message on Banks

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 19.—[Special.]—The President today sent the following letter, suggesting the creation of twelve credit banks for industry, to the chairmen of the senate and house committees on banking and currency:

"May I suggest to your committee legislation to create twelve credit banks for industry.

"I have been deeply concerned with the situation in our small industries. In numberless cases their working capital has been lost or seriously depleted. This condition should be remedied.

"We have afforded much aid in the recovery of agriculture, commerce, our larger industries and our financial institutions, and our improved condition nationally furnishes full justification for these efforts. We must continue in behalf of the medium size man in industry and commerce.

Makes Study of Situation.

"With this purpose in mind I have discussed with the treasury, the federal reserve board, and the Reconstruction Finance corporation a comprehensive study of the situation in the smaller industries and the presentation of a plan which would show their condition and furnish relief for it.

"A nation-wide survey has been made by them. Information has been obtained from 4,958 banks and 1,066 chambers of commerce covering three points: First, the probable amount of working capital required now by smaller industries; second, the number of employes who would be retained by these industries if working capital is afforded them, and third, the number of new employes that can be taken on by them through such supply of working capital.

Estimates 700 Million.

"Estimates based on this survey indicate that approximately 700 million dollars of such working capital is required; that such working capital may continue in employment some 346,000 employes and may furnish new employment to some 378,000 men and women.

"While these estimates in their nature cannot be definite and must be considered as estimates only, they indicate the urgent need of these small industries for working capital.

"The administration will be glad to furnish you such information and assistance as you may desire in order to set up the machinery to supply this need.

Details Coming Later.

"The details will be presented to you, but I desire to call attention to two prominent features: First, the matter of caring for the small or medium size industrialist; second, the control of the proposed banks by directorates a majority of which will themselves be industrialists.

"I will appreciate early consideration by your committee and by the congress, as I feel that the situation disclosed calls for immediate relief and that such situations as can be relieved through the medium of working capital should have our earnest support."

OIL CODE'S VALIDITY TO BE ARGUED BEFORE U. S. SUPREME COURT

Washington, D. C., March 19.—[Special.]—The validity of prominent features of the national recovery program will be argued for the first time before the Supreme court, according to an order entered by the court today taking jurisdiction in a Texas oil case.

The government has brought the case, which is an appeal from the recent order of District Judge Bryant of the federal court for the eastern district of Texas, sustaining a demurrer to indictments charging oil well operators with conspiracy to violate the code for the petroleum industry and regulations issued by the oil administrator under the NRA.

Judge Bryant upheld the demurrer on the grounds that sections of the code and regulations are "invalid and unconstitutional and illegal and not sustained by the national industrial recovery act."

It is expected that the paramount issue will be the power of the government under the statute and code to regulate local transactions, such as oil production.

HOUSE PASSES SILVER BILL BY 257 TO 112 VOTE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 19.—[Special.]—Congress today spanked Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. for his views on silver and for saying that sponsors of silver legislation "were not wholly disinterested."

Suspending their rules so that they could vote on a bill permitting foreign purchasers to pay for American farm products in silver, the house of representatives passed the bill by the smashing vote of 257 to 112.

In the senate, meanwhile, Senator William E. Borah [Rep., Idaho] was demanding that Morgenthau be specific in his charges against advocates of silver legislation, and Senator Burton K. Wheeler [Dem., Mont.] was flaying the treasury head for his latest moves on silver.

Secretary Modifies Stand.

Late this afternoon the congressional spanking seemed to be bringing results. Secretary Morgenthau, who previously had declared that there was no need for silver legislation at this time, modified his stand by saying that the treasury's monetary plans are "on a 24 hour basis."

Secretary Morgenthau also announced before the congressional bombardment started that he will send Prof. James Harvey Rogers, Yale member of the monetary brain trust, to China to study how silver prices may be manipulated to improve trade with the orient.

In addition, Secretary Morgenthau reiterated his explanation that in referring to silver advocates as "not disinterested" he had not meant to include members of congress. He said that a list of speculative silver holdings which he had had compiled contained the names of no senators or representatives or any one connected with their offices.

Rebuke to Morgenthau.

Passage of the Dies silver bill by the house came as a direct rebuke to Secretary Morgenthau. Speaker of the house Henry T. Rainey [Dem., Ill.] allowed it to be called up under a suspension of the rules because of Morgenthau's stated opposition to silver legislation and his implied criticism of silver advocates.

Coming up under special rules, the bill needed a two-thirds majority to be passed and actually received 11 more votes than was necessary. It provides for a board composed of the President and the secretaries of commerce, agriculture, and the treasury.

This board is to negotiate with foreign nations for the exportation of American farm surpluses, accepting silver coin or bullion in payment and buying up the products for export with silver certificates issued against this bullion or coin. The board may further set a price on silver up to 25 per cent in excess of that prevailing in world markets. The bill has yet to go to the senate.

Action Double Barreled.

The senate's denunciation of Secretary Morgenthau was double barreled. Senator Wheeler called the sending of Prof. Rogers to China "the height of asininity." He charged that the mission was a deliberate attempt to postpone action on silver and that Prof. Rogers had a prejudice against silver.

Senator Borah and Senator William H. King [Dem., Utah] backed up the warning that Rogers' trip was a stall to delay silver legislation. They also threatened to force Morgenthau to divulge the information behind his statement imputing speculation to silver advocates.

Morgenthau appeared this afternoon to be reluctant but not unwilling to reveal the list of silver speculators. He has not refused to do so, saying only that he was not yet ready to take any action.

Defends Prof. Rogers.

He sprung to the defense of Prof. Rogers, saying that he had no prejudices on silver and that he would not have been picked if he had. To the senators' charges that all silver data had been collected, Secretary Morgenthau retorted that he was sending a man whom he and President Roosevelt trusted to find the facts on a controversial subject.

PETITIONS SEEKING TO OUST HUEY LONG HELD 'DEFAMATORY'

Washington, D. C., March 19.—(AP)—Louisiana petitions, attacking Senator Long of that state and seeking his ouster from the senate were barred from consideration in a report filed today with the senate by its judiciary committee which termed the documents "scurrilous and defamatory."

These petitions, including one signed by former Gov. John M. Parker of Louisiana, had been referred to the judiciary committee by the senate elections committee with a request for a ruling on whether they were receivable and privileged for publication.

The judiciary committee held that the petitions should not have been received and that they were not privileged for publication other than discussions of the charges on the floor of the senate.

Other petitions, seeking ouster of Long and his colleague, John H. Overton, filed with the elections committee have been declared by that group to contain charges not supported by facts sufficient to justify action on the part of the senate, and the judiciary committee held the same to be true of the petitions it reported on today.

Advised in New Orleans of the developments Long said:

HOUSE RECEIVES TARIF REPORT; 9 IN MINORITY

Washington, D. C., March 19.—[Special.]—The formal report of the house ways and means committee on the President's reciprocal tariff bill was filed in the house late today by Chairman Doughton. The measure will be taken up on the floor later in the week. The committee's report was accompanied by a dissenting brief written by Representative Treadway of Massachusetts, ranking minority member, and subscribed to by all nine Republican members of the committee.

The Republican broadside against the tariff plan is based on the ground that it is unconstitutional and strikes at the heart of the President's own recovery program by permitting the entry of cheap foreign made goods and further depressing agriculture.

The minority report points out that the total exports of the United States fell from $5,241,000,000 in 1929 to $1,676,000,000 in 1933, while imports fell from $4,399,000,000 in 1929 to $1,449,000,000 in 1933, in stressing the fact that quick action is necessary to restore trade.

"During recent years," the report says, "the world has been experiencing a period of acute economic stress and suffering accompanied by and to a large extent resulting from alarming shrinkage of world trade. Many economic and monetary causes have contributed to this result. Primary among these is the almost universal existence of high trade barriers built up in a frenzied effort to gain a so-called 'favorable balance of trade' by shutting out foreign goods in disregard of the inevitable effect upon those branches of production which depend upon a world market."

TWO BROTHERS BOOKED IN AUTO SWINDLE INQUIRY

Three Others Held in Quiz; Work on Indictments.

Two men were booked last night and three more were held on charges in connection with State's Attorney Courtney's campaign against racket groups that have defrauded insurance companies by means of faked automobile thefts.

Those accused of obtaining money under false pretenses and conspiracy were A. S. Van De Houten, 4440 West Monroe street, and his brother, Fred. The two brothers, according to Prosecutor Mal Coghlan, filed claims four times for insurance on a stolen car—reported to be the same car in each instance.

Three Held Without Booking.

The three held without booking were Alex Finder, 38 years old, 4511 North Central Park avenue; Morris Byster, 2109 W. Grand avenue, and his brother, George, 2317 West Division street. Finder is one of the several members of the Finder family questioned concerning forty-seven claims for insurance on stolen or burned automobiles in recent months. Evidence indicated that the Byster brothers had claimed insurance on a stolen car which is still in their possession.

All others questioned in the investigation were released yesterday.

Need Week for Inquiry.

First Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert F. Crowley said that the evidence in the investigation was so complicated and bulky that most of this week would probably be consumed in an inquiry before testimony could be presented to the grand jury. Indictments may be asked late this week or early next week, he said.

Another circumstance which interested the state yesterday was discovery of the fact that the Van De Houtens are related by marriage to Berenice Van De Houten, who was given much publicity a year ago as the woman whom Terry Druggan visited on "absences" from Leavenworth penitentiary. Mrs. Van De Houten was the divorced wife of Edward, one of the Van De Houten brothers. The prosecutors could not say whether this circumstance had any connection with the present investigation.

Service Bureau Mentioned.

If the central auto service bureau, established a year ago by automobile insurance underwriters as a weapon for use in the war against the automobile theft and stripping racket in Chicago, had been used extensively by both insurance companies and police, the situation which has caused the present investigation would not have arisen. This was the expressed opinion yesterday of J. A. McClelland, insurance man, who was a member of the committee which helped to work out the plan of the bureau.

"If all salvaged automobiles were put through one central bureau," Mr. McClelland declared, "the theft and stripping of automobiles would be greatly reduced and automobile insurance rates reduced." Neither police nor insurance companies have cooperated fully in working for the success of the bureau, other insurance men declared.

The bureau at 24th street and Prairie avenue was established as a concentration point where stolen automobiles would be taken after their recovery. It was intended to act in competition with the fences through whom strippers sell their stolen goods.

CZECHS REFUSE TO JOIN IL DUCE'S NEW ALLIANCE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, March 19.—Czechoslovakia will not join the Italian-Austrian-Hungarian bloc, it was declared at the Czech foreign office today. Premier Mussolini's speech yesterday aroused the government's ire. Foreign Minister Benes will reply to Mussolini in the name of the little entente [Jugo-Slavia, Czechoslovakia, and Rumania] on Wednesday.

Speech Angers France.

PARIS, March 19.—(AP)—French official circles viewed today yesterday's speech by Premier Mussolini as a direct thrust at France and a reopening of old Franco-Italian sore spots in colonial territory. Government leaders reserved comment, but it was known they were upset by Il Duce's "abandonment of the diplomatic language" which has prevailed in the last two or three years.

A wave of criticism in the French press greeted Mussolini's demands for Italian expansion in Asia and Africa. Le Temps, describing the Mussolini spirit as one of "Fascist imperialism," said France received a "warning" in the speech. The Journal Des Debats asserted that "Mussolini is unchanged."

Dance Director Sues for $125,000 from Jack Oakie

Hollywood, Cal., March 19.—[Special.]—Jack Oakie, movie star, was sued for $125,000 today by Marty Martin, dance director, who accuses Oakie of calling him a "blackmailer" and "shakedown artist." He charges Oakie asked "how did you feel yourself among decent people?" in the presence of Cary Grant, Virginia, Cherrill, Charlie Farrell, Virginia Valli, Randolph Scott, Buster Crabbe, and other movie notables at Carl Brisson's party last night. Martin says Oakie also said, "I'd gladly pay ten grand to get the chiseler out of the way."

EXPLAINS BILLS TO PUT U. S. ON TRAIL OF GANGS

'After Big Fellows,' Says Cummings.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 19.—[Special.]—"We are after the big fellows," Attorney General Homer S. Cummings said today as he appeared before the senate finance committee where bills are pending designed to increase federal authority to apprehend and punish gangster criminals.

The attorney general declared that the armed forces of gangdom outnumbered the 200,000 men in the army and navy of the United States. He argued that the only way to cope with certain modern forms of crime was to increase the federal power.

He said it was time to replace make shifts with efficient laws. He explained that the department of justice had been forced to meet the demand for federal help by resorting to the income tax laws, the postal laws, and even the anti-trust laws, in order to gain jurisdiction over criminals.

Keenan Appears Before Group.

"We need more authority in order to punish these roving bands of criminals which slip over state lines in their terrorization of the country," the attorney general said.

He was accompanied before the committee by Assistant Attorney General Joseph Keenan, who has been assigned to make a specialty of matters dealing with gangsters and racketeers. Answering the questions of committee members, General Cummings said:

"The various gangs split up the territory in which they operate. They maintain what might be called diplomatic relations with one another. Their incomes are enormous, so a fine of a few thousand dollars means nothing.

Asks About Dillinger.

"They differ in degree of ferocity. The Touhy gang, for instance, cuts off the ears and noses of its victims. Obviously they are more savage than Al Capone or his successor, Murray Humphreys."

Senator Arthur R. Robinson [Rep. Ind.] wanted to know whether the legislation now under consideration would, if it had been in effect, given the federal government jurisdiction over John Dillinger. Attorney General Cummings explained that it would.

"The department of justice has a bill now before the committee," he said, "which would make it a federal offense for a person to cross a state line in order to avoid prosecution or in order to evade having to testify."

"They ought to have left Dillinger in Arizona," said Chairman Henry F. Ashurst, who hails from that state.

It Might Have Been.

"I agree," said Senator Robinson of Indiana, with feeling.

Another bill requested by the department of justice would make robbery of a national bank a federal offense, the attorney general pointed out.

"Had that measure been enacted into a law, then we could have taken Dillinger, and I assure you he would not have got away," said Attorney General Cummings.

Dear Shopper:

Smashes "Honest Weight" Exhibit and Goes to Jail

Accused of smashing a display window at 106 West Randolph street, where City Sealer Joe Grein had an exhibit of weights and measures, Harry Clark, 24, of 1644 West Madison street, was fined $25 and sentenced to serve 90 days in the Bridewell yesterday. Mr. Grein told Judge Elliott that Clark was one of a gang which had been harassing him because of his drive on "short weight" house to house salesmen.

U. S. CONSUL WITH HEN, 2 CATS, DOG EXCITES MOSCOW

MOSCOW, March 19.—(AP)—Bringing a prize winning chicken, two cats and a dog, along with 17 pieces of luggage, Angus I. Ward of Chassell, Mich., arrived in Moscow today after a 12 day trip from Tientsin to take up his duties as United States consul. He was accompanied also by his wife.

Ward, with a heavy black Van Dyke beard and wearing a brown beret, created a sensation when he alighted from the tran-Siberian express with perhaps the most startling array of "baggage" ever arriving in the Red capital, outside of a circus.

Further surprise was caused at the Hotel Savoy in which the Wards took up temporary headquarters in a suite of two rooms and bath, occupied also by their four pets. Privately the manager raised his hands in disapproval, but he greeted the couple with bland smiles as the miniature menagerie was taken upstairs.

"We simply could not leave them behind, they mean too much to us," said Ward, smiling.

LIFE OF INSULL PERILED; STORM BATTERS SHIP

Fear Fugitive Might Get a New Heart Attack.

servants declined to permit an entry into the place.

The Orient express, bound northward, on which it had been reported she might go to Paris tonight, left without any sign of her aboard.

The American minister, Lincoln MacVeagh, said the legation has no knowledge of what steps the American government may be considering or may take in case Insull's ship puts in at any port in another country.

"The matter is now out of our hands," he said.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, March 19.—If Samuel Insull believes he can sail the seven seas without fear of detection, he is doomed to disappointment.

The tramp steamer Maiotis, which is carrying the fugitive to a new hideout, will be easily recognized by passing vessels.

No sailor in the world would pass that boat without establishing its identity.

The Maiotis was built in 1888. Besides having antiquated lines, she has stumpy masts and a high thin funnel. The freighter has hardly any superstructure.

Insull Only Passenger.

Another detail is inescapable at sea. It is the fact that the Maiotis sits so high out of the water. She lies almost like a punt. She carries no ballast and no cargo. Insull is the ship's only passenger. The crew consists of officers and 16 seamen.

Some section of the Greek press insist Insull's destination is Monaco —reputedly arranged through Sir Basil Zaharoff.

Zaharoff, the mystery man of Europe, armaments salesman superb, and a strong influence in Monte Carlo, due to the fact that he financed the lean days of the Casino during the world war, is one of Insull's oldest friends and a former business associate. The two men met through the late T. P. [Tay Pay] O'Connor of London.

The only hitch is that the prince of Monaco is under strong influence from Paris, and the French, with the vivid memories of the late Serge Stavisky, might not want Insull as a neighbor.

George Pop, one of Insull's lawyers, today sent a letter of thanks on the fugitive's behalf to former Minister of Interior John Moundjourides. Moundjourides was forced to resign after Insull's secret flight last Wednesday.

Gale Sweeps Marmora.

ISTANBUL, March 19. — (AP) — A turbulent sea and the year's worst windstorm await Samuel Insull if he heads toward the sea of Marmora. The small, vicious Marmora takes a heavy annual toll of wrecks during such south wind tempests as prevailed today. However, Insull's ship, the Maiotis, is no stranger to the Marmora's dangers, being a veteran freight carrier between Greece and Black Sea ports.

Faces Arrest in Syria.

BEIRUT, Syria, March 19.—(AP)—The provisional arrest of Samuel Insull should he try to land here was said in authoritative quarters tonight to be virtually assured. The question of his coming to Syria was not officially raised, reliable sources said, but the door nevertheless will be shut to the fugitive former utilities executive.

Port Said Bars Insull.

PORT SAID, Egypt, March 19.—(AP)—The authorities here issued an order that Samuel Insull would not be allowed to land if he heads for Egypt. The Maiotis is expected to arrive here Tuesday evening but, in view of today's ruling, it is expected that it will proceed right on to the Persian gulf.

Insull Finds Cost of Dodging American Justice Comes High

He—or his friends—already have paid at least $20,000 to cover all expenses attendant to his present search for a new refuge.

Staying in Athens a year and a half cost Insull from $60,000 to $80,000, according to the most reliable estimates.

Not a Big Spender.

Most of that amount was used to finance his fight against extradition to the United States. He was not a big spender in the night life district or on the beaten tracks of wealthy American tourists, but he distributed a fortune in the places where it counted most, protecting himself from the long arm of American justice.

A big share of what he paid out went to his lawyers who won him two court verdicts against extradition and to his doctors who were in constant attendance and who on at least two occasions prevented him being deported by testifying that he was too sick to travel.

For the dirty, slow moving tramp steamer Maiotis he has paid a price that ordinarily would make him the master of a first class yacht.

Police intercepted a telegram to London mentioning a $7,500 payment to the owner of the Maiotis. From other sources it was learned that $10,000 was paid for the Port Said trip with the agreement that, should Insull decide on a perpetual life at sea, he could make additional payments of $5 a day for board and lodging.

New Lawyers Get $10,000.

His two newest lawyers, who helped him get away, are expected to receive $5,000 each for their services. Couriers and others involved in arranging the sea voyage were an added expense.

Attorneys Ladis and Rhallis, who fought his case for him in the Greek courts, are believed to have received at least $15,000 each.

Insull never floated a new utilities issue with more meticulous care than he prepared his secret flight from Greece. It was revealed today that the only member of his household staf who had his confidence was a friendly maid.

On Wednesday, the day Insull departed, his cook prepared his evening meal as usual. The French maid carried it to Insull's room just as if he were there, ate the meal herself, and took the tray back empty.

Travels Cost Money.

Insull himself, with his hair and mustache dyed, had fled to Piraeus and boarded the Maiotis.

That kind of traveling costs money. Well informed quarters place Insull's expenditures for late 1932 and the year 1933 at the hotels Petit Palais and Grande Bretagne in the neighborhood of $15,000, not counting what was spent in hiring cars and messengers.

For the rent of the Kouryoumdjoglou apartment, where he had lived in Athens, it is likely that he spent about $2,500, the cost of the year's lease.

His staf of servants is reputed to have received many gifts in addition to their wages.

More than $10,000 is believed to have reached the hands of various doctors who examined Insull privately from time to time.

Paid Large Sums to Agents.

Agents and other persons here who aided him during the course of the year and a half are believed to have obtained large sums.

These estimates do not take into consideration the likelihood that highly paid agents represented him in other countries nor the recent indication that a firm of London lawyers also has been acting for him.

There is no evidence that he contributed to any Greek charities or that he financially aided any cultural or archeological undertakings in Greece. In fact, some circles in Athens were outspoken in expressing disappointment and dissatisfaction over the ways in which he spent his money.

It was recalled that he refused overtures to invest money in the British power and light company in Greece.

CANADA AMENDS EDICT ON RETURN OF MARTIN INSULL

Specifies the Charges He Shall Be Tried Upon.

BY CHESLY MANLY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TORONTO, Ont., March 19.—Counsel for Martin J. Insull, former utilities magnate who is awaiting removal to Chicago to stand trial on embezzlement charges, today made certain that he will not be accused of stealing more than $364,720.

Charges involving this amount, as allegedly abstracted, were upheld by the Supreme court of Ontario last Friday. Sitting in chambers this afternoon, white bearded, nonagenarian Sir William Mulock, chief justice of Ontario, privy councilor of England and knight commander of the Order of SS. Michael and George, approved an amended order presented by Insull's lawyer, J. C. McRuer.

Acts on Petition for Writ.

However, the chief justice, who sat with Justice Masten, explained that the court had merely acted on a petition for habeas corpus and not on an appeal from the extradition commissioner's warant, and that its order could therefore serve only in an advisory capacity.

Justice Masten suggested that the order be attached to the commissioner's warant and that both be forwarded to Ottawa for the guidance of the minister of justice when he prepares his warant of surrender.

"Our only interest here is in getting the order in such form that Mr. Insull will not be forced to stand trial, except on the charges with respect to the theft of $20,000 and $344,720," said Justice Masten.

Lawyer Pleads for Speed.

The application for Insull's extradition had accused him of larceny and embezzlement of approximately $500,000 from the Middle West Utilities company and the Mississippi valley companies. But under the treaty he can be tried only upon those charges sustained by the Canadian courts, and until this provision is assured he will not be delivered up to American authorities.

Attorney McRuer reflected something of Insull's reputed anxiety to get out of jail when he urged upon the learned justice the necessity for dispatch.

"Perhaps Justice Kingstone will amend his warant of commitment and expedite matters," suggested Sir William.

"Yes, my lord, I shall see him at once," McRuer replied.

Relaxes Hunger Strike.

Even with this expedient, however, it will take two or three days to get out the warant of surrender.

Insull received no visitors today, and attendants at the Don jail, where he is incarcerated, said there was no departure from the usual routine. His hunger strike, started yesterday when the menu consisted of gruel, stew and rice, was said to have been relaxed somewhat today. Insull picked at some jam and bread while sipping his tea.

BURNED ON STOVE, DIES.

Felix Colarek, a teamster, of 3241 East 92d street, fell asleep beside a hot stove in his barn a week ago. His clothing caught fire. Yesterday he died of the burns.

1934 PAYMENTS OF INCOME TAX DOUBLE YEAR AGO

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 19.—[Special.]—Income tax payers' dollars rolled into the treasury today at almost double the pace of last year.

Collections from the income tax on March 16, the day after the returns were in, amounted to 62 million dollars this year, compared with 36 millions on the same day a year ago. Thus far in March income tax payers have paid 125 million dollars, as against 70 millions a year ago.

Hope for 250 Millions.

Hopeful of collecting 250 million dollars before the month is out, the treasury was pleased today as the taxes passed the half way mark. Tax payments will continue to be reported from the field as taxpayers' checks are cashed by regional collectors.

Treasury experts credit most of the increase in tax payments to better business conditions during 1933. Part of the increase, however, they admit to be due to the fact that the banking holiday was tying up payments a year ago. Last year the treasury was finally forced to postpone the deadline for returns from March 15 to March 30.

Gain Over 1933 Already.

The increases in the income tax today helped push the total of all federal revenues up to 2 billion 163 million dollars. This is more than was collected in all of the last fiscal year, and the present year still has three and a half months to run.

Last fiscal year all revenues aggregated 2 billion 80 million dollars.

More important than the mounting income taxes, in bringing about the general revenue increase, have been the new taxes imposed since last year. These levies include processing and liquor taxes.

ENDS "BIG ADVENTURE."

Robert Wilson, 12 years old, returned to his home at 219 West 72d street late Sunday night from a woods near Hammond where he had been camping without parental permission for three days. Cold weather took all romance out of a life in the wilderness, he said.

INSULL RECEIVER FRAUDS CHARGED IN HOUSE INQUIRY

Committee to Hear About Transit Fees.

BY JOSEPH ATOR.

Former Corporation Counsel Samuel A. Ettelson yesterday carried his charges that receiverships of Insull holding companies were instituted through fraud and collusion before the congressional subcommittee investigating federal court receiverships.

Attorney Ettelson has made the same charges recently before Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley, who appointed the federal receivers in the Middle West Utilities, Insull Utilities, and Corporation Securities cases. His appearance before the congressmen yesterday was by invitation, and at an executive session. Representative Tom D. McKeown [Dem., Okla.] chairman of the subcommittee, explained that the secret hearing was ordered because Judge Lindley still has under advisement the motions to invalidate the three receiverships.

15 Statements Gathered.

George F. Cummerow, investigator for the committee, has gathered statements of more than 15 persons concerning receivership cases which have never been made public. These statements have been incorporated in the committee's records, and some of the witnesses may be asked to appear later.

The subcommittee will hold its first public session of its present Chicago appearance this morning, when it goes into the receiverships of Chicago local transportation companies, some of which have been pending in the federal courts since 1926. The hearing will be held in the courtroom of Judge John P. Barnes in the United States courthouse.

The necessity for payment of an estimated $1,500,000 in fees to receivers and attorneys during the life of the receiverships is to be the subject of the inquiry. Receivers of the transit companies, including the two large street car companies operated as the Chicago Surface lines and the Chicago Rapid Transit company, the "L," were appointed by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson.

Double Salaries Paid.

It was brought out several years ago that for some time after the receivership proceedings were instituted some of the receivers and their attorneys were receiving double salaries, approved by the court. The late Henry A. Blair, then head of the Chicago Surface lines, for a time got $60,000 a year as receiver and an equal sum as head of the Chicago Railways company, owning the north and west side street car lines.

It was announced yesterday that subpenas for appearance before the subcommittee have already been served upon Attorneys Sidney C. Murray, James G. Sheean and Walter L. Fisher, Guy & Richardson, James Simpson and several auditors for the transit companies.

Attorney Murray filed the original petition on behalf of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company in 1926, when the Chicago Railways company was thrown into receivership over a $87,000 claim. Attorney Sheean has been a street car company attorney for years and Attorney Fisher, long special counsel for the city in transit matters, is now serving by appointment of Judge Wilkerson as coordinator in an effort to bring about local transportation unification.

Other Cases on Docket.

Mr. Richardson is president of the Surface lines and Mr. Simpson, now chairman of the board of the three former Insull operating utility companies, was chairman of the citizens' committee which drew up the transit unification plan in 1929.

Witnesses in the traction receivership cases will be examined for the subcommittee by Attorney David K. Tone. Attorneys Wiley W. Mills, former alderman, and Henry M. Ashton yesterday held a brief conference with the committee on the traction matters before it.

Couple Wedded but Deny It; Sail All Over Sea to Prove It

New York, March 19.—[Special.]—The steamship Colombia docked today. Somebody said: "Well, captain, have you still got the 'marriage holiday' couple aboard?"

"They are gone," chortled Capt. David T. Smith. "They were with us on board from Feb. 12 to March 9. I thought we'd have them with us for the rest of our shipping lives."

The couple were Elise Goldring, a modiste, and Elias Saiet, a French merchant. They pretended for fun that they were single and booked separate cabins on the Colombia. It didn't prove to be fun either for them or for Capt. Smith.

They boarded the ship at Port Au Prince, Haiti, bound for Cartagena, Colombia. At Cartanega they told immigration men that they really were married.

The inspectors said that they had made false declarations by announcing themselves as single. No Cartagena would not have them.

Up to New York came the couple aboard the Colombia. They had $5,000 in cash and didn't seem upset. At New York immigration inspectors were dubious. They ordered the couple deported. When the liner started south the Goldring-Saiet wedding holiday pair were aboard.

Presently they were back at Port-au-Prince. Again immigration men refused to let them land. Marriage licenses are serious matters with these officials.

They didn't see why a married couple should take separate cabins.

The couple began to tire of the fun. They sent a courier ashore. He found their marriage certificate in an old trunk. He ran up the gangplank with it, thrust it in M. Saiet's had and had to run off, for the ship's whistle was blowing.

With no time to appeal, the couple thus had to stay on the Colombia and continue to Cartagena. Again immigration officials raised skeptical eyebrows. A lawyer was hired. The couple were allowed to go ashore. The case still is pending.

"I was glad it turned out so well," Capt. Smith said. "First they wanted to be independent, single people, but the unromantic laws were against them. And when they finally proved they were man and wife the laws were against them again."

BIG OHIO LAWYER, ILL, BRAINS WIFE AND KILLS SELF

Cleveland, O., March 19.—(AP)—As a climax to a nervous breakdown, one of Cleveland's most prominent attorneys, Robert R. Newcomb, 61 years old, hacked his wife to death with an ax while she slept early today, and then committed suicide by slashing his throat with a razor.

Returning a verdict of murder and suicide, Coroner A. J. Pearse asserted two other persons in the Newcomb home, who were asleep at the time, were lucky to have escaped. They were Millard, 35 years old, one of the couple's two sons, and Mrs. Mabel Warner, aged mother of Mrs. Newcomb.

A maid discovered the tragedy in the home in fashionable suburban Cleveland Heights. As Coroner Pearse reconstructed it, Newcomb went to the basement about daybreak to get the ax. It was new and still bore the original price tag.

Son Finds Mother.

Returning to Mrs. Newcomb's bed room, he struck her on the head with the blunt end several times. Placing the ax beneath the bed, the lawyer then went back to the basement and cut his throat.

Mrs. Myra Johnson, the maid, discovered Newcomb's body when she went to the furnace room. Her screams summoned Millard, who was with her when the death of Mrs. Newcomb also was discovered.

Millard, who has a brother, Robert B. Newcomb Jr., in New York, said his parents retired about 11 p. m. last night, apparently in harmony.

The lawyer had been treated several weeks for his nervous breakdown, the second he had suffered in 15 years. His brother, Adrian G. Newcomb, said he had never given any indication of violence.

Enthusiastic over Wilderness.

A member of the law firm of Newcomb, Newcomb & Nord, the suicide victim was also a doctor of medicine. He was president of the Cleveland Campfire club which sponsored friendly relations between this and Canadian cities.

Newcomb was an enthusiast for the wilderness sections of Canada, and frequently visited his camp near Temagami, Ont., accompanied by his wife.

Born in New York, Newcomb came to Ohio at an early age. His law firm, for many years was closely interested in the affairs of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainment. At one time he was a regular contributor to the Canadian Comment, a Toronto magazine.

Funeral services for Mr. and Mrs. Newcomb will be held Wednesday. Their bodies will be buried here side by side.

BAR BEER SELLING BILL FULLY LEGAL, KERNER TELLS HORNER

Springfield, Ill., March 19.—(AP)—Attorney General Otto Kerner today held that the bill permitting the sale of beer over bars in Illinois was constitutional and that the form in which it is drawn is legal. His report was made to Gov. Horner who has indicated he would veto the bill when it reached his desk.

The liquor control act as passed by the legislature banned bars except for service.

Later the legislature passed a measure by Representative Thomas Sinnett, Rock Island Democrat, and John Devine, Dixon Democrat, permitting the sale of beer but not of liquor over bars. The governor opposed passage of the bill.

Curley, Former U. of C. Grid Player, Sued for Divorce

Robert E. [Bob] Curley, quarter back on the University of Chicago football team eight years ago, was sued for divorce yesterday on the grounds of cruelty. The bill, filed in behalf of Mrs. Margaret Fox Curley, charges that Curley deserted her five years after their marriage in 1927.

ALCOHOL DEATHS IN NEW YORK HIT 12 YEARS' LOW

New York, March 19.—[Special.]—Deaths from alcoholism in New York state dropped during January to the lowest point in the last twelve years, the state health department reported today.

The low death rate of 3.1 per 100,000 population would appear to indicate that the repeal of prohibition has encouraged sobriety.

In 1933 the deaths from alcoholism in New York City totaled 703, or 9.57 per 100,000 population. This compared with 687 deaths in 1916.

To Employees of the Automobile Industry

The American Federation of Labor and other outside unions are trying to force you to join their union and pay dues to support professional labor leaders.

They are trying to destroy the present satisfactory arrangement between you and the management under which your right to collective bargaining is fully recognized.

These employee representation plans — which the labor leaders call the company unions — have been set up by more than 80 per cent of the employees themselves. They are working satisfactorily. Any one of you can see his supervisory officer at any reasonable time and settle any questions that may arise. Most of the questions that have come up have been peacefully settled.

No one has to join any union. Your employment does not depend on your membership or non-membership in any organization. It depends on merit alone. The outside labor leaders are trying by force, by coercion, by intimidation of you and your families and threat of strike to make you join their union. Regardless of what you want, these labor leaders want the right to speak for all of you. They want dues-paying members.

But the NRA does not say that the American Federation of Labor or any other union shall speak for you.

It is up to each one of you to decide for yourself whether these outside unions can secure any right that you cannot secure for yourself.

It is up to you to say whether you want to surrender to professional labor leaders your own right to deal with the management of your companies.

To get what they want, regardless of what you want, the American Federation of Labor is using its usual weapon, namely a threat to call a strike.

Sunday's newspapers quoted William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, as saying: "The question as to whether a strike in the automobile industry involving more than 100,000 workers shall or shall not occur on Wednesday morning, March 21, rests with the automobile manufacturers. Their decision will decide the question. The cause of the strike is directly traceable to the attempt of the automobile manufacturers to impose company unions upon their workers and to force them to accept."

That is not the issue.

You know that the companies have not coerced you into employee representation plans.

You well know that you have taken part voluntarily in setting up employee representation plans.

You know, too, that hours have been shortened voluntarily to an annual average of 36 hours per week, that wage rates have been increased more than 30 per cent within the past year and in many cases are higher than they were in 1929 at the peak of prosperity and that twice as many men are at work today as during the depression.

Whether the automobile industry is to be run by the American Federation of Labor or any other outside unions;

Whether you have to get a union card in order to work in these plants;

Whether your job and your advancement in the industry will be based on merit;

Whether the employee representative shall be ousted in favor of outside labor leaders who have interests to serve other than your interests.

If the strike comes, it won't be because you want to strike.

The strike threat comes from the federation of labor and not from the automobile workers.

Let there be no misunderstanding as to the companies' attitude toward the automobile representation plans.

The automobile manufacturers intend to abide by the employee representation plans as they may be modified from time to time by the employees themselves.

And bear this in mind, the automobile industry is unquestionably leading the way back to prosperity. People are buying more automobiles than they have been for years.

This increased demand means more jobs at good wages—not only in the automobile industry but in thousands of other industries supplying materials and parts to the automobile manufacturers.

A strike at this time will not only work hardship on you and your families but will interfere with the recovery efforts of the President of the United States.

The automobile industry has reached its present state of high efficiency, low cost, with the consequent wide demand for its products, high wages and plentiful jobs without the help of the American Federation of Labor and without any serious labor trouble.

Unasked and unwanted, the American Federation of Labor is now trying to get control of this industry and destroy what we have taken years to build. This industry does not intend to yield to such un-American and unpatriotic procedure.

UNIFIED TRANSIT PLAN IS GIVEN TO JUDGE WILKERSON

Seup Will Be Submitted to Bond Committees.

A ified transit system for Chicago came step nearer yesterday when a compted draft of the reorganization plan as presented to Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson, in whose court the stface and elevated lines are in receivship.

Thelan provides for unifying the two trnsit systems. If it is approved by all parties concerned, actual consolidatin under the 1930 franchise ordinance is expected to be completed next Agust.

Attorey Walter L. Fisher, traction expert, who presented the plan to Judge Wilkerson, also revealed that preparions have been made to establish universal transfer system between he surface and elevated lines as soons the city council assures extensio o July 31 of the time in which the 192 ordinance may be accepted by the ompanies. The present time limit isMay 3.

Pln to Go to Committees.

Judge Wilkerson has set tomorrow for the ntering of an order authorizing submission of the reorganization plan to he 14 bond and stock protective committees of the transit companies. The committees will have 30 days to ccept or reject the program.

Mr. Fsher asked that the court tomorrowalso enter an order for the expenditur of money for improvements necessay to the universal transfer system.

He further told the court that the reorganization plan, as worked out is acceiable to most of the security groups except on two points. One of thes is the program for outlay of initial new capital, and the other is the metiod of appointing the trustees for the common stock voting trust who wil control the operation of the consolidted company.

The ieport of these remaining two points of contention aroused Judge Wilkerson who said:

"If there is no agreement on these points soon, that's the end of it. Every time this matter comes up, some one throws in an obstacle and wrecks the whole thing."

Control Is Main Issue.

Control of the proposed unified comp ny seems to be the main issue of ttention. The understanding has bn that the surface lines interests wo to appoint three of the five trustees and the elevated lines interests wero name the other two.

Of he three surface lines trustees one is to be named by the Chicago railwa first mortgage group, headed by A.y. Harris of the Harris Trust and Sings bank; and one by the Chicago ty railway first mortgage group, aded by Frank M. Condon, a vice prident of the First National bank.

Thesewo groups, under the proposed pl would name the third surface lines ustee, but there is reported to be opsition to this arrangement among tholders of junior securities of the stt car companies.

BOY ANDITS ROB VICTIM OF AUTO, MOEY AND GUM

Berwyn, a lesman, and robbed him of his car, wrist watch, $118 in cash and three ckages of chewing gum. They climb into his car when he stopped for red light at Jackson boulevard a Green street. One of the boys wed a pistol and commanded in high treble: "Drive straight ahe and don't look around." They forced im to drive to Blackstone avenu and 52d street where they put him out of the car.

Mrs. Agnes Flimmons, 55 years old, died in her home at 201 Arthur avenue, Brookfield early yesday from the effects of lye which she swalwed last Thursday, apparently with suicil intent.

Proposed Allotment of New Transit Securities

The subjoined table shows what the investor will get in securities of the proposed new Chicago Local Transportation company for each $1,000 bond of various classifications in the old companies under the plan presented to Federal Judge Wilkerson yesterday by Walter L. Fisher. For instance, the table shows that the holder of a $1,000 first and refunding 6½ per cent mortgage bond of the Rapid Transit company, due July 1, 1944, will get $150 in series A mortgage bonds of the new company, $275 in Series A refunding income bonds, $375 in Series B refunding income bonds, and 5.41 Class A stock participation certificates (designated in the table as P. C.) of $25 par value. On each $1,000 first mortgage bond of the Chicago Railways company (north and west side surface lines) $250 has been paid, and $100 has been paid on each $1,000 first mortgage bond of the Chicago City Railway company (south side surface lines) and the Calumet and South Chicago Railway company (also south side lines):

DOCTORS REVEAL HER MIXED DIET, ALL HARDWARE

Woman Includes Pins, Tacks, Glass.

New York, March 19.—[Special.]—The astonishing results of an operation performed on a woman patient at the Kings County hospital were made public today. Physicians reported that 1,203 separate items of hardware were removed from the stomach of Miss Mabel Wolf of Brooklyn. She is recovering from the operation and, with prolonged rest and a more orthodox diet, is expected before long to be well.

Mixed Diet of Hardware.

The items removed included tacks, nails, screws, pins, beads, wire, glass, and bolts. They were swallowed, according to her story, in a single week five years ago. She then was employed in the hardware department of a Manhattan department store.

"I guess I did it to be funny," she explained today.

144 carpet tacks.
2 chair tacks.
1 roundheaded thumbtack.
3 thumbtacks [ordinary].
46 small screws.
6 medium screws.
80 large screws.
1 hook-shaped screw [coat hanger].
30 small bolts.
47 larger bolts.
3 picture hooks.
3 nuts.
2 large bent safety pins.
1 small safety pin.
2 stray pins without heads.
1 matted mass of hair containing screws and pins.
59 asserted beads.
4 pieces of wire.
89 pieces of glass [all sizes].

She Had Some Pains.

Miss Wolf, a thin, dark haired woman, 40 years old, said after eating those things she has had recurrent pains but always successfully treated them with patent medicine until a week ago when the pain became so acute that she called a doctor. He ordered her immediately to the hospital where several examinations were made.

An X-ray was taken and the plates revealed the internal hardware shop.

Miss Wolf wa sinterviewed later, the questions and answers being:

"When did you eat the hardware?"
"Five years ago."
"For how long?"
"All in one week."
"Why did you?"
"I don't know, unless it was to be funny. Don't question me any more. I want to forget it."

She turned to a doctor—"please give me one good meal."

MAYOR'S COMMITTEE APPROVES PLANS FOR INVITING U. S. TO FAIR

Plans to extend invitations to practically every persons in the United States to visit the World's Fair this summer were adopted yesterday by the executive committee of Mayor Kelly's "Keep Chicago Ahead" movement at a meeting in the Palmer house. The committee proposes to expend $500,000 in promotional work for the Fair and for the city.

Mayor Kelly will broadcast an invitation over a nation-wide radio hookup on March 28. The plans contemplate other broadcasts and advertisements in national publications. Through the air, mail, and publications the committee intends to get its invitation to every resident of the 48 states. Headquarters, in charge of Brooks H. Beltler, have been established in the Conway building.

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

BERLIN, March 19.—The Vossische Zeitung, one of the oldest and best known German newspapers and for generations political and intellectual exponent of the house of Ullstein, is threatened with extinction. It is reported publication will cease before May 1. Vossische—"Aunt Voss," as it is popularly and affectionately known in Berlin—was founded in 1704.

DAIRY PRESIDENT ROBBED.

Four robbers seized the Jeffers Dairy company office at 4225 Division street yesterday and took $325 from the president, M. Weinberg.

WARNS POLICE TO HAVE WARANTS IN GAMING RAIDS

Contempt of court citations against police who continue to make gambling raids without proper search warants, were threatened yesterday by Chief Justice John J. Sonsteby of the Municipal court.

The judge made his statement in a letter to Commissioner of Police Allman and complained bitterly that the illegal raids were seriously embarrassing the judges of the Municipal court.

Commissioner Allman had a telephone conversation with the chief justice, but declined to comment on it. Several more raids were made during the day, however.

In Judge Elliott's court forty-one defendants were dismissed because of the lack of search warants. Two alleged keepers of gaming houses were fined $50 and costs each, increasing the total convictions to 4 out of 184 arrests in the present campaign.

18 STUBBORN STRIKE LEADERS ONHUNGERSTRIKE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BARCELONA, March 19.—You can lead a Spanish labor chief to the council chamber, but you can't make him negotiate. Eighteen of them proved that here tonight when they went on hunger strike rather than continue trying to settle the gas and electricity workers' strike.

They resumed negotiations this afternoon with the employers' delegates after several futile attempts to settle the strike previously. By dinnertime they had got no place and decided they might as well go home. But Minister of Labor Barrera of Catalonia had other ideas. He wanted the dangerous strike settled and informed the negotiators that they could not go home until they had settled it. The labor men refused to eat. The employers ate.

ADVANCE TICKET SALES FOR FAIR REACH MILLION

Expect 5 Million Will Be Sold Before Opening.

BY EARL MULLIN.

Advance ticket sales for the 1934 Century of Progress Exposition yesterday reached the one million mark. Officials predicted an advance sale before the opening date, May 26, on the present showing, of nearly five million admissions.

With the advance sale for the 1933 Fair starting on Nov. 15, 1932, total sales at the end of April amounted to only 500,000 tickets. When the Fair opened its gates total advance sales amounted to 2,250,000 tickets, with most of the sales being made the last two weeks in May. This year the advance sales campaign has been under way only two weeks, being held up by delays in legislation at Springfield.

Officials Are Optimistic.

M. M. Tveter, controler of the Exposition, gave credit for the heavy advance sales to railroads, banks, hotels, stores, and public utilities organizations, which this year started their advance sales as soon as the legal action was out of the way, whereas last year advance sales depended primarily on the Fair organization. One store, which in 1933 sold 3,000 tickets in the pre-Fair period and 3,500 during the summer, this year purchased 100,000 tickets in a block and sold 10,000 the first week.

With the ticket outlook so promising and a total of only 15,000,000 paid admissions necessary to make the 1934 Fair a paying proposition, officials yesterday were optimistic. In 1933 more than 28,000,000 paid admissions were recorded despite the apparent lack of interest before the Fair's opening.

State participation, which with foreign participation has been one of the greatest concerns of the officials, began to show promise yesterday. State participation is dependent on action by the various legislatures, and was held up pending action by the Illinois legislature. Signed contracts from Missouri and Washington were received yesterday and Georgia's request for a contract form has been complied with.

Many Requests for Space.

States which have left their exhibits intact, but have made no formal move so far for 1934 participation, are Illinois, West Virginia, South Dakota, California, and Ohio. Requests for space have been received from Mississippi, Arizona, Puerto Rico, Iowa, and Atlantic City. Los Angeles county has also indicated its desire to present its own exhibit.

Rehabilitation of the Sky Ride, privately owned last year, but this summer to be the largest of the Fair's own exhibits, will commence this morning, when John A. Roebling's Sons company begin an inspection of the structure. Complete new lighting systems, telescopes, and other developments will be included at a cost of $100,000. Last year more than a million persons visited the ride.

FRANCE STANDS PAT IN CONFLICT OVER DISARMING

Paris Note Is Delivered to Great Britain.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 19.—The French government's reply to the British disarmament proposals which Capt. Anthony Eden, lord privy seal, peddled around various European capitals two weeks ago, was delivered to the British foreign office by the French ambassador today. It is now being studied by British diplomatic officials.

The contents have not been revealed and will not be until the cabinet, which meets Wednesday, has considered the note unless the French decide to make it public sooner. Nevertheless, it is understood that while couched in polite language it represents no advance to an agreement between the French and Germans.

France Stands Pat.

France, it is said, stands pat on refusing to agree on any rearmament for Germany unless she has guarantees of protection from the former allies, chiefly Britain. In the present temper of the British public, this is impossible.

No government would dare undertake commitments which would bind Britain to fight again in a continental quarrel not of her making, and it is significant that the newspapers of Lords Beaverbrook and Rothermere are leading a campaign against any such commitments. These newspapers usually are the most jingo section of the British press.

In this matter the British press is unanimous and except for a few fire eaters in the right wing of the Conservative party, there is no member of parliament who would risk his seat by advocating tying Britain to the tail of the French military kite.

Hope for Some Loophole.

It is hoped by some that the note may contain some loophole admitting further talks. However, Premier Mussolini's speech yesterday, doubtless made with full knowledge of what the French note contains, militates against this view.

What is expected to happen now is a call for a final meeting of the disarmament steering committee, which is due to assemble April 10. At this meeting, unless the powers by direct conversations in the meantime have arrived at some measure of agreement, the conference probably will be wound up. It is very unlikely that Britain, Italy, and Germany will get together and tell France they have arrived at an agreement independently, thus leaving France to make the best of the situation.

France Urges Idle to Enlist.

PARIS, March 19.—(AP)—Apprehensive over the demands of Chancellor Adolf Hitler that Germany be allowed to rearm, the government today announced a plan to swell the army's ranks by inducing young conscripts to reënlist in order to avoid the hazards of job hunting at the present time.

The army also invited all unemployed young men in France who have left the ranks in the last five years to enlist for new short terms until labor conditions improve.

The announced purpose of the government is to reinforce the army with short term recruits because the regular conscript classes are beginning to slack off in numbers, due to the low wartime birthrate.

Special recruiting will begin in April, an official communique said. Certain "specialists" will be offered 18 month terms and others may enlist for six months. All enlistment requirements will be lowered.

Ordinarily, the conscript troops of France number about 200,000. The chamber of deputies already has provided for additional men during the years 1935 to 1938 when the low wartime birthrate will be felt the most.

Throngs Hail Gandhi in India; 'Holy Man' Again Irks Britain

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADURA, India, Feb. 10.—[By Mail.]—Mahatma Gandhi, out of the headlines since the British government released him from prison last August, still packs them in.

The ascetic Hindu Nationalist leader has agreed to a truce in his campaign of passive resistance against the British government, but his scrawny person still constitutes a potential source of worriment for the foreign rulers of India. For Gandhi is still saint and prophet to tens of millions. They will listen to no other.

The "holy man" came to this ancient city of Madura with its more than 100,000 persons. The town fluttered with anticipation, as if it were greeting an emperor, for days before his arrival.

Crowd Surges from City.

He was expected to arrive at 6:45 o'clock in the evening. Great crowds flocked to the railway station. Suddenly it became known that he would leave the train at a small station near Madura. There was a great surge from the city in that direction.

Hindus lined the road for nearly three miles, peering into every automobile to find their mahatma. Deputations of prominent citizens leaped into autos and traveled farther. Finally, about 11 o'clock, he was received about five miles from the city.

Thousands escorted him to his residence for the night, and dispersed only after Gandhi had, with uplifted palms and a few words, made an apology for his retirement.

Lifts Palms to Throng.

The next day was Gandhi's. From 7:45 a. m. until a big massmeeting ended in the evening, Gandhi was cheered and worshiped by adoring crowds. He spoke at five different meetings. The populace jammed the meetings. The natives were almost frantic in their desire to hear him—or only to catch a glimpse of him.

First Gandhi talked to members of the city's chamber of commerce. At 8:30 a. m. he addressed the municipal council. As he emerged from the municipal building after his speech, a great multitude were waiting to see him. Some one thrust forward a stool for him to stand on.

At 10:30 a. m. he spoke to the students at Sethupathi High school and then retired to rest until 3 p. m. He talked at a special women's meeting arranged in his honor at 3:30.

Then came the climax of the day's program — the massmeeting. Nearly 50,000 men and women and children gathered out in the open, clad in all the picturesque colors of oriental imagination. They sat on a green meadow.

50,000 Roar Welcome.

First Gandhi's volunteer workers appeared in the crowd. They wore their peculiar white caps. Then came two cars. The first was a blue one filled with women. In the second sat Gandhi, with a flower umbrella over his head. The cars moved slowly, in true eastern fashion.

As soon as the slight figure of the 64 year old mahatma was glimpsed the 50,000 roared their welcome.

Gandhi seated himself upon his lofty pulpit—15 feet high—took off his upper cloth which was covering his body on that rainy day. He stood up with only his loin cloth on, barefooted, and greeted his audience.

His talk lasted thirty minutes. A collection was taken to carry on charitable work in connection with "untouchables,' 'to whom Gandhi has devoted much of his time. The next day he left for another city.

SON OF M'ADOO, MODEL FREED; NIGHT IN JAIL

New York, March 19.—[Special.]—William G. McAdoo Jr., son of the senator from California, was arraigned with Miss Sara Lummus, 21 year old blonde model, in Harlem court today, charged with disorderly conduct. The two spent the night in jail.

They were arrested after they are alleged to have started an argument with Mrs. Lillian Knesz, proprietor of the Hungarian Inn, in east 92d street, where they had dined last night. Mrs. Knesz charged that Miss Lummus slapped her face.

The argument began when McAdoo discovered he hadn't sufficient money to pay his dinner bill and offered a check.

The whole business was settled today after a long argument before Magistrate Stern, by Mrs. Knesz accepting the check and withdrawing her charge against Miss Lummus. She had been willing to take the check along, she said, but it took nearly an hour of pleading and apologizing by the girl and McAdoo before she finally consented to overlook the slapping.

Mr. McAdoo was arrested in Beverly Hills, Cal., in March, 1931, and was fined $10 for intoxication, after he and a companion had an argument with a taxicab driver, to whom McAdoo tendered a check as payment for a ride.

They are the wife and 2 year old baby of the former Socialist member of the reichstag, Gerhart Seger. He has fled to Stockholm.

HEAD OF HEATING COMPANY IS HELD ON FRAUD CHARGE

Fred W. Curtis, head of the U. S. Heating company at 45 East Chestnut street, was held to the grand jury in $3,000 bond yesterday by Judge Frank M. Padden in the Felony court on a charge of confidence game.

Herman Bock, 3551 North Kedvale avenue, testified that when he answered a newspaper advertisement for a salesman, Curtis asked a deposit of $89.50 on a sample coal stoker. Bock got neither the job nor the stoker, he said. Outside court Fred Lanser, an investigator for the Better Business bureau, declared that Curtis had victimized several other prospective salesmen and a number of coal companies. Several of Curtis' want ads appeared in THE TRIBUNE.

AUSTRIA EXHIBITS 2,000 SOCIALISTS BEHIND THE BARS

Foreign Writers Permitted to See Prisoners.

VIENNA, March 19.—(AP)—For the first time since the costly civil war, foreign correspondents today were allowed to tramp down the long corridors of Vienna prisons to see nearly 2,000 Socialists behind the bars.

Among the prisoners, who included numerous leaders of the party, which regarded Vienna as its European stronghold, was one who rushed back from the other side of the world to certain arrest when the fighting broke out.

Felt It His Duty to Return.

Prof. Julius Tandler, sociologist and anatomist, was in Peiping when the civil war here flared. Asked why he returned instead of remaining in safety on foreign soil, he said:

"As a prominent Socialist I felt it was my duty to come back to face the consequences."

He remained in Czechoslovakia a few days "in order to recuperate from the journey," then continued to Austria, where he was arrested a few days ago.

Correspondents were permitted to question briefly such leaders at Tandler, Karl Seitz, burgomaster of Vienna, and Karl Renner, president of the shelved parliament.

Ex-Mayor Smokes Cigar.

All said their treatment was as good as could reasonably be expected in any prison.

Wearing a linen duster, Seitz was smoking a cigar in his small cell when the visitors arrived. Renner was writing.

Several political prisoners blurted out to passing correspondents that they had been decently treated since they reached regular prisons but before that were "terribly" mishandled.

Photographs were strictly excluded from the tour, a government spokesman explaining that allowing the correspondents to see the prisoners verged on inhuman treatment, but to permit them to be photographed would be outright brutality to Socialists behind the bars.

Orders Jobs for Fascists.

VIENNA, March 20.—[Tuesday.]—(AP)—A decree published today provides that every business undertaking in Austria employing 25 men or more must hire, for each 25 workers, one unemployed member of the armed auxiliary forces, suc has the Fascist heimwehr. Failure to comply with the order carries the penalty of a fine not exceeding $200.

U. S. PAIR FIGHTS SPY CHARGES IN FRENCH HEARING

Judge Announces 15 Arrests Will Result.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, March 19.—Mysterious espionage charges which have kept Robert Gordon Switz, American aviation specialist, and his wife, the former Marjorie Tilley of New York, a Vassar graduate, in a French prison since December tonight seemed on the point of being clarified.

The couple, who have been imprisoned separately, were confronted this afternoon in the office of the examining magistrate, Judge Benon. They were put through a six hour grilling. When they were finally led back to their cells at 11:50 o'clock tonight Benon announced that there would be new arrests tomorrow, "perhaps as many as 15."

Confession Reported.

This apparently was the basis for a report which circulated in French circles late tonight to the effect that the Switzes had confessed their alleged spy activities and denounced other members of the international ring with whom they are accused of having affiliated.

[An Associated Press dispatch said the Switzes made what court officials described as "a full confession of whatever part they played" in a widespread spying.]

While THE TRIBUNE correspondent could not confirm the reported confession, newspapermen covering the hearing were struck by the difference in the bearing of the two prisoners before and after.

When they were first brought into the magistrate's office Switz appeared nervous and depressed. His wife, who up until today had showed but little evidence of the ordeal she has undergone, was grim faced and silent. When the pair emerged both seemed cheerful and Switz was smiling for the first time since his arrest.

The object of today's hearing was to confront the two prisoners and check alleged discrepancies in their respective stories.

Nature of Charges Cloudy.

Since the Switzes were arrested the authorities have maintained the strictest secrecy and the exact nature of the charges against the two Americans has never been clear. They were arrested under the general accusation of having been connected with a band of ten individuals of various nationalities who had allegedly been selling French military secrets to a foreign power—supposedly Russia or Germany.

The police produced documents concerning French military secrets which they declared had been found among Switz's belongings. Switz denied he had ever seen the documents before or had dealings with other members of the band.

A few days ago the French intelligence service turned over to the court mysterious photographs considered of great importance which had Switz's fingerprints on them. The films had allegedly been turned over to the French consul at Geneva by an anonymous agent in the French spy service.

Switz admitted his fingerprints were on the films but declared he knew nothing about them except that a man he met in a café had asked him to develop them in his dark room.

Ten Arabs Sent to Prison for Rioting Against Jews

JERUSALEM, March 19.—(AP)—Ten demonstrators in anti-Jewish riots by Arabs last October, including Jamal Hussein, a cousin of Haj Ameen el Hussein, grand mufti of Palestine and secretary to the Arab executive, were sentenced to ten months imprisonment at hard labor today.

Thirty persons were killed and 300 wounded in Palestine last October in the riots, a protest against Jewish immigration to the country.

$250,000 ST. JOSEPH FIRE.

St. Joseph, Mo., March 19.—(AP)—The J. C. Penney company retail store here was destroyed today in a $250,000 fire.

FALSE TEETH "Stay Put" Says Druggist

"With my gums gradually shrinking I had difficulty keeping my plate in position with various denture powders. Most of them lasted only a few hours. Now I use FASTEETH, and what a difference! I now wear my plate for 24 hours with absolute security and comfort. Fasteeth does not wash away or become thinned out, but 'STAYS PUT' until I am ready to remove plate. FASTEETH is tasteless. Does not sour or cause foul breath. Holds false teeth all day long."

Accept only FASTEETH to enjoy false teeth comfort like you've never had before. Ask for FASTEETH at Walgreen's or any good drug store.

"STOCKING RUNS WERE DRIVING ME CRAZY"

"I BOUGHT GOOD STOCKINGS and couldn't understand why they went into runs all the time. My stocking bills were terribly high.

"ONE DAY A FRIEND began telling me how she cut down on runs by washing stockings with Lux instead of rubbing them with cake soap.

"I TOOK HER ADVICE and was amazed how much longer my stockings stayed like new. Lux cut down on runs and saved the color, too.

LUX preserves stocking elasticity—the stocking gives instead of breaking into runs so often.

Avoid ordinary soaps that contain harmful alkali—avoid cake-soap rubbing. These weaken elasticity. Lux has no harmful alkali. Safe in water, safe in Lux!

SALES UP 156% month following Ralston advertisement October 29, 1933. Second month sales up 38%. Another evidence of "carry-over" benefit.

The Comic Weekly

Everybody Reads The Comics

959 Eighth Avenue, New York City — Palmolive Building, Chicago

What a smash THAT was!

after full page advertisement, October 29, 1933

THE first Ralston color page advertisement appeared in The Comic Weekly as a test on February 19th, 1933. With a national bank holiday imminent, most everybody was conserving cash. Twenty-five cent pieces were scarce, yet Ralston box tops, in response to this advertisement, rolled in to the unheard of total of 151,355 in a period of three months. Each box top represented the purchase of a 25c package of Ralston Wheat Cereal over the grocer's counter. Ralston's total sales jumped 24.1% in February, 47% in March, 43% in April.

With such a record established, a regular schedule of color pages in The Comic Weekly was inevitable. To start the fall selling season, a page appeared in The Comic Weekly on September 24th, followed by another on October 29th. The Ralston boom was on in earnest. In three weeks, more Ralston box tops were received from the October 29th page than the first page pulled in three months. The inquiry cost was the lowest in Ralston history. With The Comic Weekly as the backbone of the Ralston campaign, Ralston sales jumped 156% in November, 38% in December, 65% in January. Ralston advertising continued in The Comic Weekly during December, January and February.

One world's record could be an accident—but two world's records within a short space of time establish a habit. Again The Comic Weekly proves itself to be the record breaking advertising medium.

If you have a taste for things big—big-scale markets, big-scale advertising, big-scale results—let this medium smash sales records for you. For more details, call Columbus 5-2642 in New York, or Superior 6820 in Chicago.

Every Sunday, more than five million families (more than 15,000,000 people) read The Comic Weekly. Often front page headlines must bide their time until Skippy, Popeye, Jiggs, Barney Google and other celebrities of the cartoon world have unfolded their stories to an interested public. Advertisers know from experience the advantages of placing their sales messages alongside those proven attention-getters. The Comic Weekly, distributed as an integral part of the 17 great Hearst Sunday Newspapers, will sell more of your goods at less cost than any other advertising medium in the world.

MAJOR PROPHETS AND PROSPECTS.

When Mussolini first began saying that the old order changeth, yielding place to the new, the surrounding scene did not bear him out as much as it does now. When he said parliamentarism had killed itself with the bludgeon of its own stupidities, parliaments were still going concerns throughout most of Europe. Democracy, even where new, had not proved its hopelessness. In a great deal of Europe individual opinion was still respected and political action was still free. The democratic movement, following the convulsion of the war as liberation from autocracy, had not yet broken down.

When Mussolini again says, as he did Sunday in Rome, that the principles of the last century are dead and that democracy and liberalism are finished, he may seem to have the justification of a prophet who had spoken of consequences when they were far from being clear. He does not think that everything has been wisely done in other lands where the force of his logic has prevailed, but he can point the finger in almost any direction to show that the order for which he foretold disaster has broken down.

He might point his finger toward the United States and it would be hard for an American to say that he was wholly wrong if he asserted that the American republic was an illustration of his theory of the decay of the liberal democratic state. It is true that Americans have not arrived either at the castor oil or the concentration camp, but they have suspended their congressional equivalent of the parliamentary system in part, and they have intrusted legislative and even judicial functions to administration more than ever before, and they have flown off at a tangent from the course provided in their governing organic law.

It must be conceded that Mussolini's view of the future and his conception of the modern state have measurable justification in events even here and a proving up of a more absolute sort in Europe. Does it then follow that his confident feeling regarding the future is logical and certain? He would close the book upon the state as it existed in 1920 definitly and permanently, as on the feudal system. A new order arises and he thinks the old order is dead. A reminder which he has apparently dismissed as a counselor is that his dominating state is one of men. It is so dependent upon the intelligence, the will, personality, and influence of a single man that its whole future can be instantly and abruptly changed by the loss of that individual. No one could foresee the next few years in Italy without Mussolini himself. What Germany would become in a few months without Hitler could not be guessed. We know what happened to Mexico without Diaz in our own days and what happened to England without Cromwell in earlier days. In the United States it would be difficult to see the New Deal without Franklin D. Roosevelt. It is doubtful if Herbert Hoover, having the will to do what Mr. Roosevelt has done, would have been permitted to do it.

A sounder preview of Europe than Mussolini's prophecy for the Fascist state is that the disappearance of a few dominant individuals will be followed by convulsions in which the personality dominated state will be forced to a painful return to some form of the principles which Mussolini waves aside. A system of government and an order of society, a nationalist structure and an economic scheme depending for life and energy upon the extraordinary personality and gifts of an individual is intrusted to the hope, never realized, that a reliable succession of such individuals can be had. Therefore enduring states have been constructed to take in their stride periods when only mediocrity was available and when even incompetence must be endured.

THE PROFESSORS' ARTICLES.

A college dean recently remarked that a student had a better chance to get a sound education than in a very long time, because the crackpots had all gone to Washington. This wasn't the first indication that the professors who stayed at home were not overenthusiastic about the cerebrations of the brain trust.

The dean's quip did act as a recommendation to us of a series of articles by professors of economics who were still working on the campuses. Commencing on March 11, nine articles have appeared. All of the phases of the New Deal have been considered in a calm manner by men of academic standing with inquisitive minds and the background of history.

There is a difference of emphasis among the experts who have written for us. But except for one who appears to believe that it is desirable to have reform even at the expense of recovery, there is general agreement on leading points. The authorities are completely at one that the money policies have failed to attain the objectives set by the administration. Prof. Bell made the point clearly, and so did Profs. Wright and Gideonse. The latter in addition showed cogently that if the desired purpose of raising prices is realized the resulting redistribution of income will not be along the lines desired by the new planners. At the same time, with the historic consequences of our present monetary practices in mind, Dr. Gideonse doubts that once prices start mounting there will be any stopping of them at what is declared to be the desired terminus.

Prof. Neriove observed that the recovery program had failed to bring about sufficient expansion of private investment to revive the capital goods industries, so that genuine recovery of the kind that has always come in the past has not yet even started. Prof. Litman saw prospects of a lasting recovery in a revival of world trade, in which the United States must take the lead. And with this view Prof. Ray agreed, at the same time advancing strong reasons against intrusting the tarif revising power to executive hands. Prof. Clark observed that the agricultural legislation, although of emergency character, had failed to bring the results assured by its optimistic proponents. He also noted that the AAA check on output was an interference with material progress.

At a time when an administration at Washington, with the advice of professors, is conducting bold experiments which affect the lives of the American people, there is great need for calm examination of the experiments by other professors, detached in every way from the formulation and carrying out of the plans. In making public rather than keeping to themselves their analyses of the economics of the recovery program the professors who are contributing to the series now running in THE TRIBUNE are rendering a notable public service.

TRA-LA, SO IT IS.

Migration dates vary greatly over a small area. There may be a week or so between the meadow lark in one spot and the meadow lark in another, with only a short flight between the two spots. The meadow lark has dropped in, singing. The ground is frozen under a crust of snow. A song from a ground bird in such circumstances is a courageous bit on the bright side. Like Mark Tapley, the meadow lark may welcome a chance to come out strong or he may be charged with songs which have to come out even if he feels like a fool singing when he should be swearing.

The calendar is about to say it is spring in these regions called temperate. Sometimes it would be pertinent to inquire by what standards of comparison they are temperate in any view of weather, personal opinion, political action or anything else natural or human; probably by standards of the arctic, Hitler and the tropics. By comparison these are temperate zones, needing only eight months of furnace firing, four months of air cooling and the freedom of Vox Pop.

The juncoes came in a little ahead of the meadow lark. This fellow is called the snow bird because he gets out ahead of the snows and thinks they have cleared away before he comes back. If, as nearly always, the thought is an error he can take the mistake. The junco is birddom's best dressed man, everything neat and nothing gaudy. He is always going to afternoon tea and never to the fancy dress ball; a bit of white piping on the coat tails, otherwise the subdued tones of perfect taste, without gay cravat or hat. His manners are off the same piece of cloth.

The first robin, arriving likewise, hits a turn of weather for the worse. He takes his bad weather morosely, like a Tory country gentleman observing social and political tendencies he does not like. He hunches up, and some of his feathers turn awry as if he found his dividends reduced and his port corked. He plainly despairs of the government and the people and wonders why they do not arrest some one and make a lesson of him. He does not then sing as the meadow lark, but his song is not needed in foul weather. The cardinal, who takes the whole winter in his stride, pours forth from the tree tops in greeting to what he can see from there, and the lark, fresh from blossoms, still believes in them. His pipe will turn the edge of a sharp March wind.

ADDRESS THE CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA.

At a celebration of the 102d anniversary of a firm of printers in London the poet John Drinkwater was a guest, and in proposing a toast to the firm recalled that "during the American civil war the rebel states found difficulty in getting any firm to print stamps for them. They sent spies to England and ultimately induced Messrs. De La Rue to print them. Some of the stamps reached their destination and the rebel states were enabled to carry on the important social service."

We read further that "the chairman, responding, said there was one fact which Mr. Drinkwater had not recorded: the firm had not yet been paid for those stamps. (Laughter.) To some it would be a simple matter to work out how far that sum at compound interest would go to offset the debt Great Britain owed to America. (Laughter.)"

This seems to us a good deal better than the mine run of postprandial humor and for logic averages up to most suggestions of offsets to the American loan to Great Britain. Had the American ambassador been present he might have urged the firm to send its bill to the consignee or he might have quoted, was it Salisbury? on the inadvisability of "backing the wrong horse."

Editorial of the Day

ANNE BOLEYN STREET.

[Des Moines Tribune.]

London's county council has discovered a new peril to the morals of youth. It foresees pernicious influences which might flow from the names of streets.

It had been suggested that the council name a new street after Anne Boleyn, second wife of Henry VIII. One member of the council mentioned Anne as having "appealed to the less finer part of Henry's nature," and added that if her name were "put on the road of a respectable neighborhood the young ladies of today would be stimulated to ask who she was," and then "who knows what consequences might ensue?"

All of which prompts speculation as to what the young ladies of England have been permitted to know about Anne all these years. And whether there is a street named for Henry himself.

Places, neighborhoods and streets do not seem to follow that old adage about "giving a dog a bad name." They make their reputations, and sometimes those of their names, quite without regard for the hopes and expectations of their official christeners. Whitechapel raises mental images not altogether churchly, the Haymarket hasn't always been what its name suggests, and the most recent news pictures of the Rue de la Paix were riot scenes.

In 1934 London could at least be charitable to Anne's name.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

THE "RAVELS OF MR. INSULL, whatever else you may say, at least inspire our young and even some of the older folks to learn strange facts we never knew before. Some British statesman once remarked that it was a good thing for England to have so many little wars in her far flung frontiers all around the world because it taught the young people geography. And that is one of the blessings of the wanderings of Mr. Insull. Since he has been in Athens our young and elders, too, have learned much of Greece—its location, Athens, the Acropolis, Leonidas and his heroes at Thermopylae, Ulysses, Darius, Xenophon, Socrates, Virgil, Hector, Marco Bozarris, and a lot more of those boys ancient and modern. And now that Mr. Insull is reported heading for Abyssinia, people generally will want to know what is an Abyssinia and where and why and how. Millinery stores will probably soon have an Abyssinian hat for spring wear and an Abyssinian bathing suit, only the Abyssinians don't go in very strong for bathing suits. And now that they know there is such a place exhibitors at the Fair will probably erect an Abyssinian village, which would be most interesting and highly instructive. But if Mr. Insull just roams the high seas without docking in some interesting place we won't get much of a kick out of that. And if he's been kidnaped we'll just yawn, throw the geography and the encyclopedia at the cat and go back to sleep. One doesn't have to go roaming around the world these days to get kidnaped. They really do that sort of thing better right here in the U. S. A.

FIRESIDE TRAVEL.

Romantic seamen we who sit
Before this open fire,
Our fresh imaginations lit
By books of heart's desire.

Down through the ages rides our bark,
Earth's heroes bid us hail;
Old Homer, Shakespeare, Joan of Arc
Salute us as we sail.

We course by Grecia's lyric isles,
Italia's vivid strand;
We hail Hispania's realm of smiles,
Britannia's rugged land.

The storm is blowing wild without,
But what have we to fear,
With fire aglow, and books about,
And best, with love so near!

TWO GENTLEMEN of Teutonic origin at Lox Onglaize have announced they will fight a duel this week with broadswords known in Germany as "schlaegers." But this is America! We do not kill each other in this country with schlaegers, but with machine guns, automobiles, and bad whisky. They should employ those implements in their duel. Or they might jump simultaneously out of the seventeenth story window. We should be Americans under all circumstances.

I WAS RIDING right along with Mr. Rickenbacker in his testimony before the senate post-office committee, eating every word with great gusto, only stopping now and then to give three hearty cheers, but I hadn't got to the exciting part when I suddenly bumped into this: "It is the doubt in the minds of millions whether all the President has so ably accomplished has been PROVEN or has had time to be PROVEN!" That PROVEN thing stopped me dead in my tracks. I could follow Mr. Rickenbacker no further. If a thing must be PROVEN to Mr. Rickenbacker instead of PROVED then right there our paths divide. The "traitor" thing in his testimony doesn't interest me at all. I had parted company with him and was a mile and a half away before he got to it.

THE LADY WITH THE GIMMES.

The Lady with the Gimmes
Has gone completely "bugs"—
She begs the socks from off your hocks
To sell them back in rugs.

The Lady with the Gimmes
Wants favors more than few,
But not an inch in any pinch
Will she give back to you.

You may be sick and lonesome,
But never think she cares;
She's not your friend unless you spend
Your last cent on her wares.

You walk the "straight and narrow"
With two wide open eyes,
Pull back your skirt away from dirt,
But scorn to moralize—

She'll criticize your politics,
On your religion frown;
But bouquets throw to her ego,
She'd let you bomb the town!

The Lady with the Gimmes
Is never satisfied—
She gets the socks from off your hocks
And then she wants your hide.

OPIUM PREPARATIONS.

FOR the relief of certain symptoms of disease opium and various drugs derived from it are easily in a class apart. Nothing taken internally approximates the opium family in the relief of pain. For the shock of profound fear the opium group is without equal. Surgeons know that a patient approaching an operation in a state of apprehension will pass calmly under the general anesthetic if given a preliminary opiate. A moderate dose of this drug will prevent the mental shock of operations done under local anesthesia, during which the patient's consciousness remains clear.

The fact that the mental and physical comfort it brings is so very evident to the patient makes the drug a dangerous one. So pleasing, as well as so satisfactory otherwise, are the effects of the opium family that a great many people have not the hold on themselves necessary for safety in its use. If used often the drug creates a cell hunger in addition to its effects on morale. So well known are these dangers that legal restrictions are placed around the drug, its growth, fabrication, sale, and use. As compelling as these are, however, they need to be further strengthened.

Meanwhile chemists have been working to discover preparations made from opium that would be free from the shortcomings of the original extract of the poppy. Codeine is one of the products of this investigation. There is said to be no cell hunger induced by using codeine. It is thought that it does not break down resistance. Stated more simply, there is said to be no danger of the codeine habit. The drug is used in cough mixtures where the use of morphine or the older opiates would not be allowed. It cannot be stated definitly that the use of codeine is as safe as these claims state, but it cannot be denied that it is a far safer drug than morphine, heroin, or opium.

Another of these derivatives is papaverine. It, too, is far safer than opium, laudanum, paregoric, morphine, and heroin. Still another is diluaoid. It ranks near papaverine and not far from codeine, but well above the old group in safety as regards the danger of the habit.

An extensive use of preparations made from opium, reported by Dr. H. S. Diehl, indicates that aside from cell hunger and habit formation the use of any opium derivative, in even one or two small doses, is apt to have some unpleasant effects. Among these are nausea, dizziness, dopy feeling, fainting, constipation, diarrhea, itching nose, and headache.

After allowing for symptoms caused by the disease for which the drug was given, Dr. Diehl concludes that even the least objectionable of the opium derivatives have some unpleasant effects in an occasional case.

GALL BLADDER SYMPTOMS.

L. B. W. writes: I have trouble with my gall bladder, but I do not have stones. I have gas all the time and headaches. Could this be caused by gall bladder trouble?

REPLY.

Many people with infected gall bladders get along with very few symptoms so long as they live properly. The diet that suits most of them contains no condiments, sauces, or pepper, and no alcoholic beverages. It is low in fats and oils, eggs, meats, stuffings, dressings, and rich foods. It is composed principally of fruits, vegetables, breads, cereals, and milk. Meat once daily generally suffices. There are to be no heavy meals. Most of them eat no supper or a very light one. Constipation is not allowed. Infected gall bladder may be a cause of headache.

CATARRH.

R. H. writes: Just what is catarrh?

REPLY.

Catarrh is an old and loosely used word now almost obsolete. It included chronic infected sinuses, chronic infections of the nose, nasal polyps, and ozena.

PIMPLES.

B. H. writes: Please tell me what to do for pimples. Lately my face broke out. People tell me what to do to prevent them, but none say how I can get rid of them.

REPLY.

I have a booklet on pimples which you can get by sending ten cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

JURORS' PAY.

Chicago, March 16.—[Friend of the People.]—Last February I served on the jury in the Municipal court, and up to the present time I have not been paid. The only excuse I can get out of the city hall is that there is a controversy between the city and county over this period. Please advise what steps to take in order to obtain this money. I am out of work at present and could use this money. Don't you think it's about time I should be paid? E. J. P.

There has been a question as to the county's liability on Municipal court juror fees. This matter is now pending in the Supreme court of the state on rehearing asked by the county from a decision placing the liability on the county. Final disposition of this matter is expected in the very near future.

PUBLIC ROAD.

Marion, Ia., March 16.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I want to buy a farm in Iowa which has no public road to it and is reached by driving through two farms by opening gates. How can I get a road to this farm? L. M. P.

Your chances of securing a public road would depend on whether you could persuade the public authorities to institute condemnation proceedings.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

TO ENFORCE JUDGMENT.

Chicago, March 17.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I am holding a judgment against a city employe who is working steady and drawing a salary. 1. How can I collect on the judgment when all his property is signed over to his wife? 2. How can I find out under which city department he is working? He acts as a bodyguard for an alderman. 3. Can I stop his wages and collect them? L. J. C.

1. If you can prove that it is in fact his and that his wife is merely holding as trustee for him, then you would be able to reach his interest.

2. You might try inquiring at the police department.

3. Wages coming from the city are not subject to garnishment.

JOINT TENANCY.

Chicago, March 17.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I bought a piece of real estate some years ago and [1] made my wife joint tenant. Since then we have separated. 2. Is there any way I can break the joint tenancy and sell my equity? T. W. B.

2. You would not be entitled to take back the gift on the facts stated.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY DONALD DAY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia.—The task of censoring the mail entering and leaving Russia is proving too much for the soviet censorship. Many interesting letters have been received by Latvians who have relatives in Russia. A Latvian engineer living in Moscow sent a letter to his brother in which he appealed for an occasional food parcel. It was published in the Latvis and gives a vivid picture of life in the soviet capital.

"I am forced to ask your aid because of the unemployment crisis here. The bolshevik boast that there is no unemployment in Russia is not true. The army of unemployed is now large. I have been looking for work for four months, but there is little hope of my obtaining a position in Moscow as staffs in most undertakings have been decreased and further cuts are proposed.

"It is impossible for me to go to work in another city because I cannot find a room for my family and with a salary of 300 or 400 rubles I cannot support myself and my family living in different towns. The value of the paper ruble, compared with food prices, is about the same as the former kopek.

"The pay of ordinary laborers ranges from 20 to 200 rubles a month. Specialists and engineers receive from 300 to 500 rubles. The unemployed do not receive state aid, and in the markets there are crowds of 'free citizens' who offer all sorts of articles for sale in order to purchase bread at the 'commercial price' stores where the government sells whole wheat bread to the inhabitants for 3.50 rubles per kilogram (2.2 pounds) and rye bread for 2.50 rubles per kilogram.

"Employed workers have special ration cards enabling them to buy their daily ration of two pounds of wheat bread for 24 kopeks per pound and rye bread for 12 kopeks per pound. Employés not engaged in physical work get only one pound of bread per day.

"The ration cards also entitle the holders to purchase at specially low prices the following produce each month according to the various categories to which they belong: Sugar, from ¼ to 1 kilogram; grits, from 1 to 2 kilograms; potatoes, from 5 to 8 kilograms; meat or salted herring, from 1 to 2 kilograms.

"The prices charged in the cooperative stores serving the card holders are approximately ten times lower than the prices in the 'commercial shops,' which sell to the other classes of the population.

"The laws and decrees which are supposed to protect the workers are only on paper and only fools apply to the courts. . . . At the present moment Russia may only be compared to a big prison, with spies and traitors everywhere. It is not possible for me in this letter to describe everything and I only wish that you and every honest person will be saved from such a fate and preserved from living in such a 'socialistic paradise' in which, without protesting, the Russian nation is now obliged to live.

"This is the cause of the very large number of suicides and other tragic events in our present existence, which may be unfavorably compared with the social life of many tribes of savages."

Such letters frequently appear in the Latvian press, but writers seldom give details as to the rations of the Russian workers. The writer's comment concerning suicides is duplicated in many letters. It is significant that the only suicides ever mentioned in the soviet press are those of prominent communists who become despondent.

COURT REFORM.

Chicago, March 16.—Your editorial, "The Reform of the Municipal Court," is a remarkable one.

In Washington, D. C., I filed a claim in an estate there in behalf of a minor. It was set before the chief justice, who found, when both sides appeared ready for trial, that it was impossible for him to hear it, so he suggested that we try some of the other judges. The third judge we sought out to try the case suggested that on the following morning he had a murder case that he thought would go over, and then an automobile theft case that would only take one-half hour or so, and if we would come in about 11 o'clock he would be glad to hear the matter. In other words, the district judges are all on a level; they hear anything and everything in litigation in the court without calling in a Probate court clerk, a Criminal court clerk, and this transforming themselves into one court after another. The court is one court where all matters of litigation are heard.

You could elevate the Municipal court by making all the courts of Cook county one. If you cannot see your way clear to tackle such a colossal problem, then insist that there be one Criminal court for all, that the Municipal court police branches are a part of that Criminal court and the judges are to be elected on a ticket for that court. Wipe out our Probate court, as should be done, and make it a part of the County court as it was originally and is now in most counties of the state. Then institute a County court of as many judges as is necessary to handle all matters now handled by the Probate court and County court. There is a very important reason for this. The county matters should be handled by the County judges elected by the people and not judges that are called in from the country. This would do away also with assistant judges in the Probate court. There is no law allowing a judge to be an assistant in the Probate court or any other court. The County judge can only call in assistants when he is unable to occupy the position as County judge. Besides it is unconstitutional to call any country judges to hear matters unless the judge himself is in some way or other incapacitated. Old Judge Tuley held that that was the law and it is the law.

Today the County judge is a political czar of Cook county. If he had at least one-half dozen associates of equal power who would choose their chief justice, and he could only preside as chief justice for a limited time, it would strengthen not only the personnel but the justice and equity of all matters that come before the County court. In reality the County judge is nothing more than a toy for the committeemen of the various wards who in all elections and contests after elections are the czars that control, rule and reign in all political matters of the county. The ward committeeman decides all elections before they are held, making the County court a mockery and elections a folly. EDWARD J. GRESH.

BOB'S ON GUARD.

Jacksonville, Ill., March 14.—We are greatly interested in Bob Becker's daily article on THE TRIBUNE'S experimental farm, but we are much distressed. We fear the ewes and the mamma goats are not operating under the NRA or the AAA. They are having too many twins and triplets! I am afraid they will throw them in the Mississippi river—as they did the little pigs!

THE VETERANS IN POLITICS.

Chicago, March 15.—In THE TRIBUNE of March 14 a letter from Mr. Charles V. Falkenberg states the case for the immediate cash payment of the adjusted veterans' compensation certificates as he sees it.

Mr. Falkenberg might have added one other reason, and the only good one, for paying these certificates in cash. Namely, if by such a payment the country could be assured that in the future the only payment to veterans would be to deserving veterans and just what equity demanded in each case, then it would be a happy and economical solution of the whole veteran question; but history and experience tell us that within thirty days after the certificates were paid the so-called leaders of the veterans would be back before congress with schemes for pensions, allowances, etc., that only the greed of this most selfish of all special interests could devise.

Ninety per cent of these veterans came out of the war in much better condition than they went into it. They learned discipline, hygiene, self-reliance, and a few other lessons, and their debt ought to be to their country and not the other way around. At least half the membership of the American Legion, in my judgment, are sick of this dollar patriotism and eternal propaganda about heroes, but the professional veteran is in the saddle and is making a living at the expense of the esteem of all of the right minded citizens, whether veterans or not.

BLACK BUILDINGS FOR HEAT.

Chicago, March 15.—I am wondering why the exterior of the General Exhibits building at A Century of Progress was painted black. Black absorbs the heat of the sun's rays.

If one will observe the colors of the gondola used in the recent stratosphere flight, now on exhibit at the Museum of Science and Industry, it may be noted that the gondola is painted black on that portion where additional heat was desired and white where the heat was least desired. Why not apply this same principle to the color scheme of the buildings at the Exposition, which, after all, we are told, is supposed to acquaint the public with the applications of modern science?

May I therefore suggest that these black buildings be repainted to a light color which would tend to reflect the heat, thus lessening the discomfort of those who will be inside of them on the hot days of the coming summer?

BELGIAN DEBTS.

Cicero, Ill., March 16.—I don't wonder why poor Belgium doesn't pay Uncle Sam. In today's TRIBUNE I read where the young King Leopold was granted a salary of $3,000,000 a year and his mother $500,000 allowance or pension per year. Our President—God bless him—would serve us for over thirty years for the above amount, and is doing more for our people in one year than King Leopold will do in thirty years for his.

100 MILLIONS SET AS TOTAL NEEDED BY U. S. SCHOOLS

Rep. Simpson Urges RFC Loans Be Allowed.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 19.—[Special.]—Federal loans for the payment of unpaid school teachers throughout the country would involve a sum of approximately 100 million dollars, Representative James Simpson Jr. [Rep., Ill.], reported to a house subcommittee today.

Mr. Simpson's report represented the first effort in three years of agitation for federal school loans to arrive at an authoritative estimate of the total cost such legislation might entail.

With the coöperation of federal education officials, he undertook a nationwide survey of the situation in response to a request by Chairman Anning Prall [Dem., N. Y.], of the banking and currency sub-committee handling teachers' loan legislation. Mr. Simpson is a member of the subcommittee.

25 States Need Help.

In his report today the Chicago congressman stated that twenty-five states are in acute need of federal assistance if their teachers are to be paid. He estimated that a total of $55,042,500, for which no warrants or other certificates of indebtedness have been issued, is owed teachers in these states, and that in addition they hold outstanding unpaid warrants aggregating $48,288,977.

Illinois, Mr. Simpson reported, is included in the group urgently needing federal assistance. The state, he said, owes its teachers 28 million dollars for which no warants have been issued, of which 26 millions are in Cook county. He pointed out that legislation enabling the RFC to loan only on tax warants or other anticipatory certificates would not solve the county's situation, and recommended the establishment of an additional RFC fund for loans to school districts which have available security to offer other than warants. Such a fund, he stated, could be utilized by Ohio and several other states as well as by Illinois.

Urges Emergency Action.

"I realize that the general problem of paying teachers is conceived to be a local and state responsibility and not normally a function of the federal government," said the young Chicagoan in his report. "But since, in numerous cases, the federal government has found it advisable to deviate from its normal functions and grant emergency relief, I urge the committee to give sympathetic consideration to the plight of the school teachers of this country."

"It would seem," said the report in summary, "that approximately 57 million dollars, for which no evidence of debt has been issued, is now owed the teachers of this country, and that teachers are holding warants or certificates of indebtedness that can not be handled in the normal manner amounting to approximately 50 million dollars.

"If the Reconstruction Finance corporation should be authorized to accept teachers' warants as collateral, the matter of the adequacy of security should be left to the corporation. It seems that this problem could be handled by authorizing the corporation in its discretion to loan money on, or discount teachers' warants which, in the opinion of the corporation, are properly secured."

TEACHERS TO GET $4,000,000 CASH PAY DAY FRIDAY

Plan to Mail May Checks Thursday.

School board and city officials worked yesterday to eliminate red tape and make possible a month's cash pay day for teachers by Friday of this week. James B. McCahey, president of the board of education, said that unless an unforeseen obstacle develops, the school checks will be mailed on Thursday night. The pay day is for the month of May, 1933, and totals $4,040,000.

Bankers agreed last week to purchase $3,000,000 worth of 1933 tax anticipation warrants following negotiations with Mayor Kelly and Mr. McCahey. The remaining funds for the pay roll are made up of the board's cash on hand from various sources.

Prepares $44,000,000 Levy.

Frank S. Righeimer, special attorney for the board, worked on the draft of a resolution to be adopted at a meeting of the school trustees tomorrow. The resolution will set the 1933 educational fund tax levy at $44,000,000 in keeping with the "pegged levy" legislation recently enacted at Springfield.

After the board has taken action at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon the city council will be asked to pass a new tax ordinance for the schools embodying the "pegged levy" figures.

The school trustees also worked throughout the day on the 1934 budget. For the first time in many years the budget sessions are open to the public. They are held in the board's meeting room in the Builders' building at La Salle street and Wacker drive.

Discuss Building Fund.

The day's discussion centered around the building fund. The 1834 levy for this fund has also been "pegged" at $4,000,000 by the new legislation, although under the old law the board could levy approximately $12,000,000 for building purposes.

Appropriations for the building fund, however, total $13,619,518. Back taxes are expected to finance the building fund operations above the $4,000,000 levy.

Amounts to be expended on the five new high school buildings through the grant of federal public works administration easy money are as follows:

Lane High school	$1,751,039
Phillips High	1,978,788
Senn High addition	274,322
Steinmetz High	565,874
Wells High	1,286,548
Total	$5,856,571

Plan Tax Warrant Issue.

In addition to the government's grant of approximately $1,326,000 the board will issue $4,500,000 worth of building fund tax warrants in payment to the contractors.

The budget will also include appropriations of $1,000,000 for equipping the new schools, $722,366 for damage claims on old contracts and $821,557 for other buildings. The remainder of the $13,696,518 building fund appropriation will be used for repairs and replacements.

The trustees also discussed the possibility of closing down the school plant, retaining only a small skeleton staf for a month during the summer. This plan was proposed by Trustee Charles Fry, as a substitute for the staggered time device adopted in 1933. Supt. William J. Bogan and Business Manager Howard P. Savage agreed that Fry's scheme would be more feasible.

DEMOCRATS' DEBTS FOR 1932 CAMPAIGN STAND AT $544,711

Washington, D. C., March 19.—(AP)—Unpaid debts aggregating $544,711 were listed today by the Democratic national committee compared with a deficit of $195,008 reported by the Republican national committee as hangovers from the 1932 campaign.

The reports were filed with South Trimble, house clerk, under the corrupt practices act, by William F. Cronin of New York, assistant Democratic treasurer and George F. Getz of Chicago, Republican treasurer.

Contributions to the Republican committee from Jan. 1 to Feb. 28, amounted to $2,350, of which $2,000 came from Silas H. Strawn of Chicago, expenditures were placed at $7,783.

Net contributions received by the Democratic committee in the two month period were reported at $30,348, with expenditures of $34,659.

Others included, W. Morrison, San Antonio, $25,000; Joseph P. Kennedy, New York, $32,816; Henry Morgenthau Sr., New York, $10,000; Breckinridge Long, $7,500; M. L. Benedum, Pittsburgh, Pa., $17,500; Vincent Astor, W. K. Vanderbilt, and Robert B. Myer, New York, $10,000 each; Howard Bruce, Baltimore, and R. H. Gore, Chicago, $10,000 each.

The committee also owes the Columbia Broadcasting, $47,640; National Broadcasting, $107,571; New York Telephone company, $39,537; Biltmore hotel, New York, $17,000; Street Railway Advertising company, New York, $30,000; Western Union, $13,262, and Postal Telegraph, $13,984.

ASSEMBLY TAKES UP SCHOOL FUND PROBLEM TODAY

School legislation will occupy the center of the stage when the third special session of the legislature gets under way again today at Springfield. The teachers have urged measures on senators and representatives that will pour millions of dollars into the state school fund for distribution to school districts.

On the one hand is the bill supported by Gov. Horner for a diversion of one-third of the gas tax to the school fund. The fund, of which Chicago receives about a third, totals $10,500,000 under the present law. The Horner bill would add another $10,000,000 to the fund.

The gas tax bill was introduced in the senate last week after a similar measure had been killed in the lower house. The fight was conducted on almost strictly partisan lines, with the Republicans opposing the legislation.

The Republicans are urging that state liquor taxes and all above $2,500,000 monthly from the sales tax be diverted to the school fund. The liquor diversion bill passed the lower house and will be up for consideration in the senate.

In dispatches from Springfield yesterday Gov. Horner was quoted as saying the full weight of the administration would be thrown behind his motor fuel tax for schools bill. He indicated that if the bill fails to pass the senate with the emergency clause he would advocate striking out this provision so that it could be passed with a simple majority in both houses.

BRYAN-MULLEN FEUD FLARES ON NEBRASKA PWA

Meeting Nearly Broken Up by Word War.

Lincoln, Neb., March 19.—(AP)—The old political feud between Gov. Charles W. Bryan and Arthur F. Mullen, former Nebraska Democratic national committeeman, flared again today over Nebraska's two big PWA projects. It once threatened to disrupt a hearing called by the Nebraska League of Municipalities.

More than 200 at the meeting heard Mullen and other sponsors of the $7,500,000 Sutherland power and irrigation project and the $7,300,000 Columbus power project explain their plans, and heard Gov. Bryan tell of his efforts to "protect the people."

The meeting was called to give members of the league better opportunity to understand the projects. Bryan and representatives of the federal PWA were invited to present their sides of a controversy which arose over conditions Bryan placed in water right grants for the two projects. Mullen is attorney for both projects.

Interrupts Governor's Speech.

Mullen interrupted Bryan once during his talk to ask who was meant by his reference to a "political lobbyist." Just before the governor finished speaking, the big Omahan left his chair in the audience and marched to a point near the speaker's table as Bryan closed his expression of hope the projects would get under way soon. Mullen stod there, occasionally shaking his head angrily as Bryan explained he had not intended to involve personalities.

While the crowd cheered Bryan, L. C. Westwood of Tecumseh, vice president of the league, who presided, told Mullen he could not speak, but when the applause ceased, Mullen addressed the chair.

When Westwood told him publicly he couldn't speak then but might be permitted to do so later, Mullen turned to the audience and shouted:

Starts to Talk Anyway.

While Westwood threatened to appoint a sergeant at arms to conduct Mullen out, the Omahan started to tell his side of the story. He got as far as to say, "those false statements made by this governor . . ." But then the crowd, in which were numerous employés of Bryan's departments, shouted him down. A few in the crowd hissed and booed Mullen while cries of "sit down, put him down" where heard from different parts of the hotel auditorium.

C. E. Beals of Crete, league secretary, persuaded Mullen to take his seat. The room was in an uproar.

When the disturbance subsided Westwood shouted to the audience that Bryan's remarks about discovering contracts for attorneys to get 2 per cent of the cost of some public projects didn't refer to Mullen.

"Well, that's what I wanted to say," Mullen said, popping out of his seat and swinging his arm in midair."

$7,500 NOT PAID, WRIT ISSUED FOR MRS. BLACKLIDGE

An attachment was issued by the clerk of the Superior court late yesterday for the arrest of Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blacklidge, former collector of internal revenue, when she failed to appear to file a $10,000 bond pending her appeal of a $7,500 judgment recently returned against her by a jury in the Superior court. The jury's verdict ordered Mrs. Blacklidge to pay that sum to Susanne Nottingham, wife of Norman Nottingham, driver of a patrol wagon for the Grand Crossing police district, for alienating the policeman's affections.

As a verdict of guilty in an alienation of affections suit carries a clause stipulating that the affections in question were stolen "maliciously," Mrs. Nottingham is entitled to jail Mrs. Blacklidge for six months for failure to pay the judgment. Mrs. Nottingham would have to pay the county 60 cents a day for Mrs. Blacklidge's board in the county jail.

This telephone, merely an extension from the one in the other room, appears on the wall in many present-day kitchens just as it did in the "House of Tomorrow." Conveniently at hand but out of the way when not needed, it can be used to make or answer calls without the user having to leave the kitchen and neglect the things in the oven. This extension, as well as those in other useful locations in your house or apartment, cost very little, and they all help to make yours a home of tomorrow as well as today. AUSTRIA TO RAISE IMPORT QUOTAS ON U. S. PRODUCTS

Rejoices It Has Greater Outlet for Wines.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, Austria, March 19.—An increased share for Austria in the American market for wines and spirits is the gateway through which, in turn, more American exports will enter Austria this year.

The United States has just raised the quota of Austrian wines to 50,000 gallons for two months. This rate for one year would be 300,000 gallons. It is estimated the rate will practically absorb all of the country's wine surplus. This does not mean that this quantity will be sold but it assures an outlet for a product Austria is most anxious to market.

In turn, it is expected that the Austrian import quotas for American automobiles, lard, machines and fruit will be boosted. Austrian trade authorities believe that exports of Austrian wines, which are of high quality, to the United States will play a big part in reducing that 6 million dollar trade deficit for Austria with the United States.

Trade Emissary Returns.

Raising the Austrian wine quota follows the recommendations of J. H. Hughes, American commercial attaché here, and also as a result of direct negotiations by Joseph Loeschnig. Loeschnig has just returned to Vienna after a visit to the United States to negotiate trade development on behalf of the Austrian government and the lower Austrian Chamber of Agriculture, of which he is president.

In discussing the results of his American tour which he found highly satisfactory Loesehnig said:

"It was the task of my delegation to pave the way for the export of Austrian wines to the United States and gain the support of the American government for Austrian export plans. Our negotiations with officials in Washington have been accompanied by complete success.

Sees Boost in Trade.

"We confidently expect that the raising of the American import quota for Austrian wines will soon lead to intensification of Austro-American trade on a considerable scale."

Leading American exports to Austria are automobiles, cotton, copper, and lard. These absorb the biggest part of 8 million dollars' worth of exports sent here last year. Next in importance are oils, greases, tobacco, apples, phosphates, typewriters, prepared lether and dry figs. Then come dynamos and motors, cash registers, auto parts, adding machines, rubber tires and rags [for paper manufacture].

In return for augmentation of these exports to Austria, attention will be given by Austrian trade authorities, besides the wine exports, to the export of products of artisanry, or applied arts, and luxury goods, textiles, and small de luxe manufactured articles on which a large number of Austrians are employed.

Here Are Trade Figures.

The actual status of trade between Austria and the United States for the last two years is best illustrated in the following figures:

	In 1932	In 1933
AMERICAN EXPORTS TO AUSTRIA.
In tons	69,000	83,000
In dollars	6,483,780	8,795,980
AMERICAN IMPORTS FROM AUSTRIA.
In tons	5,841	21,177
In dollars	1,746,000	2,775,000
In schillings	15,145,000	18,881,000
AUSTRIAN DEFICIT IN TRADE.
In dollars	4,737,560	6,020,950
In schillings	41,049,000	41,183,000

[A schilling was quoted yesterday at 18.90 cents.]

These figures refer to Austrian trade only as it concerns America. Minister of Commerce Stockinger considers the outlook bright for a general business improvement in the country.

Exports Show Increase.

In a recent statement he announced that the export of manufactured goods for January, 1934, was 25 per cent higher than for January, 1933. At the same time there was a corresponding increase in imports of raw material.

For 1933 the entire volume of Austrian exports to all countries increased 8½ per cent and through severe restrictions on purchasing abroad the general trade deficit was reduced.

For a period of several years the excess of imports over exports in Austria, according to Stockinger, ran up to about a billion schillings, whereas this excess now has been reduced to 376 million schillings.

After wine the Austrian ministry of commerce is stressing the tourist business as its next best hope to reduce the unfavorable trade balance.

Money spent by visitors to Austria forms a vital item of revenue. It is estimated that there are about 1,200 places which tourists visit and that 3,753,000 individuals visited them during 1932. Thirty-six per cent of these visitors came from abroad and of this per cent more than half were Germans. Americans formed about two per cent of the total.

Austria is hunting the American tourist trade.

By Bob Becker

Steers Out Foraging

March 19, 1934.

BOTH the Hereford steers and the sows here on the farm are walking around in the "wide open" places these days. After being shut up for some months, these animals have been turned out in fields where cornstalks are still standing. Here they can rove around as much as they please, and while covering ground they can pick up considerable food. The animals are using last year's cornfields. In this interim before plowing time when the fields will be turned over and seeded for another crop, the stock will have a chance to act as gleaners to pick up the last bits of food left. Incidentally, this going through the fields stunt results in a reduction in the feed being fed the steers. However, they haven't forgotten where the free handouts of hay have been coming from. When it gets feeding time the herd makes a beeline for the yard with its feeding racks filled with hay.

Between 50 and 60 new feathered residents are looking for quarters on the farm. These are pheasants [grown birds] which were turned out by Lloyd Johnson, manager of the state game farm. The state conservation department is coöperating with the experimental farm in an effort to increase both pheasants and quail, so Johnson came over with several crates of birds to be released. Although the experimental farm is not a hunting preserve, the nesting of these adult pheasants on the property or adjacent land is going to increase the pheasant population in this whole area.

The birds were turned out at the top of a long slope which drains toward the river. Below this slope is a marsh filled with heavy vegetation, the kind of cover that the pheasant likes. When the coops were opened out rushed the ringnecks, taking to wing immediately. Some of the birds climbed straight up to get an idea of the lay of the land. Then they turned and sailed down to the marsh, dropping in the thick grass and disappearing.

Clarence and I were talking today about increasing the cover and food all around this slough so that the pheasants will have a more ideal location. The idea is to plant all the flat, fairly well drained spots which are next to the wet, marshy areas with early maturing sorghums, millets, corn, and possibly tall Sudan grass. This would make a thick jungle of growth for the birds, one which has plenty of food, too. We are going to have several of these cover and food areas on the farm. We picked out a couple more spots this afternoon.

Sleezer, Guenther, and Johnson are still occupied with the job of hauling fertilizer to the 80 acre field, which before the plow goes through it and corn is planted, will have been completely covered. The boys have just about finished hauling fertilizer to the pastures which are going to be reseeded in the farm experiment to build up grazing areas. Sleezer has one farm horse hitched to his outfit that seems to thrive on this hauling job. Her name is Bess. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon, after Bess has been hauling heavy loads all day, she still acts like a firehorse that has just heard a 4-11 alarm. [I gave her a wide berth yesterday afternoon after I heard her snort and saw her ears go up.]

When not hauling fertilizer the boys are making the farm look very neat with new fencing, and hauling the old, discarded rolls of wire from the

MAN AND WOMAN KILLED AS TRAIN SMASHES TRUCK

A man and a woman were killed last night when the light delivery truck in which they were riding was struck by a fast passenger train, the Intercity Limited, Chicago bound from Montreal, on the Grank Trunk railroad at Western avenue and 143d street in Posen.

The man was tentatively identified through tracing the truck's license plates as Paul Wolshlager of Kouts, Ind. Among the woman's effects was found a letter addressed to Pinkie Cregar, 2117 West 65th street. Both victims were about 60 years old.

The truck apparently had been proceeding north in Western avenue when the crash occurred. The bodies were carried for some distance along the tracks.

These two deaths and two others increased the toll of motor deaths in Cook county since Jan. 1 to 262. The other victims were:

Parker Darritano, 12 years old, 9324 Luella avenue. Killed last night when he skated into the path of an automobile at 88th street and Merrill avenue. The driver of the car, Edwin Mowry, 25 years old, 216 East 56th street, was held for the inquest.

Unidentified man, about 56 years old and fairly well dressed. Fatally injured last night when he walked into the side of an automobile at 74th street and Cottage Grove avenue. The driver, Lawrence Weir, 24, of 7648 Langley avenue, took the man to the Jackson Park hospital, where he died.

SAFE DRIVING URGED AS CITY RANKS 2D IN MOTOR DEATH RATES

Pointing to an increase of almost 50 per cent in Chicago auto fatalities since the first of the year as compared with the corresponding period in 1933, the Chicago Safety council yesterday made an appeal to the city's motorists for safer driving. At the same time the council made public a tabulation of motor fatalities in large cities in 1933 showing Chicago has the second highest auto death rate per 100,000 population.

"With the 1934 World's Fair approaching, every effort must be made to prevent automobile accidents," said T. J. Carney, president of the council.

The following table prepared by the National Safety council, gives the rank of the cities by the death rate per 100,000 population, the number of deaths in 1933 and the death rate.

Rank. City.	Deaths.	Rate.
1—Los Angeles	463	31.9
2—Chicago	846	23.6
3—Cleveland	196	21.9
4—San Francisco	125	18.5
5—Buffalo	104	17.5
6—St. Louis	145	17.3
7—Pittsburg	117	17.1
8—Detroit	295	16.5
9—Philadelphia	324	16.3
10—Baltimore	131	15.8
11—New York	1,937	14.1
12—Boston	109	13.8
13—Milwaukee	73	11.9

Mr. Carney said records of the traffic division of the police department listed 218 auto fatalities from Jan. 1 to March 18 of this year. For the same period of last year 145 deaths were recorded.

CLAIM ESTATE OF R. W. STEVENS OWES NO TAX

That the estate of Raymond W. Stevens consists mostly of debts, and that no inheritance tax is due, was the claim made yesterday, when the tax return was filed in the Lake County court at Waukegan. Assistant Attorney General Charles Noll is investigating the claim.

The return, filed by the law firm of Kirkland, Fleming, Green & Martin, on behalf of the widow, Mrs. Anna Hull Stevens of Highland Park, lists total assets at $1,707.23 and debts at $249,113.97.

The largest of the debts is $241,500.45 owed to Gen. Abel Davis as receiver for the Illinois Life Insurance company. Mr. Stevens killed himself on March 28, 1933, following the collapse of this concern.

Attorneys for Ernest J. Stevens, former official of the Illinois Life Insurance company who is under a one to ten year prison sentence for embezzlement in connection with the collapse of the company, presented a bill of exceptions yesterday to Judge Michael Feinberg preparatory to an appeal to the Supreme court. Ernest J. is a brother of Raymond Stevens.

BUSINESS MEN'S GROUP EXHIBITS OWN ART WORK

Landscapes and portraits, artistic products of leisure hours of members of the Chicago Business Men's Art club, lined the galleries of the Chicago Lighting institute, 20 North Wacker drive yesterday for the opening of the club's annual exhibition. Some 43 paintings, all in oils, represented the work of 32 club members, each of whom is connected with some professional or industrial pursuit in Chicago, according to Richard Pride, chairman of the show committee.

For many years the club has provided a retreat for the ministers, attorneys, merchants, bankers, and others who make up its membership. The studios at 63 West Adams street are used at all hours of the day, Mr. Pride said, by these men, who have found painting to be their chosen hobby.

Members of the club will assume the rôle of instructors for special classes which have been arranged for three or four evenings during the show, which will be open every day until March 31 from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. The galleries will be closed on Saturday and Sunday evenings.

Unhurt in Minor Crash, Dies from Heart Attack

Unhurt by a minor accident in Joliet yesterday, C. H. Westaway, a Chicago salesman, collapsed and died of heart failure at the wheel of his machine soon afterward. The truck, which bumped the rear of Westaway's car, drove away. The salesman's car rolled to the curb and stopped. A few moments later a passer-by found Westaway dead over the wheel. He lived at 1315 Foster-av. in Chicago.

GOV. HORNER APPROVES HOUSING BILL FOR CLEARANCE OF SLUMS

Springfield, Ill., March 19.—[Special.]—Gov. Horner tonight signed house bills 4 and 5, the Adamowski-Ickes housing bills. They carry emergency clauses and become effective at once. The bills provide for the creation of public corporate bodies to be known as housing authorities and confer upon and vest in housing authorities all powers necessary or appropriate in order that they may engage in low cost housing and slum clearance projects. They give the state bodies authority to avail themselves of federal funds for housing.

HOUSE PASSES FILIPINO BILL FOR FREEDOM

Washington, D. C., March 19.—(AP)—With the president of the Philippine senate nodding assent, the house today passed and sent to the senate a bill for independence of the ilands which its authors said would be acceptable to the Philippine legislature.

Quick action was expected by proponents of the bill in the senate. Debate started there soon after house passage.

The measure reënacts most of the provisions of the law providing freedom for the ilands which expired recently because of failure of the Philippine legislature to carry out its requirements. Under the new bill the legislature is given until Oct. 1 to call a constitutional convention.

Under pressure from the President, who is anxious to dispose of the legislation, the bill received almost unanimous action in the house. Few members opposed it during debate and it passed without a roll call.

REDUCE YOUR HAULING COSTS WITH THE NEW FORD V-8 TRUCK

NEW FEATURES OF RELIABILITY

Trim as a fighter. Tough as the toughest road. Fit and ready to handle the hardest jobs you can give it.

The Ford Motor Company today announces a New Ford V-8 Truck—unequaled in ruggedness, performance and low cost per ton-mile.

This New Ford V-8 Truck has been designed as a truck and built as a truck, with reserve strength and power for the toughest job. There has been no compromise between truck and car requirements. Every part is full truck size. Every part has been made to deliver the utmost in operating efficiency and stand up under maximum punishment. It is the truck you need to cut costs and increase profits in 1934.

New Full Floating Rear Axle

Full floating design means that the full weight of the truck and load is carried on the axle housing and the axle shafts are left free to transmit the driving forces from the engine to the wheels. Greatly increased strength throughout entire design. Specially heat-treated axle shafts. The sturdy driving pinion is straddle-mounted. Larger pinion shaft and pinion bearings. Positive lubrication. Larger thrust plate. Wider, stronger teeth on driving pinion and ring gear. Differential gear bearings are spaced to equalize bearing pressure. Heavier rigid axle housing and more rigid differential housing, with additional strengthening ribs. Axle shafts can be removed at any time without jacking up the wheels.

A Special Truck-type V-8 Engine

The engine of the Ford V-8 Truck develops 80 horsepower at 3800 r. p. m. The Ford horsepower is actual horsepower. Dynamometer tests show that the Ford V-8 engine delivers a greater output of horsepower per gallon of fuel than any other Ford engine ever built.

New Durability—New Dependability

New durability—new dependability—and still better performance and economy have been built into the New Ford V-8 Truck. Here are five important new features of the engine.

1. NEW, HIGH LEAD, BRONZE CONNECTING-ROD BEARINGS. The same type of costly bearings used in racing cars and airplane engines which operate under the most trying conditions.

2. NEW TRUCK-TYPE CYLINDER HEADS. Newly designed combustion chambers, combined with dual carburetion, give more horsepower with lower compression. Capable of withstanding the most severe heavy-duty service. Exceptional performance from regular fuels.

3. NEW DUAL CARBURETOR, with dual intake manifold, increases engine efficiency at all speeds and gets more miles from every gallon of gasoline. Also makes starting easier in cold weather and minimizes crankcase dilution.

4. NEW WATERLINE THERMOSTATS. These automatic mechanical valves enable the engine to warm up quickly and maintain the most efficient operating temperature.

5. NEW OIL ECONOMY, because of new aluminum piston design, baffle plates, new oil pan tray and new engine features described above.

Cities have personalities

London is a man in tweeds striding along the Thames ... Paris—a lovely lady with a parasol ... Rome—a stately patriarch with a spirit of eternal youth.

Philadelphia is a large family enjoying the comforts of home! Here is a City that is devoted to home living ... a City where four out of every five families live in individual homes.

Philadelphia as a market is third in size in America. As an industrial center it has earned the title—"Workshop of the World". As a port it ranks second on the Atlantic Coast. In arts, education, medicine, and a host of other accomplishments, it is second to none.

Philadelphia has 70,000 more single-family homes than New York City; 155,000 more than Chicago; more than all of Cleveland, Detroit and Boston added together.

Nowhere else in America has the art of home living been developed to such an extent.

Philadelphians are willing to spend more for the privacy of an individual home. They are willing to equip basement laundries, install individual heating plants, furnish more rooms, buy more rugs and draperies, equip full-sized kitchens, furnish and enclose porches, and do the constant painting and repairs.

Natural circulation—normal growth

The circulation of The Evening Bulletin always reflects the natural, normal demand of Philadelphia for this newspaper. Premiums, prizes, circulation contests, or sensationalism in the handling of news have never been used to stimulate Bulletin sales.

If you make something that will add to the comfort or convenience of home living, bring it to Philadelphia—the greatest home center of all.

Philadelphians have made it easy and economical to reach them by their overwhelming preference for one newspaper. The Evening Bulletin is read in nearly every home in Philadelphia and suburbs.

504,822 net paid daily during 1933. Two and one-half times the circulation of any other Philadelphia evening newspaper; more than any Sunday newspaper; more than all morning newspapers combined.

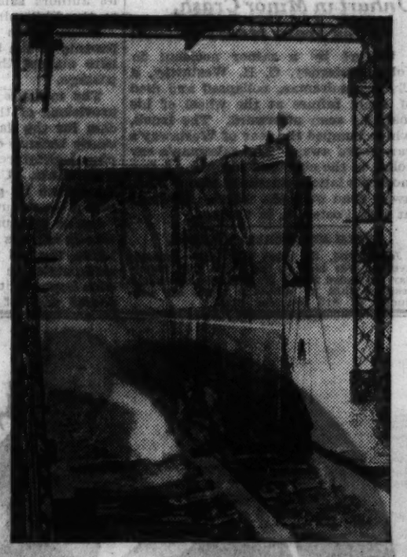
Follow other advertisers to profitable sales in this great home market through The Bulletin. (In 1932 and 1933 more national linage appeared in The Bulletin than in any other six-day newspaper in America.)



Port of Philadelphia leads United States in ship-building

The Port of Philadelphia led all United States ports in new ship tonnage built during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1933, according to the United States Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection. Gross tonnage built amounted to 66,359 tons. New York ranked second; Boston third, and Newport News fourth.

CHART DEPARTMENT

Bulletin coverage of higher incomes in Philadelphia. (City only)

65,229 families have incomes of $5,000 and up

60,245 Bulletin circulation—92% coverage

The figures on families, incomes, and Bulletin circulation in this important income group are taken from the Philadelphia Newspaper Reader Survey by the American Association of Advertising Agencies. These figures furnish additional evidence from an unbiased source that "Nearly Everybody Reads The Bulletin" in this important buying-power group.

Miss McLennan Will Be Bride of John Morse

Engagement Announced at Family Dinner.

BY JUDITH CASS.

FROM the east, from the west and from the north—only as far north as Milwaukee, however—came the guests who were present last night at the family dinner party given by Mr. and Mrs. Donald R. McLennan at their home in Lake Forest to announce the engagement of their daughter, Margaret, to John B. Morse.

Mr. Morse, the son of Mrs. George Richardson of Lake Forest, and Samuel F. B. Morse of Del Monte, Cal., arrived yesterday morning for his spring vacation from Yale, where he is a senior; his sister, Miss Nancy Morse, one of the most feted of this winter's debutantes, just returned on Sunday from a visit to her father; Miss Katherine McLennan came from school at Dobbs Ferry; Noyes McLennan came from Hotchkiss, and Mrs. George H. Noyes and Mr. and Mrs. Haskell Noyes, mother and brother and sister-in-law of Mrs. McLennan, came from Milwaukee to be present at the announcement dinner and to drink a toast to the engaged couple.

Also present were Mr. and Mrs. Richardson, Donald R. McLennan Jr., who was graduated from Yale several years ago, and the former Jane McLennan and her husband, Woodbury S. Ober, who live in Lake Forest.

Miss McLennan, who served for six weeks last fall as a courier with the Frontier Nursing Service in Kentucky, is one of society's most charming young women and is immensely popular and greatly admired by all who know her. Simplicity of manner and a dignity not often found in one of her years characterize her, and the congratulations that will be showered on Mr. Morse will be genuine and hearty.

Wedding Will Be in July.

Miss McLennan was graduated from the Masters school, after which she spent two years at Smith, making her debut in the fall of 1930 when she was attending college. After she left Smith she spent a year abroad.

The wedding will take place in July, shortly after Mr. Morse is graduated from Yale. He is following in the footsteps of his father—grandson and namesake of the inventor of the telegraph—in taking a bride soon after he finishes his college career, for young "Sam" Morse was married to Miss Anne Thompson of Staatsburg-on-the-Hudson the week after he finished at Yale, where he was captain of the 1906 star football team. The wedding took place on June 29, 1907, at Staatsburg.

"Jack" Morse and his fiancée have been friends for years, but the announcement of their engagement comes as a surprise to most of their friends. He is a very popular young man both at home and in New Haven, where he is active on the Yale Record Board and in athletics, especially ice hocky and football, although he did not play on the varsity football team as his father did. He prepared for college at St. Paul's.

Miss Edna Kellogg to Wed Floyd Parker.

Another interesting engagement announcement, made at a Sunday luncheon by Mr. and Mrs. Ernest R. Graham at their home near New Buffalo, Mich., is that of their niece, Miss Edna Kellogg, to J. Floyd Parker, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Alley Parker of New York.

Miss Kellogg, who lives at 43 Cedar

Good Morning!

Jimmy Cagney's brother LOOKS like Jimmy Cagney—but there's only ONE James C., as Gentleman Jim offers proof.

Here you have the belligerent, hard-fisted, smart-cracking, wide-smiling little chap as you want him.

He gives you all he's got in a good yarn that's not as are all other good yarns.

As Jimmy Corrigan, he cashes in on missing heirs. Looks 'em up, and, if he can't find 'em—finds 'em anyway.

His rival in this remunerative business is one Walsingham, a smooth gentleman whose assistant is a blonde named Joan. She once had worked for Jim.

The establishments and staffs of the two men are as different as could be imagined. Jim's is one of the "Hey, Dearie, hope you choke" variety. Walsingham goes in heavily for swank, serves afternoon tea and his satellites have taken pointers from the conduct of some of our best people. . . .

For reason pix shall show you: Jim pays a visit to the latter's emporium. He departs gurgling with tea and fairly crushed by the magnificence he has encountered. So THAT'S what Joan likes! What has lured her away from him. . . .! James goes and does likewise. [According to his lights.]

The result is overpowering. . . .

The activities of the rival heir discoverers furnish much merriment and considerable suspense for the observer—and none there is who doesn't clap hands over Gentleman Jim's final coup that partly caps several climaxes.

The plot is neatly unfolded and characterizations are smartly drawn.

And—score one more for that swift-thinking, hard-punching young Mr. Cagney, who has proved that a fellow doesn't have to be an Adonis to win the dames either on or off the screen.

See you tomorrow.

International Flower Show Opens at N. Y.; Exhibits Set Record

New York, March 19.—(AP)—Five acres of flowers sent out a heady spring fragrance today as the twenty-first international flower show opened with the largest number of exhibitors and the greatest variety of blooms on record.

As New York shivered, outdoors, thousands of fur coated women and overcoated men crowded and pushed to get a glimpse of rock gardens, quiet pools, old fashioned dooryards, formal landscapes, and flowers of every description. Mary Pickford of the movies and Lily Pons, the opera singer, drew crowds as they welcomed visitors.

The exhibit was officially opened by Sir Frederick William Moore, for 43 years curator of the famous botanic gardens at Glasnevin, Ireland, and honorary master of judges at the show.

Prizes and premiums to be given through the week amount to $40,000. There are nearly 400 competitive events. J. P. Morgan won eight first prizes.

Women Laugh as Mae West Rescues G. O. P.

Washington, D. C., March 19.—[Special.]—The Republican party, dismayed and shattered, found hope of better days ahead when Mae West was made chairman of the Republican national committee tonight and agreed to put some life in the Grand Old Party. The scion of the screen had a chance to accept a position with the Democratic régime, that of minister to Denmark, but she decided that she liked her own deal better than the New Deal and refused.

"Denmark's too cold for me, Mr. Farley," she said, "even if Ruth Bryan Owen has warmed it up a bit."

Mrs. Roosevelt and the wives of cabinet officers and diplomats watched Mae make her choice at the annual dinner of the Women's National Press club at the Willard hotel tonight. The first lady and the rest laughed heartily at take-offs of themselves and others prominent in national life.

"If there's anything I know about it's the gold standard," Mae murmured. "I've always been on the gold standard."

A scene in "Little America" satirized Mrs. Roosevelt's travels. Three members of Admiral Byrd's party, huddled in furs over a campfire, saw a visitor approaching.

"My God, it's Mrs. Roosevelt!" they gasped.

The Teddy branch of the Roosevelt family, to the delight of Alice Roosevelt Longworth, who was present, demanded a shorter work week in order to spread employment among needy Roosevelts.

"There's unemployment in our branch of the family. I insist on an 84-hour week," the T. R. representative said.

Then the troublesome problem of child labor came up.

"In behalf of Paulina," said the T. R. representative, "I ask that Sistie and Buzzie and all the other little Roosevelts in your branch of the family be forbidden to write books, magazine articles, syndicated newspaper articles and to make radio talks until they're sixteen."

"Wives of Senator Black's Victims" was the title of another skit. Mrs. Walter F. Brown, Mrs. James A. Farley, and Mrs. William P. MacCracken were the wives.

"Now, then, Walter Brown," said Mrs. Brown, "I can't fine you for contempt of the senate, but I want to know one thing and I'm going to know it. Did Jim Farley say that to you, or didn't he?" and Mrs. Farley, in a blonde wig, made the same demand of her husband.

"You may kid the senate, but you can't kid me. Did you say that to Walter Brown or didn't you?"

Stores Report Good Gains in Easter Trade

Demand for Spring Clothes Best Since 1929.

That the Easter shopping spirit is "in the air" was indicated by the throngs which filled stores and jostled along the streets yesterday. Executives of various stores were jubilant over the sharp rise in business, with special reference to the ready to wear departments.

"With Easter as early as it is, we were expecting somewhat average buying because of the prolonged winter weather," said one executive. "Already, however, the demand for spring clothes and accessories has swept beyond that of last year. We are anticipating the best business since 1929."

Increased purchasing power has apparently imbued Chicagoans with a desire for quality goods, another merchant explained. Likewise, the fact that women are selecting whole outfits 'to match' rather than a single dress or hat, is gratifying to merchants.

Further indications of Easter were seen in gayly decorated candy shops, their windows filled with the traditional chocolate bunnies and candy eggs. Fascinated youngsters could be seen gazing at the dazzling white Easter bunnies blinking quietly in the windows of several pet shops.

Florists throughout the city characterized the increase in spring buying as "wonderful!" The orders for forget-me-nots and gardenias, roses, and orchids have almost equaled those for the popular Easter lilies, so far, one shop reported."

Preparations for the annual spring flower show were reported under way at the Garfield Park conservatory by August Koch, chief horticulturist. Besides an abundance of lilies, already blooming, hyacinths, hydrangeas, and daffodils will be on exhibition from March 31 to April 15, according to Mr. Koch.

City's Italians Celebrate Feast Day of St. Joseph

Chicago Italians celebrated yesterday the feast day of St. Joseph, patron saint of the Italian people. Special church services were held and feasts and other celebrations were held in hundreds of homes. The celebration took a more vivid turn in the west suburbs when nearly $1,000 worth of fireworks were shot off on the farm of Thomas Naples, in Leyden township, between Franklin Park and Melrose Park. The display attracted thousands of sightseers.

Breezy Styles Await Cheers of Young Set

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Fashions have to be good, if you would lure the fancy free youngsters in to see a new collection, but there are some breezy new things in town now that will make the most scoffing young bunch pause and linger to cheer for the winners. Certainly a young and breezy person designed them, a talented and extremely versatile genius, who dashes off a comic strip, writes a column, and in spare moments designs some of the most alluring young clothes of the year.

The names alone will make you chuckle, but the dresses will make you yearn with envy for a slim young silhouette. Imagine the supreme joy of being slim and dewy enough to wear a devastating dinner dress facetiously labeled "Pickaninny," a fetching affair of yellow, gold crêpe, cunningly fashioned to cling, to climb high at the front neckline, to drop, a bit daringly low at the back waistline, in the manner of a most sophisticated gown for a large 36.

Then to become demure, almost circumspect, with a knockout short quilted jacket squarish in cut, necked with a wisp of a bandana collar—the whole thing made of red quilted chintz material, just the spring evening ensemble you've needed to reimpress a certain lad on your list.

"Anytime Annie," another heart-breaker, is made of robin's egg blue, with long sleeves, and a row of zig-zag buttons down the front and a high collar line, a find for the sleepyhead that stays abed to the last minute and then struggles with a frock that is peppered with buttons. Usually proper souls design them with buttons that must descend in straight rows; this time they are buttoned in a delightfully casual manner, hit and miss style!

"Two Beaus Have I" braggingly names a clever two piece combine. The white pique blouse ties under the chin with a bow, while the black crêpe skirt ties over the tummy with another and matching white pique bow. "Tommy Tuckin" is a two piece affair with a blouse that tucks in with bows and lacing at the neckline and hipline for decoration.

"Checkered Career" is a suit of big black and white check with big black, shiny buttons racing down the front of the jacket that covers a white pique blouse. This collection is just as refreshingly different as the witty names of the models and should be enormously popular.

First Student Will Complete Course Under New U. C. Plan Today

The first student at the University of Chicago to complete all undergraduate work under the university's new plan, is George F. Mann of St. Paul, Minn., and he will be given a bachelor of arts degree today at the university's annual convocation.

He entered in the autumn of 1931, and, under the rules which permit able students to proceed faster than their fellows, he won the college certificate in a year and a quarter. That would ordinarily take two years. Now, he has completed the B. A. requirements in a total of two and a half years—a course normally taking four years.

In the exercises at the university chapel today, a total of 313 degrees and certificates will be conferred. Vice President Frederic Woodward will preside, and Dr. Edgar J. Goodspeed, biblical scholar, will deliver the convocation address.

Among the 42 students who are to receive the master of arts degree is Paul N. Stewart, 25 years old, 7746 Essex avenue, who has been blind for some years. The degree will be in history. He holds the B. A. from Bradley Polytechnic institute.

Law Fraternity.

The Chicago alumni chapter of Phi Alpha Delta law fraternity will be addressed tonight by Dr. Harry Hoffman, director of the behavior clinic of the Cook County Criminal courts. The meeting will be held at the Hamilton club.

True Sisters to Meet.

Lincoln No. 22, United Order of True Sisters, will have a guest day program at 2 o'clock Saturday in Washington hall in the State-Lake building. Carleton Smith will speak.

A Vicious Circle

By ALICE CAMPBELL

SYNOPSIS.

Dorinda, known as Dodo Quarles, is found stabbed to death following a dinner party in her Paris apartment. Dodo, who was untrammeled by scruples or breeding, had served a drug to her guests. Helen Roderick, who was a friend of Dodo's deceased mother, was staying with Dodo. She didn't attend the dinner, but awakened early in the morning and discovered the crime and Dodo's guests lying about in deep sleep. She is able to arouse her friend, Tommy Rostetter, a journalist. Tommy's dinner partner was Dinah Blake, an American artist, whose engagement to Christopher Loughton, in the American embassy, was, according to rumor, broken on account of Dodo. Dinah is not among the sleeping guests.

INSTALMENT VIII.

SUSPECTS.

With painful effort they roused the dreamers and confronted them with the horrible reality in their midst. Tommy derived a cruel satisfaction from the process, not sorry to see his own recent sensations duplicated. But if he had hoped to witness some betrayal of guilty knowledge, he was doomed to disappointment. As far as one could judge, the entire eleven passed through identical stages of stupefaction, shock, and moral collapse, so that when all were fully awake he was not astonished to note covert glances of suspicion dart from one to another.

Dinah's absence had so far passed unnoticed. Helen had agreed to let them find it out for themselves, though just why Tommy had exacted this promise from her was hard to explain. Perhaps, knowing what these people were like, he had foreseen their avid anxiety to shift blame on to other shoulders. At any rate their present behavior justified his most cynical expectations. No grief here, only panic stricken fear of inconvenience, scandal. Not one, least of all the gigolo, cared anything about the unhappy girl whose hospitality they had enjoyed. They neither loved nor hated her. Casual friends or mere acquaintances, all drawn together by curiosity of the most idle sort.

With one exception—Bannister Mowbray. Last evening was nothing novel to him. But then, as Tommy had argued, what would Dorinda's death profit him? Abject, deflated, he leant now against the mantelpiece, brow clammy with sweat, tongue exploring the surface of his dry lips. Manifestly terrified, his impassivity shaken to the roots. But only, one imagined, because he was envisaging the bad hole he was in as the purveyor of a drug which had rendered murder possible.

"Thirteen! Who's missing? Is it—? Yes, of course! That red-headed American girl. What's become of her?"

The coffee arrived, hot and strong. While it was being drunk Tommy slipped quietly into the hall and telephoned the local commissariat. He returned to see Rita Falkland rise with an odd look on her face, and ran a swift eye over the assembled party. Suddenly she emitted an hysterical shriek.

"Thirteen! Who's missing? Is it —? Yes, of course! That red haired American girl. What's become of her?" She seized on Helen convulsively. "Did you know she was gone?" she demanded accusingly.

Tommy intervened with firm authority.

"Sit down, please," he commanded. "Yes, we know it. When Miss Roderick came downstairs she found the door open, so I should think at some time or other Miss Blake decided to go home."

"You think!" Miss Falkland rounded on him with furious indignation. "What right had you to keep back a thing as important as that? Why, if we'd known that girl had left here . . . but it's absolutely obvious now who did it. No one else had any real reason to ——"

Miss Falkland subsided angrily, and with revived assurance began to repair her ravaged complexion. Tommy scanned the hostile faces. Human wolves, ready to fall on the one member of the pack who showed weakness. Peter Hummuck, who had been shuddering as with palsy, now wore an alert, relieved air. Ronald Cleeves exhaled a long breath and looked towards Mowbray, who with shaking fingers essayed to light a cigaret. No one spoke, but presently the ominous silence was broken by a shuffling movement near the door. Tommy wheeled, caught hold of the Argentine by the shoulders, and hauled him back to his place.

"O, no, I think not, Mr. ——, I'm afraid I didn't catch your name."

"Da Costa—Ramon da Costa," supplied the gigolo with a black expression. "Et pourquoi ——"

"Mr. da Costa, your place is here, along with the rest of us. Sorry, Miss Falkland, but it's quite useless to think of leaving. The police are on their way here now."

"What impertinence!" raged the actress, her thin cheeks fiery red.

"Listen, please!" Tommy stationed himself before the doorway with a stern glint in his eye. "Since some of you appear not to grasp the situation, perhaps I'd better make it clear. Every person present, including Miss Roderick and myself, is a potential suspect. For our own interests we've got to face the inquiry in a body. Now! Have I made that entirely plain?"

"The only thing plain to me," retorted Miss Falkland, quivering with animosity, "is that you're determined to shield that girl—that murderess. How do we know you didn't help her get away? You were pally enough with her last night."

"O, do be quiet!" urged Miss Gault wearily. "He's right, of course. If we go, we're only asking for trouble."

Tommy, well aware of the curious glances bestowed upon him, preserved an imperturbable air, though inwardly he was both annoyed and apprehensive. He continued to stand guard, while the women fidgeted and rolled their handkerchiefs into balls, Hummuck directed at him a baleful glare, and Mowbray and Cleeves, withdrawn to a corner, conversed in low whispers. Five interminable minutes ticked by, then a thunderous pounding on the outer door set the company trembling anew.

A second later Benedetto ushered in two officers in uniform—an inspector, small, sallow, and hawk eyed, followed by a heavier built subordinate. The couple swept the scene with incredulous eyes. Swiftly their gaze passed over the littered room and its occupants, coming to rest on the couch. The inspector's nostrils dilated.

"Mesdames—messieurs!" he rapped out sharply. "What have we here? A suicide?"

Suicide? No one had thought of this as a possible explanation. Several drew in their breath, but before any one could speak Tommy stepped forward with businesslike gravity.

"That, Monsieur l'Inspector, is for you to decide. What you see is what we, ourselves saw when we woke up, a short time ago. Shall I tell you what we know?"

Miss Falkland and Hummuck sought to interrupt, but were peremptorily silenced.

"One at a time, please. I will hear what this gentleman has to say first. Now then, monsieur?"

In fluent French Tommy gave a terse outline of events. At the mention of the drug the listener compressed his lips tightly, but although he made no comment he was evidently in some confusion as to how to proceed in an affair which had no parallel in his experience. He took refuge in summary brusqueness.

"Yes, yes, that will do for the present. You say that one of the guests, a lady, is missing. Her name? Address? Good!" He wrote rapidly in a note book. "Did any one see her go?"

Eager denials came with a rush. The inspector raised his hand to stem the torrent of protestations.

"The entire party, then, was under the influence of this drug. You came here for the purpose of trying its effects?"

Another negative chorus. The inspector's lip curled with disbelief, and Tommy, recalling the knowing expectancy of several faces when the drug was passed, shared the other's silent contempt. All very well to swear, as they now did, that each and all of them, Mowbray and Cleeves excepted, were taken in by the jest. To his thinking Miss Blake and he were the only innocent persons.

Worcestershire Sauce Creates Menu Miracles

BY MARY MEADE.

Foods should twinkle with flavor. Sail in with them to the table and [my own idea] circle it once, trailing streams of tantalizing odors to envelop the family and start noses to twitching and eyes to shining. Plant it proudly before papa and rustle for your chair. And your little act is done—the family will manage the rest.

They will, that is, if each masterpiece tastes as good as it looks and smells. And one way we've been discovering here lately to make certain of this is by playing about with bottles of peppy, pungent Worcestershire sauce ready in our hip pockets, so to speak. For we're too often guilty of figuring Worcestershire as simply an added lusciousness for meats, and giving it no chance at all to show what excitement it can lend to a whole roster of other dishes.

Try cocktails, as a starter. Even pernickety folks are coming to hail chilly tomato juice as a grand opener for husky American meals. But it develops, from tests we've made, that they go for it that much more avidly if it's made really deserving of the name cocktail by the addition of flavor dashes. So next time to one cupful of tomato juice add a dash of salt, a teaspoonful of lemon juice, and a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce. Stir it up, chill it, and watch them like it.

Likewise, we've spoken before of the tang which half and half tomato and sauerkraut juice, or tomato and shrimp or oyster liquor, will give to the opening course. But here's a new one. The next time you cook celery, simmer it in not too much water and save the liquor which remains. Combine this with tomato juice and pep it up with dashes of the flavor advised above. You'll be surprised!

But on with the meal. Soups over which every one will um and o are turned right out of soup cans and given added zest by two teaspoonfuls of Worcestershire sauce along with the hot soup just before it's to be served.

And mashed potatoes turn out tasty and tempting if, when beating them up, you will add one or two teaspoonfuls of Worcestershire sauce along with the salt, hot milk, and butter. To give the height of fluffiness to this dish add also ½ teaspoonful of baking powder to each two cupfuls of mashed potatoes, and beat well. Serve very, very hot.

Still on the Irish problem, creamed potatoes and potato cakes are sometimes pretty sad affairs unless we turn a most serious thought to their seasoning. But spring upon the family the creamed fellows or the cakes, distinguished with onion juice and Worcestershire sauce dashed in to suit family palates, and there you have something!

Likewise white sauce. The old truism that America is a mountain of mashed potatoes surrounded by a sea of white sauce would sound much more appetizing were we to be sure that the white sauce would really invite us with its pep and tingle. Onion sauce is a good notion here. And when creaming meats, fish, or vegetables, try also a dash of this esteemed sauce under discussion. "More!" will be the slogan, and second helpings will become the rule.

And, to polish off with an Italian flavor. I beseech you, don't turn the family away from the honorable macaroni family, with all its spaghetti and noodle relatives, by sorrowfully underseasoning its dishes. Tomato sauce is the logical starter, and to it should gravitate a squirt of onion juice, some salt, Worcestershire sauce, and plenty of heat. Add this to swirls of cooked macaroni or one of its cousins and, ergo!—a dish for which whole families will scramble!

Snow Crystal.

BY NANCY CABOT.

Here is a favorite among our English sisters as well as among American women. In early New England days the diamond was used in making "best quilts," and the combination of diamond and hexagons makes a good looking quilt that is used only for "state occasions." "Snow Crystal" is made of blue, soft pink, and white on a light blue block, and alternated with a plain white block.

Selfishness in Child Largely Parents' Fault

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

"Let's see—where is that contract . . . maybe it's in this pile—— By the way John, look at this paperweight Bob made me for my birthday," said a father to his friend the other evening.

He held out an elephant modeled in clay and glazed and fired. "His teacher told me he worked over a month on it."

The friend looked it over carefully. "It's fine, Sam," he said. "You ought to be proud of it . . . I would be . . . but I've never had a present from my children. I'm afraid they're a pretty selfish lot even though we do so much for them. O well, I suppose most children are that way these days."

Are they? Not unless you make them so. It's up to you. These things are largely a matter of training—not in words but by example. And that needs explanation, for there are some kinds of unselfish examples that can create selfishness.

Do you do everything for your children? Do you lavish things on them? And then do you complain because they're selfish?

But why not? If things fall upon them like manna from heaven how can they help being selfish?

That's not the example of unselfishness I mean—not the over-indulgence that springs from unwise love and unwise sacrifice. I mean a different sort of example.

Training in unselfishness comes in a household where the members of the family really feel a consideration of each other and show it. Such consideration may take a number of forms—the giving up of an easy chair, not taking the biggest and poppiest popover on the plate or the last piece of cake or a real willingness to help get supper or wash the dishes.

street, where she often entertains in delightful style, attended St. Mary's of the Woods in Indiana and then St. Elisabeth's college at Convent, N. J. She has been living in Chicago for the last two years, having come here from New York, where she sang with the Metropolitan Opera company for three seasons. She was a member of the Chicago Grand Opera company last winter.

Mr. Parker was graduated from Princeton in 1919, having returned there to graduate after serving in the world war in the military intelligence division of the United States army. He is connected with Ira Nelson Morris. The wedding is planned for April 19 at the Graham residence, 25 Banks street, and shortly after that Mr. and Mrs. Parker will leave for a European wedding trip.

Edith Cummings' Wedding April 7.

Invitations were received yesterday to the wedding reception of Miss Edith Cummings and Curtis Burton Munson on Saturday, April 7, at 5 o'clock at 1550 State parkway, the residence of Miss Cummings and her mother, Mrs. David Mark Cummings. Only relatives and a few intimate friends are invited to the ceremony.

With a member of European royalty, Princess Aleka Rostislav, the lecturer, and the members of the Emmerson Settlement house board, the sponsors, Orchestra hall should be filled tonight with one of the most fashionable audiences of this Lenten season.

For an hour the princess will be the center of attention as she turns the pages of her memoirs and recounts the exciting events of her life. The audience that will hear her will come from dozens of dinner parties at private homes and clubs and move on afterwards to late supper parties.

Mrs. Warren Ripple Going South Today.

Mrs. Warren Ripple and her son and daughter, Warren Jr. and Honoré, are returning today to Charleston, S. C., where they have been living since last fall, with Mrs. Ripple's mother, Mrs. Lockwood Honoré. They came to Chicago a week or so ago for a visit with Mr. Ripple, who moved in with his brother, Roy Ripple, when his family went to Charleston. The Warren Ripples and Roy Ripple have apartments at 42 East Elm street.

The Warren Ripples' apartment has been occupied this winter by the James N. Rawleighs, who plan to move out to their Winnetka home in the late spring. Their sons, Jimmy and Billy, will arrive in Chicago Thursday for their two weeks' vacation from the Harvey school in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan D. McClure and their son, Nate Jr., have motored to Fairview, N. C., to spend young Nathan's spring vacation from St. Albans school with Mr. and Mrs. James G. K. McClure of Hickory Nut Gap farm.

Mrs. Robert B. Gregory has just forgone a month's vacation in Arizona to stay here in Chicago and take part in the journalism class she has organized for the Girls' Friendly society, of which she is the honorary president.

This is especially interesting news in view of the fact that we reported Mrs. Gregory's return to the School of Domestic Arts and Science for a table setting course less than a fortnight ago.

Elisabeth Bunting Returns from South.

Miss Elisabeth Bunting, the Henry S. Buntings' daughter, is at home from a month's visit with the George A. McKinlocks in Palm Beach.

Mrs. Alice Barton Hatch, who has been living at the Knickerbocker this winter, has gone out to Hinsdale for a month's stay with her brother and his family, the Jesse Bartons. Mr. and Mrs. Barton are occupying the old family homestead of the late Judge Barton.

To the newly formed Junior Auxiliary of the Vocational Society for Shut-Ins fell the task of sending out invitations to the society's sale today at 900 North Michigan, and they want to assure the public that every one is invited even if an invitation didn't reach you. The luncheon served during the last sale held in the 900 building proved so successful that it will be repeated today.

Arts and Crafts Day at Winnetka Club.

The handiwork of several dozen north shore residents will be on exhibit today at the Winnetka Woman's club. The occasion is the club's annual arts and crafts day.

In addition to the still life exhibits this year, Mrs. William F. Conlon is going to give a spinning demonstration and the story of basket weaving and pottery making will be enacted for the guests.

Mrs. Montague Ferry, who is chairman of the day, is showing a screen she has made. Mrs. John Vennema will have some of her sculpture on exhibit and Mrs. Van Wagenen Alling will display some of her needlework. Miss Lucy Driscoll is to talk on "Color in Visual Art."

Mrs. William K. Meyers, Mrs. Walter Glass, Mrs. George Davie Jr., Miss Jean Winslow, Miss Louise Nelligar, Miss Blix Nichols, and Mrs. L. E. Mitten will be the models this afternoon at the bridge tea and fashion show the Kenilworth Branch of Infant Welfare is to have at the Kenilworth club.

At 2:45 o'clock this afternoon in the club rooms of Le Cercle Francais in the Fine Arts building Mlle. Madeleine Monnier, cellist, will give a program before the members of Le Cercle and their guests. Mlle. Monnier received a special fellowship from the French government to establish musical relations between France and the United States. At the tea which will follow her recital Mrs. Howard W. Fenton will be hostess.

Woman's Ad Club.

The Woman's Advertising club will meet at 6:15 this evening at the Chicago Woman's club, 72 East 11th street. Dr. George F. Cady, assistant professor of economics at Northwestern university, will discuss "Advertising Opportunities Today from the Standpoint of the Consumer."

Perfume Enhances or Detracts from Woman's Personal Charm

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Were you, too, under the impression that the nose is lined with skin, as is the back of the hand?

It isn't so. The lining is a delicate membrane like that of the mouth, but it is highly specialized as to its cellular consistency, its blood vessels, and its nerves.

This we learn from Dr. Irving Wilson Voorhees' article on what the nose knows, in a current health publication.

Smell and taste are closely associated, Dr. Voorhees tells us. And that is why food has little or no taste when one has a cold. The nose is blocked, odors do not reach the olfactory nerves, and therefore all things taste alike, or "like so many chips," as the saying goes.

But what we femmes are likely to be most interested in is Dr. Voorhees' "nasal memory" analysis. There is visual memory of things, such as places visited and the beauty of flowers, sky, and sea. There is aural memory, such as that of a symphony musical composition of some kind. And there is nasal memory.

"The young lover," says Dr. Voorhees, "knows the scent of the adored one, and he lies awake inhaling, in his imagination, the aura of her sweet presence. In her turn, she takes great pains that no emanations from her body shall bring disgust to his nostrils and, in order to intensify the bewitching influence of her personality, she makes free and frequent use of the essence of flowers in adorning herself for his coming."

About those emanations that bring anything but happy dreams to the boy friend, and which no flower essence will hide, there is a true story, of recent happening, to tell. The girl in the tale had been out of work for months. Finally, she got a chance at a job—but it did not last because of complaints from co-workers in the close confines of the office. Whether it was due to nervous excitement, which sometimes does cause excessive perspiration, or not meticulous enough care of person and clothing, apparently does not matter. It is the sin of being an offender. Girls and women are pretty cautious about this sort of thing, so that one who does stand out as careless simply magnifies her carelessness.

Span Chamber Music History in One Concert

BY EDWARD MOORE.

An interesting example of what our ancestors of a few centuries ago used to listen to in chamber music was presented by the Amy Neill String quartet at the Chicago Woman's Club theater yesterday afternoon in a concert under the auspices of the Musicians' Club of Women.

The first work on the program was the earliest known composition for string quartet, written some time before 1650 by Gregorio Allegri of Rome and called "Symphonia à 4," or symphony for four. This was followed by two "Fantasias" written in 1680 by Henry Purcell of London.

They are excellently made examples of a manner of composition of a former time, and likewise of a manner that the world has pretty well left behind. Interesting as they are, one is fairly well convinced that composers have learned a few things about string quartet music. These works are more than anything pieces of tightly knitted counterpoint, constantly restless and finally coming to an end rather than working up to a climax.

The difference was shown when the Amy Neill String quartet moved to the next number, the quartet in C by Mozart. By this time, a century later than Purcell, a taste for tunefulness had come upon the world, and in the final number, a work of the same nature by Dohnanyi, there was tunefulness in the idiom of the present generation.

The Amy Neill String quartet is one of the best of its kind. Its members are both artists of fine tone and of alert, accurate ensemble. Their only trouble as far as Chicago is concerned is that they do not appear often enough.

Members of the Chicago club of Phi Beta music and dramatic art fraternity will hold a mock broadcast at the Chicago Musical college, 64 East Van Buren street, at 8:30 o'clock tonight for the benefit of the club. J. Franklin Caveny, artist and sculptor, will headline the program with a demonstration of studio activities. Miss Coyla Spring is chairman of arrangements.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

Spring getting you? Feel the usual impulse around this time of year to dash downtown in a feminine frenzy for a new bonnet, a print dress, and a whole smear of bright color accents? On your hunt give a thought to a new makeup, or, better still, if you want a real spirit lifter, a new perfume.

And if you want bargains give a careful inspection and a pointed little sniff to some handsome boxes you'll find lying on cosmetic counters all over the town, wherein, at a price that will amaze you, you'll find powder and a generous little bottle of perfume that matches it exactly in fragrance.

They're not new powders or new perfumes; they've been on the market for years and tremendously popular with thousands of women. But they're now in bright new overcoats—delicately pretty boxes and bottles, and, this being the day of beauty bargains, the pair are sold for the price of the powder alone.

There are four delightful fragrances, all of them rather exciting blends—and it's astonishing, at least to us simple creature that we are, how the makers have captured with such fidelity in the powders the exact scent of the perfumes. It can't be particularly easy to do.

Matching powder and perfume scents is a pretty good idea, too. Lots of the most conservative women vastly prefer to do this rather than run any risk of having a clash of odors. If the two aren't exactly the same, the choice of the perfume, at least if the powder has a decided fragrance, must be arrived at cautiously.

Worth's Stunning Knit Suit Comes in Brilliant Red

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Knitted sports wear is about as near perfection as it is possible to get, with the best of the Paris houses concentrating on new and beautiful stitches and colors.

Knitted clothes are kept simple and young in line necessarily and the novelty comes in the color and the surface. This spring the knitted suit with a raised white fleck in the surface is smart. Worth makes this suit with that kind of stitch and in the newest red, American beauty. Reds with yellow in them are being dropped from Paris styles, and the real rose and bluish reds come to the front.

This model has a hiplength jacket with bands of plain ribbed red outlining the patch pockets, the sleeves, and the neckline. The belt is of black suede with a silver buckle. The skirt is plain and has a front and back seam.

The knitted blouse is made of white flax yarn and has a ribbed yoke effect at the shoulders, ribbed short sleeves, and a ribbed band bordering the round neck and the slit in front.

Feminine Voice from Back Seat Infuriates Men

The Family Car Problem Is Perpetual.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Remember, a while back in this column, how one Mr. and Mrs. were wrangling over who should drive the car downtown? Paw, you recall, thought it undermined his dignity to sit along side Maw at the wheel.

Well, that automobile incident struck a responsive chord in a number of wounded hearts, apparently, proving the modern adage that "when a car comes in the garage, love doesn't fly out the window, exactly, but it goes on a rampage of some sort."

But the back seat driver still remains the motor curse! Detours, accidents, delays, bawling out of cops, being handed a ticket, are minor incidents in effect, compared with the voice heard from the rear seat. Since it is a woman's voice back there, we gather that the well known music in her voice simply does not come over musically in a car. More than that, we infer that no matter what a man may think about a woman's place, he feels that his is at the wheel.

Jimmy Mac says he's a mild mannered man, can take as much home abuse as any good natured husband or father, but if there is one time he sees red it is when Maw or some of her female relatives try to tell him how to run the car. He's willing to grant that women are a nervous, high strung lot, but he also is willing to state that many of our accidents would never happen if Maw and her females could manage to suppress that desire of theirs to speak a piece from the back seat.

A friend of the one quoted is more blunt in his stand. He posted the following on the windshield for the benefit of back seat drivers. "If you want to drive this car, take the wheel or shut up." It is working effectively, h claims.

Helena Crozer Becomes Bride of Richard du Pont

Miami, Fla., March 19.—(AP)—In a setting of palms and tropical flowers, Miss Helena Allaire Crozer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Crozer of Philadelphia, and Richard K. du Pont, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Felix du Pont of Wilmington, Del., were married here today at Trinity Episcopal church. The ceremony was attended by about 30 relatives. Young du Pont, 23, and his bride, 20, left immediately after the wedding on a honeymoon trip by airplane, the destination of which was not announced.

CONQUERING CONTRACT

By A. HAL SIMS

THE THREE NO TRUMP RESPONSE.

As I said yesterday, the requirements for this response are at least three primary tricks and one more in distributed form. That is a hand on which you would open the bidding in any position.

Since you will never have passed with such a hand, there will be occasion to make this response only to a first or second hand opening bid; consequently your partner's opening bid will never require confirmation from him as to its being a regular one—I mean not a defensive psychic or near psychic, such as are sometimes made in third hand position with a trick—or less—and a long weak suit.

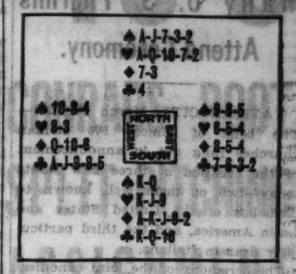
One positive requirement of this response is a minimum of one ace. Four sets of kings and queens are not sufficient. This is through the fact that we allow shaded bids with an aggressive hand. Your partner may have opened with ace-jack x x x ace-ten x x x x and two singletons. Over a three no trump response he will show his other suit and then nothing will keep you out of a slam and the opponents will make both of those aces. The only exception to this rule is four sets of kings, queens, and jacks, as it is doubtful if your partner would open then with less than three aces.

Try to Locate Aces.

Since aces are required for slam purposes, especially when an evenly distributed hand is held by at least one of the partners, avoid making this response unless you hold two aces, or such a hand that your primary values in king-queens and kings are so high that it is obvious that your partner could not have had primary values for a normal opening bid unless he holds two aces. Can you be sure that at most one ace is in the hands of the adversaries? In this event you may make the response with only one ace.

If the opener responds with another suit over the three no trumps, the slam try is accepted. But should he rebid his original suit he is showing a six card suit and suggesting a willingness to drop the bidding at game.

Here is an example of the three no trump response with only one ace:



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 Sp.[1]	Pass	3 N. T. [2]	Pass
4 Ht. [3]	Pass	5 Di. [4]	Pass
5 Ht. [5]	Pass	6 N. T. [6]	Pass
Pass	Pass

1. An aggressive hand. Bidding the higher ranking suit first.

2. There is no conceivable holding that would give North an original bid that did not contain two aces. No opening lead can cause the loss of a trick if coming up to this hand, consequently three no trump is bid instead of a forcing takeout of three diamonds.

3. Showing the second suit and accepting a slam try.

4. With the spade ace and the heart ace definitly located, South is anxious to get information about the club ace. He, therefore, bids diamonds.

5. If North had the club ace he would now show it. The bid of five hearts therefore shows an aggressive two suited hand lacking the club ace.

6. A sure contract.

It will be seen that six spades, six hearts, or six no trumps can be easily made with this hand. But it was played in a duplicate game, match point scoring, and all the players bidding six no trumps received higher points than those playing six hearts. In one instance the club ace was shut out and the six heart bidder scored 210 points for making all the tricks, but six no trumps also scored the same amount. The game and slam bonus scores are, of course, the same in either declaration.

The Stage

The leading personalities of the week's vaudeville programs are Bobby Clark and Paul McCullough, the comedians who have been stars in a number of revues and who are now supplying the cinema business with numerous comic "shorts." They racket around the stage of the Palace "in person," Clark with cigar, cane and fake spectacles, McCullough in his coonskin coat, making whoopee in their customary manner. They are eccentric clowns with a style that is definitly their own.

Mary Rogers, daughter of Will Rogers, will make her stage debut in a "Reunion in Vienna" company that is scheduled to start a tour through Canada March 30. She will play one of the minor roles. Under the name of Mary Howard she has acted for the films.

The Showman's League of America, a national organization of managers and performers with headquarters in Chicago, will sponsor a benefit performance in the Rainbo Gardens May 24. The proceeds will go to the league's cemetery fund.

The Milwaukee Drama festival, which is scheduled for five weeks in the Pabst theater of that city, beginning April 9, will consist of the following plays:

"Peter Ibbetson," with Violet Kemble-Cooper and Rollo Peters; "The Pursuit of Happiness," with Walter Slezak; "Meet My Sister," with Walter Slezak and Nancy McCord; "The Shining Hour," with Violet Kemble-Cooper; "Charlotte, Emily and Anne" [formerly called "The Brontës"], by Alfred Sangster, and "Enter Madame," with Eugenie Leontovich. DANCE! DON'T RUB IT IN, GWEN! IT'S ALL I CAN DO TO WALK AT THIS TIME OF THE MONTH!

FIDDLESTICKS: YOU'RE COMING AND YOU'LL BE YOURSELF, TOO. I'LL TELL YOU HOW TO END "REGULAR" PAIN:

AND SHE DID!

Yes, the girl who once gave-in to periodic pain has found a way to snap out of it.

Even those women who have always been "knocked flat" may now go through this time in perfect comfort.

The treatment is explained here. It's simple. It's perfectly harmless. It doesn't interfere with Nature's necessary process; all it does is block the pain. And this is all you have to do:

Watch the calendar. Just before your time, take a tablet of Midol, followed by a large glass of water. The usual pains may not start at all. But if you feel one twinge, take a second tablet.

That's all! Relief is complete, and lasts for several hours. Two tablets should see you through your worst day. Your period becomes just an incident. No need to "favor" yourself, or "keep off your feet." Keep your dates, and keep active.

Midol is not a narcotic. Don't be afraid of the speed with which it takes hold. Don't hesitate to try it, for it has helped thousands of desperate cases. Just ask the druggist for Midol—today, so you'll be prepared.

POPE CREATES 3 NEW SAINTS; ONE A CARMELITE NUN

Many U. S. Pilgrims Attend Ceremony.

VATICAN CITY, March 19.—(AP)—The bells of almost 500 Roman churches rang out in announcement of the creation of three new saints today—two of them well known to Catholics of the United States and Latin America, and the third particularly dear to Italians.

The ceremony of the joint canonization came to a climax in St. Peter's before a congregation including hundreds of American pilgrims, when Pope Pius pronounced the solemn Latin words ordering the names of the Blessed Teresa Margherita Redi, Pompilio Maria Pirrotti, and Giuseppe Benedetto Cottolengo inscribed in the catalog of the saints.

U. S. Pilgrims at Rite.

Many of the devout pilgrims who joined in the te deum of welcome for the newly sanctified were from United States, where the order of Carmelite sisters, to which Saint Teresa belonged in life, has 26 chapters. Saint Teresa's order is likewise represented by numerous chapters in Argentina, Cuba, Peru, Chile, Brazil, and Colombia.

Also close to the hearts of Latin American pilgrims was Saint Pompilio, one time confessor of the schools of the Scolopii, an organization represented by institutes in Buenos Aires, Havana, Mexico City, and other Latin American cities.

Pope Pius began the canonization according to custom, by entering the cathedral in the Sedia Gestatoria, or portable throne.

Six silver trumpets heralded the approach of the pontifical procession. The pope's throne was borne by attendants garbed in red velvet. Other attendants held aloft an embroidered throne canopy. Still others slowly stirred the air in the pope's immediate vicinity with huge ostrich feather fans.

Noble Guards Line Alle.

Noble guards lined the alle, with muskets at attention, as the procession advanced toward the main altar. Swiss guards with their halberds and papal gendarmerie in tri-cornered plumed hats and black knee boots over white breeches, guarded the entrances and altars.

The ritual required three cardinals to approach the pope—now enthroned near the central altar—and petition to declare the blessed trio of saints. After the third request the pontiff rose and, donning his tiara, pronounced the words that made them saints.

At the offertory of the mass which followed three cardinals, in token of gratitude for his action, gave the pope a keg of wine, one of water, several large loaves of bread, and cages containing pigeons, doves, and small birds.

Saint Teresa was born the daughter of a knight in Arezzo, Italy, in 1747 and died 22 years later in the Carmelite convent of Florence.

Postulators for her cause for beatification said her face and hands retained the natal taint of life after painful death of a stomach ailment in 1770.

She was beatified in 1929. Since then, postulators say, two additional miracles of healing have been attributed to her divine intervention.

49 NAZIS GO ON TRIAL IN RUMANIA; 3 NAMED AS PREMIER'S KILLERS

BUCHAREST, Rumania, March 19.—(AP)—One of the biggest trials in the history of Rumania began today when 49 Nazis, members of "the iron guard," appeared before a military court. Three were charged with the murder of the late Premier Ion Duca and the rest with conspiracy.

Nicholas Constantinescu, the student who confessed he fired the shot, and two other defendants charged with the murder, were present and must remain standing throughout the trial, which is expected to last a month.

As each of the defendants answered the call, he glanced at the Iron Guard leader, Corneliu Codreanu, who was arrested a few days ago. Codreanu returned the silent greetings. A crowd surrounded the building but only a favored few entered as the courtroom was filled with 703 witnesses and 20 lawyers. The court itself was composed of five generals since one of the accused is Gen. Contuzuzina.

LEACOCK AVERS CAMPUS WORK RUINS STUDENTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., March 19.—An attack on campus activities which prevent college students from becoming learned was made here today by Prof. Stephen Leacock of McGill university, well known writer and lecturer.

"Learning for learning's sake," he said, "cannot survive amid a tumult of students' clubs and students' activities, a fierce and continued excitement of contested games, enthusiastic politics, student elections and mimic journalism.

"Student activities are destroying the student. Soon we must set up in the campus a monolith, 'to the unknown student'."

BLAZING METEOR TURNS NIGHT INTO DAY IN CANADA

EDMONTON, Alta., March 19.—(AP)—Flashing its brilliant, greenish light over scores of square miles, a huge meteor burned a pathway from the heavens to the earth last night, turning darkness into daylight.

It illuminated the sky at Saskatoon and far outshone the municipal airport's beacon. It was viewed from Calgary and a score of places. It was believed to have exploded and disappeared in dust near Bashaw, about 100 miles southeast of here, where houses were reported rocked by the explosion.

BEGIN MARRIAGE RITES OF ANNAM'S EMPEROR TODAY

Bride-to-Be, Who Forsook Catholicism, Arrives.

HANOI, French Indo-China, March 19.—(AP)—Pretty 18 year old N'Guyen Huu Hao, commoner of Cochin-China, who has renounced Catholicism to wed Emperor Bao Dai of Annam, arrived in the capital of the ancient empire today for the marriage. The ceremonies will begin tomorrow.

A delegation of the 21 year old emperor's family met the bride-to-be a short distance outside the city in the "valley of the clouds" and escorted her into the capital.

Throngs of Bao Dai's subjects welcomed their future queen as she drove through gayly bedecked streets to the palace, dressed in a long tunic, the traditional Annamite costume.

Public Discontented.

Discontent among the populace was general because the bride is a Catholic and more French than Indo-Chinese. Even if she renounces her religion and turns Buddhist, many of her future subjects feel their traditions would be violated.

The discontent was reported to extend even to the royal palace, where the three dowager queens—widows of the late emperor—are believed to have had candidates for the rôle of queen.

The marriage ceremonies will be held in the strictest privacy with only members of the bride's and bridegroom's families—and the happy couple—present.

The state ceremony will be held March 24, when the insignia of the empress will be conferred in the presence of the entire court.

Say Vatican Gave Permit.

VATICAN CITY, March 19.—(AP)—Church prelates said today that if Emperor Bao Dai of Annam really is marrying N'Guyen Huu Hao, the bride has received the necessary ecclesiastical dispensation to permit a Roman Catholic to marry a Buddhist.

They also said that the fact of the marriage indicated that the emperor has finally given his consent that children resulting from the union be baptized in the Roman Catholic church. A week ago it was said definitly that the dispensation had been denied owing to a lack of this promise.

The matter was being kept strictly secret for political reasons and the prelates would not state officially whether the Pope's blessing accompanied the 18 year old French convent girl as she goes to a Buddhist altar.

HELD AFTER SHOOTING CHARGE.

Frank Verago, 45 years old, proprietor of the Division hotel, 2749 West Division street, was held by the West North avenue police yesterday on the complaint of Abe Weinret, 27 years old, who said Verago had attempted to shoot him during an argument over a hotel bill.

LAKES TO GULF WATERWAY TO BE OPENED FRIDAY

Act to End Bridge Tieup Above Ottawa.

From Chicago to New Orleans, the lakes to the gulf waterway will be open to navigation next Friday. The northern stretch of the waterway, between Chicago and Peoria, will be opened that day and reports yesterday stated that the river will be free from ice. Navigation between Peoria and New Orleans has been open since March 1.

But the same bridge tie-up at Morris, Ill., about half way between Joliet and Ottawa, which last year prevented large tows from coming any farther north than Ottawa, will hamper trafic this year until August, at least, it was revealed.

New Bridge Under Way.

A new bridge is being constructed to replace the old bridge at Morris and the Wisconsin Iron works, contractor, has placed 24 hour shifts of men on the job. But until the new bridge is completed, the old one may not be torn down, according to a war department ruling. This ruling followed the filing of a petition for an injunction in the local courts, restraining the destruction of the old bridge until the new one is finished.

Engineers estimated yesterday that the new bridge should be finished in August. Another week or ten days will then be required to destroy most of the old one. One pier of the old bridge will be left to furnish the foundation for a municipal dock.

Break Up Big Tows.

Until the obstruction at Morris is removed, big tows must be broken up at Ottawa. Two barge and four and six barge tows must be handled two abreast, north of that point. Maximum tonnage is held down because of this necessity.

Total tonnage in the Illinois waterway, the link from Lockport to Utica, which was not opened until the middle of last June, amounted to 111,285 up to Jan. 1, 1934. Total tonnage for the entire Illinois river in 1933 was 293,472, as compared with 189,176 during 1932. The increase in the Illinois river was almost 60 per cent over 1932.

Towboat Heads North.

The towboat, William T. Warner, which is able to pass under the old bridge at Morris, left Memphis last Friday, en route up the Mississippi and Illinois rivers to resume her operations into and from Chicago. She is expected here by Friday to take care of Chicago barges, southward-bound.

In comparison with the tonnage figures cited above, United States engineers have declared that a 5,000,000 yearly tonnage on the waterway should be possible. Trafic will be kept down to the comparatively small tonnage of a few hundred thousand tons until the bridge problem at Morris is dealt with, it was pointed out.

PLAYOFFS FOR HOCKY TITLE TO START TONIGHT

Rangers to Battle Maroons.

New York, March 19.—[Special.]—Due to a change in the Stanley cup playoff schedule, the New York Rangers, defending champions, will open their third-place total-goal series with the Montreal Maroons at the Montreal forum tomorrow night instead of Wednesday night as had been previously announced.

The shift in dates is due to the fact that the forum rink had for some time past been signed up for Wednesday night for an important playoff game in one of the leading Canadian amateur hocky leagues. Manager Lester Patrick of the Rangers announced today that it was impossible to change the date.

The teams will return here for their final game on Sunday night at Madison Square Garden. The winner of the series will then meet the winner of the Canadiens-Chicago series in another two-game total-goal battle for the right to play the winner of the Detroit-Toronto first place playoff for the Stanley cup.

HAWKS START TRIP

Manager Tommy Gorman had the Blackhawks on the Stadium ice for a final practice yesterday afternoon preparatory to leaving last night for Montreal and the first half of the home-and-home series with the Canadiens which is scheduled for Thursday night. The second half of the series will be played at the Stadium next Sunday night. Total goals scored in the two games will determine the winner.

There were fifteen players in the Blackhawks' party. Jack Leswick, center player, who is hobbling about with a swollen ankle [the injury was sustained in the last game at Montreal] did not make the trip.

Gorman Is Optimistic.

"I think our chances of bringing the Stanley cup to Chicago are bright," said Manager Gorman before leaving. "I think the series we are about to play will be the hardest of the three we are likely to participate in. All season it has been a nip and tuck affair between the Hawks and Canadiens. We won three, they won two, the other finished a tie. We anticipate strong opposition, but if we can hold the Canadiens even or close in Montreal the advantage will be with us on the Stadium ice next Sunday. The Hawks have the fighting spirit and that is what I figure will keep the team in the running right to the finals."

Congratulations for Gardiner.

President Frederic McLaughlin, when asked about the forthcoming series said:

"The 1934 playoffs should be a thrilling race as there is little to choose between the six clubs. The Stanley cup games are not likely to be a "runaway" for any team. Two teams, the Blackhawks and the Canadiens took the season's series from the high scoring Toronto Maple Leafs, and on the other hand, the Maple Leafs had the better of the American division leaders, the Detroit Red Wings, on the season's play. The Hawks will enter the playoffs in fine physical condition. I believe they are destined to go places this time."

Charley Gardiner was the recipient of a flood of congratulatory telegrams for winning the Vezina trophy for goal tending by a wider margin than it has ever been won before. Gardiner allowed 18 fewer goals than his nearest rival, Lorne Chabot, of the Canadiens.

HONOR TWO HAWKS

TORONTO, Ont., March 19.—(AP)—The Toronto Maple Leafs placed three men on the 1934 National Hocky league all star team, announced tonight. The team is picked annually for the Canadian press by a poll of sports editors and hocky writers in National league cities.

Charley Conacher and Harvey Jackson were given the two wing posts and Frank [King] Clancy was placed at right defense. The Chicago Blackhawks were represented by Chuck Gardiner at goal and Lionel Conacher at left defense. The sixth position, center, went to Frank Boucher, veteran of the New York Rangers.

Lester Patrick of the Rangers, was picked as coach of the first team. Boucher and Patrick were named on the 1933 team.

The second team, as selected by the writers, consisted of Bill Cook of the Rangers, and Aurel Joliat of the Montreal Canadiens at the wings. Joe Primeau of Toronto at center; Eddie Shore of Boston and Ching Johnson of the Rangers at defense; Roy Worters of the New York Americans at goal; and Dick Irvin of Toronto, coach.

TWO TEAMS ARE SCRATCHED FROM LOYOLA TOURNEY

Leo, St. Rita, Quincy Fill Remaining Places.

Champions

FOLLOWING are the former winners of the United States Catholic high school basketball championship:

1924—Spalding Institute, Peoria, Ill.
1926—St. Xavier, Louisville, Ky.
1927—De La Salle, Joliet, Ill.
1928—De La Salle, Joliet, Ill.
1929—De La Salle, Chicago.
1930—De La Salle, Chicago.
1931—De La Salle, Minneapolis, Minn.
1932—St. Patrick, Chicago.
1933—Cathedral, Indianapolis, Ind.

Two teams were withdrawn yesterday from the field of 32 quintets which will compete in the eleventh annual national Catholic high school basketball tournament. The meet will start at Loyola university gymnasium, Loyola avenue and Sheridan road, tomorrow night. The squads are Augustinian academy of Carthage, N. Y., and St. Benedict's of Shawnee, Okla.

Augustinian's Invitation to participate in the meet was canceled when an investigation by Loyola officials revealed that several members of the team were over age and ineligible for prep competition. St. Benedict's failed to obtain faculty permission to make the trip to Chicago.

Quincy Replaces Augustinian.

Quincy academy, winner of third place in the Illinois state tournament, was named to replace Augustinian. Since two vacancies remained, it was decided to invite both St. Rita and Leo of Chicago to the meet. Leo and St. Rita, which finished in a tie for second place in the east section of the Chicago Catholic league, were to have played last night for a berth, but the game was canceled.

By bus and train the teams which will seek the national title won last year by Cathedral of Indianapolis, Ind., began to arrive. The first squad to reach the scene was St. Mary's of Stockton, Cal., the first representative of the far west in the tournament. Under the direction of Coach Carlos Sousa the team, winner of the Northern California league championship, held its first drill on the Loyola court.

Cathedral to Play in First Game.

Loyola's custom of having the defending champion open the tournament will bring together Cathedral and St. Catherine's of Du Bois, Pa., in the first game at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night.

Two other games will be played tomorrow night. In the second contest of the evening Catholic of Joliet, Ill., runnerup for the Chicago Catholic High School league heavyweight championship, meets Quincy academy, while in the other game St. John's Cathedral of Milwaukee, Wis., opposes the St. Stanislaus quintet of Bay St. Louis, Miss.

Continue First Round Thursday.

Eleven other first round games will be played Thursday. St. Patrick of Chicago, winner of the 1932 title, meets St. Joseph of De Witt, Ia., in one of the contests. Other games will see St. Philip, Chicago champion, against Columbia academy of Dubuque, Ia.; Marmion of Aurora against St. Mary's of Huntington, Ind., and St. Francis Mission, St. Francis, S. D., opposing St. Mary's of Niagara Falls, N. Y. The St. Francis squad is composed of full blooded Sioux Indians.

Whether the name of an eastern school will be added to the list of champions depends upon Pittsburgh, Pa., Central Catholic; Our Lady of Victory of Lackawanna, N. Y., and St. Joseph of Oil City, Pa. The south will present two strong squads in St. Stanislaus of Bay St. Louis, Miss., and Catholic High of Baton Rouge, La.

Campion academy of Prairie du Chien, Wis., and Cretin of St. Paul, Minn., will seek to bring the national crown to the north. Campion has three Chicago boys on its squad and has competed in the tournament several times.

Cambridge, Mass., March 19.—[Special.]—Franklin Delano Roosevelt Jr., son of the President, received his first taste of varsity rowing at Harvard when he sat in at No. 4 on one of the seven varsity crews which went outdoors for the first time this afternoon.

Roosevelt, a freshman, was called on to fill a vacancy in the varsity boat stroked by Roger Drury. Starting tomorrow he will row with the freshman squad, which will begin its outdoor work at that time. He is a candidate for stroke. He stroked and captained the Groton school before coming to Harvard.

Pat Hanley Signs for Three Years as Boston U. Coach

New York, March 19.—[Special.]—Leroy [Pat] Hanley, assistant to his brother, Dick Hanley, at Northwestern university, announced tonight he had accepted an appointment as head football coach at Boston university. Hanley arrived here late this evening from Boston, where he conferred with President Daniel L. Marsh and Athletic Director John Harmon.

Their negotiations earlier today had reached an impasse when Hanley demanded a three year contract. President Marsh and Harmon balked on the grounds that it was against Boston university's policy to sign a coach for more than one year.

Hanley accepted the appointment tonight after Harmon had notified him by long distance telephone that precedent had been waived and a three year contract was being forwarded to him. It is understood the agreement calls for $7,000 a year.

Hanley has been line coach and chief scout at Northwestern for seven years, going there from Haskell Indian institute with his brother Dick, where he also assisted Dick.

FONSECA GROWLS AS SOX RETURN TO DOUBLE DRILL

Somebody Is Going to Win or Suffer, He Says.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pasadena, Cal., March 19.—Opposition, 29; White Sox, 5. This record of the last three exhibition games in which the Sox were present—one against the Los Angeles Angels and two with the Chicago Cubs—was pretty well seared in Manager Lew Fonseca's noggin today as he took his hapless protégés to the practice grounds.

Manager Fonseca thought he had a fairly good team until he saw it against the Cubs. The lads had worked hard in the early days of the training camp, and perfect weather, it was thought, had permitted the fellows to progress with great rapidity.

How About a Quake?

Apparently, though, the unceasing fine weather has been too much for the athletes, especially the southern boys, most of whom have to get chilled once in a while to become thoroughly awake. The Sox find that they have one or two such boys, who probably won't become aroused unless they get caught in a blizzard on the trip back east.

Certain of the pitchers are the most severely affected by the soothing character of the Pasadena sun. Old Rockin' chair has got tired Ed Durham and, of all people, Ted Lyons. And there are several others who are wondering if October will ever come.

The Boys Are Languid.

There are other persons besides pitchers who are languid. Luke Appling had a good fielding average in the Cubs series mainly because he didn't get close enough to several double play balls to be considered in the picture. And Red Kress persisted in trying to make double plays with his back toward first base, the goal of his potential throws. Three catchers have been unable to throw to second base, though the Cubs gave them plenty of chances.

Today was to have been a day off, if the Sox had licked the Cubs. But the 12 to 1 blistering the Cubs administered to the Sox resulted in a double length drill, with emphasis on batting, a negligible requisite in the Sox's last three exhibition games.

Fonseca Is Nettled.

The Sox will go to Santa Barbara tomorrow for a game with the Seattle club. They then will return to Pasadena to prepare for the opening of their 14 game series with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Manager Fonseca, recalling that in the last three games Sox opponents have put on one seven run inning, one six run inning and two four run innings, said today he will not tolerate many more such sloppy sessions without making permanent replacement of individuals he considers responsible for such demonstrations.

Pitchers Dale Mills and Johnny Huck were released tonight. Mills was returned to Topeka and Huck went to Galveston on option.

DAILY FEE CLUBS PLAN NATIONAL OPEN TOURNEY

Plans for a national open tournament to be held in Chicago this summer will be discussed tomorrow afternoon at a meeting in room 1120 Lytton building, by representatives of the 70 daily fee golf courses in this vicinity.

Although the conference has been called by the Daily Fee association, which has offices in the Lytton building, the meeting is open to all daily fee courses, whether they are members or nonmembers.

Tom Walsh, vice president of the association, has written to the P. G. A. to see what arrangements can be made for the tournament.

Caddy Gets $100 for Blow on Head by Ball

Cleveland, O., March 19.—(AP)—A slice on a tee shot cost Aaron Sheinbart $100 today. When Sheinbart connected with the ball at the Beechmont Country club in 1931 it described a course which ended on the head of a caddy, John Di Rocco, standing on the adjoining fairway. The caddy sued for $2,000 damages. A jury in common pleas court today awarded him the $100.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

TIME CLOCK TICKS.

MIAMI, Fla., March 19.—[Special.]—Following custom, the Wake motored out to Hialeah Park Sunday morning for a confidential chat with Time Clock, winner of the seventh Florida Derby. For the benefit of readers wishing feed box dope and desiring to know just what aristocratic 3 year olds actually feel and say, we try to get acquainted early in the season, thus having entrée to their training quarters when they come to our Kentucky and Illinois tracks.

MACK GARNER.

Time Clock is a handsome black fellow who would capture feminine hearts were he assigned romantic parts on the screen. He was seated before the Brookmeade stable door in a white lounging robe with blue trimmings. It seemed rather ritzy until we recognized the stable colors of white, with royal blue cross sashes. We scanned the chap as we ventured "Good morning, Mr. Time Clock, I'm a reporter for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE." We wondered whether he would be high hat because of his social position and the wealth of his owner, or whether he was a regular fellow with whom one would sometime like to crook elbows when he was not in training.

This son of On Watch-Milfoil was cordial, not effusive, at the start, but later warmed up agreeably, leaving a favorable impression.

"Because I am young and inexperienced Trainer Bob Smith has warned me not to say anything to reporters which might involve me or the stable in criticism, but to refuse no information which press men have a right to ask," he replied.

"Of course, I want to know what you thought of the race and whether you could beat the same contenders again," we responded.

"The result was most gratifying," continued Time Clock. "Didn't I pay a nice price, $32.10 for $2? That, I suppose, was because of my defeat in my preliminary trial. I was disappointed then, too, but really felt I was not keyed up enough. That race surely did me good.

"Besides myself and Trainer Bob, I was anxious to win for the sake of my owner, Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloan. Sorry she couldn't be here. You know, she was in a Palm Beach hospital convalescing from a recent operation, but I imagine this Derby victory did her more good than her physicians.

"You saw the race and know how I won at the end. Well, I was outrun in the early stages and suffered some interference. That did not worry me. I had heard Smith tell Jocky Mack Garner the early pace would be fast and not to be disturbed if I was a half dozen lengths out of it on the back stretch. I would come in the stretch. That gave me confidence, as I felt that way, too.

"I was well in hand at the end and going away, which is a good sign for the Kentucky Derby, a furlong farther, and the Arlington Classic. The time, 1:49 1-5, was a new Derby record, and only 4-5 of a second off the American mark, equaled by Blessed Event a week ago. He carried 111 pounds and my load was 114. Moreover, the track was a trifle holding. If you won't think me an egoist, it really was a creditable performance.

"Our stable has been banking on Cavalcade for the Kentucky Derby. Trainer Smith hasn't talked to me about it yet, but I should think I'd at least be the second string to our bow at Louisville, wouldn't you?"

The Wake assured Time Clock we thought he'd be the first string, and the sleek, black coated fellow whinnied appreciatively, held out his foreleg in parting and said: "Well, if I'm sent to the Downs, be sure to visit me. I think I'd like newspaper work. In fact, I took a course in short story writing at Yale. Perhaps I'll become a turf reporter when I retire. Thank you for calling."

Tilden Defeats Cochet; Plaa Conquers Vines

Baltimore, Md., March 19.—(AP)—William T. Tilden kept Henri Cochet on the run with good placements and an occasional display of his famous cannon ball service to beat the Frenchman in five fast sets, 6-4, 4-6, 8-6, 3-6, 6-3, tonight. Martin Plaa pounded out a victory over Ellsworth Vines, 6-4, 7-5, 6-4.

CONRADS, ROOT SPLIT PITCHING ASSIGNMENT

Rookie Southpaw Does Well.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Ventura, Cal., March 19.—The Cubs ventured up here from Los Angeles today and tarried long enough to dust off the Portland Beavers in an exhibition game that netted a few hundred dollars. The score was 7 to 3 and Kewanee, Ill., papers are requested to take notice. The first five innings were pitched for the Cubs by Don Carlos Conrads, the 21 year old southpaw of that place. However, the kid's demonstration will not alter plans for sending him to Salina, Kas., shortly for ripening.

After Conrads had completed his task, in which wildness appeared to be his chief tormentor, the pitching assignment was turned over to the veteran Charles Root. The latter's work was sufficient proof that he hadn't been on the rubber since last fall. He was in distress in all of his four innings. On three occasions he was confronted with three on the bases, but in each instance got back under cover without permitting a run.

Everybody Hits.

To provide needed work for all the hands who made the bus journey up here, Manager Charlie Grimm ran in about everybody except himself, for which he couldn't be blamed. The subbing in most positions at the half way mark had no depressed effect on the Cub's inclinations to hit the ball. After Klein had hit two singles, Stephenson took his place and let loose a triple. Hack filled in for Jurges at short and set the high mark of the day with an inside the park homer. Giant Man Phelps also hit a triple, not to mention a single, but his successor, Benny Tate, found that too strenuous a pace. He hit nothing.

Under the guise of amusement the Cubs stepped up and slapped two runs across the plate at the expense of Ed Bryan in the first inning. Galan opened with a single through short, but was forced by Billy Herman. The latter scooted to third on Cuyler's single to left. Klein drilled a single past Sheely to move Billy Herman home and send Cuyler to third. Cuyler scored the second run of the inning on a single to left by Babe Herman.

Two More for Cubs.

The elongated Conrads surrendered only one hit in Portland's half of the first inning, but it was lengthy enough to be worth a run. Gilbert English, a former Giant, pushed a triple into the sandy, open spaces in right center with one out. He hiked home while Jurges was throwing out Coscarart.

Cuyler, Klein, Jurges and Phelps collaborated in the third and Bryan was forced to yield two more runs. Cuyler originated the idea with a two bagger down the left field line. He scored immediately on Klein's single to center. The next two fellows filed to Blackerby, who will be remembered as one of the many fleeting White Sox employés. Jurges hoisted a fly to center and it dropped safely, giving him his first hit in 21 times at bat. Klein went to third on the effort and home on Phelps' clean single to center.

Root in Trouble.

A double play saved Conrads from serious damage in the third inning despite two singles and a hit batsman, but his luck wasn't the same in the fourth. He was induced to give up two runs. A pass to old Earl Sheely, a triple by Cox and single by Bryan caused the disturbance.

Phelps put on a one-man act for a run in the sixth. The portly catcher tripled along the first base line and sneaked home while Galan was being thrown out by Bryan. Phelps, along with Conrads, then was excused and Root and Tate became the Cub battery.

Root immediately got himself into trouble. He fanned two in the sixth, but mixed in with the strikeouts were two clean singles and a scratch hit which filled the bases. Nothing came of this because Stephenson, who had

BY FRENCH LANE.

There has been such a plunge on the California colt Riskulus in the Kentucky Derby future books that odds against him have suddenly dropped from 100 to 1 to 20 to 1.

Two brilliant races at Agua Caliente won him the big following. Most of the backing came from California. One commission was for $2,100. It was wagered $700 to win, $700 to place and $700 to show. A group from Hollywood is reported to have made the bet.

Their wager was made about 10 days ago at odds of 50 to 1 to win, 20 to 1 to place and 10 to 1 to show.

He Has Speed.

Riskulus, which is owned by Norman W. Church of Los Angeles, first attracted attention when he won the Agua Caliente Derby. Last Sunday he gave further indication that he is an extraordinary colt when he was beaten only a head by his stablemate, Gallant Sir, in the $25,000 Agua Caliente handicap.

The handicap was run in the spectacular time of 2:02 4-5. If Riskulus runs that fast in the Kentucky Derby it will take a mighty horse to beat him.

Many Chicagoans like his Derby chances because he is a full brother to the popular race mare Risque, which performed in the silks of Mrs. John Hertz a couple of seasons ago.

Stimulus, owned by Marshall Field III., is the sire of both Risque and Riskulus. The mare Risky is the dam of both.

Coming North Slowly.

When at her best Risque could beat any filly in her division as a 2 and 3 year old. She was good in any sort of going, scoring important stake victories on both fast and muddy tracks. She also could go a route. Distance apparently does not stop Riskulus, either.

Riskulus is to make the trip north for the Kentucky Derby by slow stages. His schedule calls for a stop in Texas, where he will try for the $10,000 Texas Derby to be run next month at the Arlington Downs track. From Texas he will move to Kentucky. After his Kentucky Derby engagement he will move into Chicago for the American Derby and the Arlington Classic.

The Fox Valley Jocky club and not the Exposition Park Jocky club will operate the Aurora track during the meeting from May 1 to May 23, which opens the Illinois racing season.

May Add Stakes.

The change in name was announced yesterday by Robert S. Eddy, general manager of the track, who arrived from New Orleans. Eddy will remain here until the season opens, directing improvements at the Aurora course and outling the racing program.

Until the Aurora Derby was run last spring, no stake races had been offered at the track. Eddy indicated yesterday that there may be three or four added money early closing events this year.

The improvements at the track include a complete overhauling of the actual racing strip, improvement of the infield from a scenic standpoint, erection of new barns and general repairs to the plant. He will confer with transportation officials relative to low round trip rates from the loop.

ARCADIA SEEKS TO BAR KRONE, MALLOY SHOWS

Say Promoter's Contract Illegally Drawn.

The Uptown Amusement corporation, lease holder at Arcadia Gardens, 4444 Broadway, yesterday requested the Illinois Athletic commission to refuse to grant John [Doc] Krone, wrestling promoter, and Mique Malloy, who promotes boxing, dates for shows at the Arcadia arena on the allegation that their contract with the corporation was illegally drawn and therefore is void. Chairman Joe Triner of the commission ordered the secretary, Louis London, to turn the matter over to Attorney General Otto Kerner for an opinion.

Malloy, who was present, indicated that he and Krone may bring civil suit against the corporation. In the meantime Krone is completing arrangements to present a wrestling show at Arcadia next Tuesday headed by Gus Sonnenberg and Jack Smith.

O'Dowd was awarded a close decision over Eliopoulos in a previous encounter. Sigillo concentrated on punching yesterday in a two round drill against Johnny Phagan, middleweight, who boxes Solly Dukejsky at Marigold Gardens next Monday. F. M.

Porcupine Myth Bobs Up Again; He Can't Shoot Quils

BY BOB BECKER.

The old yarn about the porcupine being able to shoot its quils makes its appearance at intervals every year, thus proving it is hard to suppress wild animal myths which, although ridiculous, sound intriguing.

Thomas H. Kern of Libertyville, Ill., brings the porcupine story out of the bag this spring in a recent letter. He writes: "To settle an argument, I am writing you concerning the porcupine. One of my friends contends the animal can throw or cast its quils if molested. I am of the opinion that this is not the case. I will appreciate any information you can furnish on this subject."

Porcupines do not throw their quils, and couldn't if they so desired. That sums up the porcupine quil shooting business. The beast does not possess a rubber skin from which to eject each quil.

Not being equipped to do any shooting, it is impossible for the animal to toss its barbs from its skin. The only real weapon the porcupine has is a mighty dangerous tail, which whips around to slap an enemy if the latter is foolish enough or ignorant enough to get too close. This tail is armed with many quils. These are held in place in a normal manner, providing the animal is not attacked. When disturbed, it has the ability to release them to the extent that a swish of the tail can plant them in the skin of the attacker. In other words, they can be loosened, but cannot be thrown.

When a porcupine rolls up into a pin cushion effect to protect himself from an enemy he has a pretty solid barbed defense. An animal wouldn't want to do much pawing at such a mass of quils. These can make trouble for the average small animal attacker, because the implanting of a number of quils in the attacker's face or paws means much grief.

It is rather interesting that the story of the porcupine being able to throw its quils goes back hundreds of years to the earliest known books on wild animal life. Early English writers [17th century] made a great to do over the porcupine, and told at length how he could shoot his quils 20 or 30 feet with enough force to drive them into the bark of trees!

The tale has come to be believed through the years, although without substantiation of any sort. If porcupines shot their quils some of us wouldn't dare go camping in the north woods without wearing tin suits.

Big Beau Sets New Mark at Tropical Park

Miami, Fla., March 19.—[Special.]—The final two weeks of the Florida racing season got under way this afternoon at Tropical Park. A large crowd gathered at the Gables Racing association's plant to watch Big Beau, owned by Hal Price Headley, win the Seminole handicap, feature of the opening day's program.

Big Beau, recent winner of the Tavares handicap at Hialeah park, shattered the mile and a sixteenth track record in winning the event. He covered the distance in 1:43 2-5, a second faster than the mark established by Banderlog.

Pastry Is Second.

Buffeted around at the clubhouse turn Big Beau was last as the field reached the back stretch. Pastry and Live One were setting the early pace and were still in the lead as they hit the stretch. Then Jocky Bobby Jones moved up Big Beau on the outside and won going away in the final furlong.

STROLL ALONG WINS

Houston, Tex., March 19.—[Special.]—Stroll Along, at almost 6 to 1 in the betting, won the Ben Milam purse, feature of the day's events, at Epsom Downs today. Two lengths behind the winner was Cabezo. Shirley B. finished third. Brown Wisdom, now participating in selling races, was among the also rans.

Stroll Along, which recently arrived at the Downs from Florida, covered the six furlongs in 1:12 4-5. His backers received $13.20 for $2 straight tickets.

HARRIDGE LOOKS FOR HARD FOUGHT PENNANT BATTLE

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 19.—(AP)—A prediction that this year's American league race will be the closest in many years was made today by the league's president, William Harridge, who visited the Browns' training camp.

"I believe the Browns will be a much improved club over 1933," Harridge said. "The men behind the club have done much to reorganize its playing personnel, and Manager Hornsby's spirit will be reflected in the team's play. It looks to me as if most of the American league teams have added strength, particularly those in the second division."

BREADON IS OPTIMISTIC.

Bradenton, Fla., March 19.—(AP)—President Sam Breadon, more optimistic than ever since the Cardinals won three straight games from the Giants, predicted today the Red Birds would win the 1934 National league pennant. Breadon returned here from Miami Beach, scene of two of the Cardinals' triumphs over the world champions.

LYNN WALDORF IS NAMED TO COACH AT KANSAS STATE

Manhattan, Kas., March 19.—(AP)—Lynn O. Waldorf, eldest of three athletic sons of Bishop E. L. Waldorf of the Methodist Episcopal church, was named today as head football coach of Kansas State college, taking the place vacated by the resignation of A. N. [Bo] McMillin, who left to direct football at Indiana university.

Leaving Oklahoma A. & M. college, where he had notable success for five years as football coach and served as athletic director the last year, the former Syracuse tackle will start spring practice here next Monday.

Assignment of assistants was deferred and Waldorf's salary was not disclosed, although he said it was substantially higher than the amount he received as head coach of the Oklahoma Aggie athletic department.

In five years at Oklahoma A. & M. his team won two Missouri Valley conference championships in 1932 and 1933. It won 34 games, lost 10, and tied six.

Three universities acclaim the prowess of the three brothers who became stars. John Waldorf was full back and captain in 1929 of the University of Missouri squad and Paul Waldorf was captain of the Baker university football team at Baldwin, Kas.

Work was confined to some kicking and passing. Practice was directed by Lieut. Tom Hamilton, the new head coach, with Jack Wilson and Rip Miller as his principal helpers.

Gino Garibaldi Prepares for Londos Bout

Garibaldi worked for 45 minutes, 30 of which were spent in a practice match with Hans Bauer. When Gino finished, Londos took the spotlight for an hour. Jim went several rounds on the pulleys and then wrestled big Joe Roganski for a half hour. He finished the drill by playing several games of handball.

Garibaldi Shows Wares.

An indication of what Londos may expect from his opponent tomorrow was put on display by Garibaldi. He used reverse headlocks and toe holds during the major portion of the workout against his partner. Body slams, another favorite of Gino's were used sparingly.

Both wrestlers will resume drills this afternoon at the same gymnasium, Garibaldi working at 2:30 and Londos an hour later.

RUTH HAMMERS 'NEW' BALL; SH-H! IT'S 1933 MODEL

But Babe's Happy with a Flock of Homers.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 19.—Larceny has been practiced by the New York Yankees and old man psychology may help Babe Ruth's batting this year. The New York American league team has filched from the Boston Braves a dozen of the new standard baseballs for use in batting practice. Babe Ruth today smacked three or four of them for the equivalent of home runs.

"Boy!" he cried with elation, "that new baseball was made for me. Did you get a load of how I drove those lively onions clear off the lot? Why I'll smack home runs this year like I used to. Whatta ball!"

The new standard ball is identical with that used in the American league last summer but you can't convince Ruth that it is, which is maybe all for the best.

GIANTS, 7; DODGERS, 4.

Miami Beach, Fla., March 19.—(AP)—The world champion New York Giants pounded Van Mungo, Dodger's pitching star, for five hits and four runs in the fifth inning today to defeat Brooklyn, 7 to 4, in an exhibition game at Flamingo Park before 1,200.

After each side scored a run in the first inning, the Giants took command of the game in the fifth largely as the result of a triple off the bat of Pitcher Joe Bowman, who relieved the Giants' starting pitcher, Hal Schumaker, in the fourth. Bowman's hit scored Vergez and Healey. In the fifth inning Bowman hit a double. Score:

Batteries—Mungo, Page, Leonard and Berres, Sukeforth; Schumacher, Bowman, Castleman and Healey, Danning.

A'S, CARDS WASHED OUT.

Fort Myers, Fla., March 19.—(AP)—What began as a high scoring contest between the Philadelphia Athletics and the St. Louis Cardinals was washed out in the fourth inning today. At the time the score was 3 to 2 in favor of the Cards, and the midwesterners had the bases filled when the downpour began.

BRAVES, REDS, RAINED OUT.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 19.—(AP)—A heavy shower followed the Cincinnati Reds from Tampa, with the result that today's exhibition game here with the Boston Braves was called off because of wet grounds. The Reds did not even dress after checking in at Waterfront park but Manager Bill McKechnie, who prides himself on his weather forecasting, managed to put the Braves through a short workout before the storm hit here.

TIGERS NEED WORK.

Lakeland, Fla., March 19.—(AP)—After watching his club take a 7 to 5 beating from Boston yesterday, Manager Cochrane decided today that if the Detroit Tigers were going to be pennant contenders they would have to show some speedy improvement. Pitching was the chief fault. Cochrane used Frasier, Hogsett, and Auker, and they yielded nine hits.

The fielding was not any too good. Shiver, in left field, missed two flies and fumbled a grounder, and the Tigers had their usual trouble trying to run down men between the bases.

SENATOR PITCHERS READY.

Biloxi, Miss., March 19.—(AP)—The veterans who pitched Washington to a championship last year are in such fine shape they're going to have to slow down. Earl Whitehall, Walter Stewart, Al Crowder, Monte Weaver, and Jack Russell are rounding into form so fast that Joe Cronin is confident his club will get away with a rush in the 1934 campaign. Ed Chapman, recruit right-hander from the Rochester club, is having trouble with a stitch in his back.

BROWN REPORTS TO INDIANS.

New Orleans, La., March 19.—(AP)—Lloyd Brown, Indians' pitcher came into camp today to limber up his arm after a seige on a hospital cot incident to an operation for appendicitis. The southpaw, who has been at Sarasota, Fla., answered present for Manager Walter Johnson's pitching staf to a general chorus of satisfaction from his teammates, but two of the Cleveland moundsmen are still out of the fold—Willis Hudlin and Wesley Ferrell. Cleveland plays the Senators at Biloxi, Miss., Friday.

PIRATES DRILL AT BAT.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 19.—(AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates went through a two hours batting practice at Wrigley field today and then held a long skull practice discussing boners pulled in their recent exhibition games.

The Pirates tackle the Chicago Cubs tomorrow in the first of a four game series. Cy Blanton and Lefty Birkofer recruits, will pitch for Manager Gibson.

LIGHT WORK FOR RED SOX.

Sarasota, Fla., March 19.—(AP)—There were plenty of sore muscles in the Boston Red Sox camp today, the result of yesterday's exhibition victory over the Detroit Tigers, so Manager Harris excused his players after a brief workout.

GENO DEFEATS LOU VINE IN 8 ROUND BOUT

Paddy Walthier beat George Shrosbree [4].
Memen Kumis knocked out John O'Malley [4].
Tom Habel beat Curtis Mills [4].
Frank Walsh beat Mike Mantich, 11 minutes. [Wrestling.]

Lawson Y.M.C.A. Revolver Team Beats South Shore

The Lawson Y. M. C. A. team beat the South Shore Gun club, 768 to 760, in a revolver match last night at the gun club. The scores:

Jones Doubts Reliability of Putting Touch

Augusta, Ga., March 19.—[AP]—The putting stroke has Bobby Jones worried on the eve of his return to competition.

Thursday he reenters tournament play in the masters' invitational event here, and today, after almost a week of practice over the Augusta National Golf clul course, he was frankly apprehensive about his putting.

"I'm not putting well now," he said. "To score in a tournament you must be able to get down an occasional long putt and I've been unable to do this with any consistency. I can drop the short ones but mostly it is the putts of twenty feet or further that bring the birdies."

Long Putts Win.

The course here, while a good test of golf, is not unusually difficult, Bobby explained, and he figures the man who can hole his putts over these rolling greens is the one who will win.

"A good successful putting touch brings confidence," said Bobby, who will use a putter modeled after his famous "Calamity Jane" of other years.

"I believe I am hitting my wood shots and my long irons as well as in my former competitive years, perhaps better, but my putting is off.

Good Players More Numerous.

Bobby declined to express an opinion as to his own chances to win but did say that if he regains his putting touch and putts as well as he did in other tournaments of past years he believes the possibility of his leading the field is as good as in former competitions.

Jones also refused to single out any particular players as his chief rivals here. Although he thinks there are more good players now than in other days he doesn't regard the scoring as any faster, disagreeing in this opinion with Horton Smith and Paul Runyan, among other professionals.

"Of course I can't say denfiitly about that until I have played. However, I believe I can concentrate now as well as before," he replied.

Bobby thinks that the winning score here will be in the low 280's if good weather prevails.

C. Y. O. Quintets Leave Today for New York Games

Seeking their second intercity victory in three years, Mary Queen of Heaven heavyweights, champions of the C. Y. O. Basketball league, will leave for New York this morning from the La Salle Street station to play St. Nicholas of Tolentine at the Fordham university gymnasium Thursday night.

This is the second New York trip the Queen of Heaven boys have won. In 1932 the team traveled east to defeat the eastern champions and bring to Chicago the first C. Y. O. intercity title in basketball. Last year the intercity game was played with the winner of the St. Louis, Mo., Catholic tournament.

The C. Y. O. lightweight winner, from Corpus Christi parish, also will go to New York. The Corpus Christi squad is composed of former Phillips High school players. Queen of Heaven won the Stagg tournament while representing Morton High school in 1930.

Boys making the trip are: Queen of Heaven, Ed Warren, John Bartkowski, John Zahrobsky, Joseph Marz, Frank Tenk, Chuck Cerny, Ed Charvat, Bill Zahrobsky, Richard Triner and Ed Maher, manager; Corpus Christi, C. Bray, C. Gant, A. Sumerlin, R. Hudson, I. W. McQuilter, G. Cobb, A. Coles, L. Waller, and R. A. Skinner, manager.

Attendance at State Tourney May Set Mark

Champaign, Ill., March 19.—[Special.]—With the followers of 16 sectional champions preparing to come to the University of Illinois where the 27th annual basketball finals of the Illinois High School Athletic association will open Thursday morning, it is predicted that all attendance records will be broken.

Only eight teams have competed for the last seven years but this year the association doubled the number of finalists. The record attendance for all sessions was 15,594 in 1931 and the largest crowd at a single session was 5,692. In addition to the increased number of finalists, both Urbana and Champaign won sectionals, intensifying local interest.

Equality Among Favorites.

Thornton, defending champion, Quincy, Streator, Lane Tech, Centralia and Equality are among the favorites. Peoria Central is considered a dangerous entry.

Equality, with its 830 inhabitants, is the smallest community represented. It is in Gallatin county in the southern part of the state and has never reached the finals before. There are 154 pupils in the high school where Dolph Stanley is coach.

Five Ex-champs Back.

1908—Peoria	1921—Marion
1909—Hinsdale	1922—Centralia
1910—Bloomington	1923—Villa Grove
1911—Rockford	1924—Elgin
1912—Batavia	1925—Elgin
1913—Galesburg	1926—Freeport
1914—Hillsboro	1927—Mount Carmel
1915—Freeport	1928—Canton
1916—Bloomington	1929—Johnston City
1917—Springfield	1930—Peoria Manual
1918—Centralia	1931—Decatur
1919—Rockford	1932—Morton [Cicero]
1920—Mount Vernon	1933—Th'rst'n [Hrvy]

GOLDEN GLOVES FIGHTER PULLS A TENDON IN DRILL

But Examination Reveals Graves Little Hurt.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Keith Graves, Peoria's welterweight champion, who probably will meet New York's 147 pound titleholder in the intercity bouts in Madison Square Garden March 23, was put out of commission temporarily yesterday in the training bouts at the Illinois Athletic club. Graves pulled a tendon in his right shoulder during a fast match with Fred Tyus, who also is a Peorian and likewise is a candidate for the welterweight class.

An immediate physical examination by Dr. William Rothman showed no permanent injury and Graves probably will be boxing again in a couple of days.

Box Three Rounds Today.

Three rounds is the order for this afternoon's matches, the same distance the boys will be required to travel in the intercity bouts. It will be the most severe test of the training period.

The boys now have three more days of boxing at the I. A. C. The final workout in the ring will be held Thursday morning, after which lunch will be served and then the squad will entrain at the La Salle street station at 1:30 for the trip to New York. Arrangements have been completed for resumption of training Friday afternoon in New York so that no time will be lost. The journey thus will have less effect than formerly, particularly since the Golden Glovers will have four days of boxing in Manhattan.

Zale May Be Moved Up.

The make-up of the team of sixteen boys which will fight in New York now has the coaches puzzled. It is possible that at least one of the boys may be moved up a weight class for so far he has shown more ability than the boys against whom he has fought. This is Tony Zale of Gary, Ind., who has done exceptionally well against Freddie Caserio and Bill Treest in the 160 pound division. If Zale continues to outpoint Cooney Tucker and Peter Gregaitis, light heavyweights, he may get this assignment regardless of the lack of weight. In this case he probably will be paired with Ario Soldati.

Fred Tyus, who fought in the Tournament of Champions as a middleweight, already has been moved down to the welterweight division. Tyus was at 151 pounds Sunday, but Coach Johnny Behr told him to take his weight reducing more gradually.

The team will take all its training equipment to New York with the exception of the big punching bags.

Canton Bowler Takes Lead in A. B. C. Meet

Peoria, Ill., March 19.—[Special.]—Though new alleys are specially built each year for the American Bowling congress tournament, and all the tournament drives are supposed to be equal, there is always one or more paris over which high scores are recorded consistently. Three outstanding performances have been made on alleys No. 5 and 6 during the present tournament.

Scoring games of 265, 234, 206, Glenn Evans of Canton, O., took the lead ir the singles event of the A. B. C. tourney here today. His total of 705 surpassed that of Charles Kaley of St. Louis by 18 pins.

High Scores on Two Alleys.

Evans rolled on alleys No. 5 and 6, the same pair of drives over which Freddie Weber of Milwaukee scored 768 as his contribution to a five man total. One of Weber's games was a 298. Dumar-Foster of Highland Park, Mich., who are topping the doubles with a 1,303 figure rolled on the same pair of drives.

Evans brought about the only upset in the singles event during today's bombardment. Two changes occurred among the leaders in the doubles division, Joe Jerman and Joe Motka, Cleveland, taking second place with a 1,249 total, while Fred Kamanski and Al Kowalski, Chicago, moved into seventh position by virtue of a 1,218 score.

Rudcki-Mauge Roll 1,195.

John White of Sioux City, Ia., took second place in the all events classification by scoring 667 in singles, 599 in doubles, and 660 in team competition for a total of 1,926.

K. of C. Quintets Meet Tomorrow in Quarter Final

Divisional champions in the Knights of Columbus basketball league face tough opposition tomorrow night when the quarter-final of the league's title round will be held at the 132d regiment armory, Madison and Rockwell streets. Four games are scheduled, the winners to enter the semi-final round Sunday.

St. Cyr, west division and league champion, faces Setters, which eliminated Damen last Sunday. Setters has won eight of its last ten games and defeated St. Cyr in the west division. Ed Smith and Lou Mehalek, former members of Marquette's teams, are in the Setters' lineup.

Englewood, winner of the south division title, will meet the Auburn Park quintet, which was one of two teams to defeat the south side team in the preliminary schedule. Tony Carp, leading scorer of the league, and Vince McGowan are members of the Englewood squad.

The third divisional champion, Quigley of the south end section, will play Loyola-Hyde Park, runner-up in the south section. Loyola finished fast after a poor start. Quigley will start Pete Barskis, star of the unbeaten De Paul university quintet.

The other game on tomorrow night's schedule will bring together Tonti and Hughes, runner-up for west division honors. Hughes ended the schedule in a tie with St. Cyr, but was beaten by a single point in the playoff.

The first game will start at 7 p. m.

TWO BYRD FLYERS DOWN; LOST IN POLAR BLIZZARD

Position Unknown; Admiral Plans Rescue Flight.

LITTLE AMERICA, Antarctica, March 19.—(AP)—[Via Mackay radio.]—A monoplane of the second Byrd Antarctic expedition was forced down by heavy fog on a return flight yesterday from a depot 100 miles away and remained today in the grip of a storm that precluded rescue attempts.

Its position was unknown, but was believed to be between eight and fifteen miles from Little America. Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd was ready to fly to its relief as soon as the weather cleared.

A ground party also was organized but high winds and drifting snow made a start impossible. Two men were marooned by the forced landing, Pilot William C. Bowlin and Wireless Operator Clay Bailey, both of the United States navy.

Carried Month's Rations.

"When the plane left Little America," said Admiral Byrd, "it carried full emergency equipment, including a tent, cooking stove, sleeping bags, and thirty days' rations per man.

"Both men were amply equipped with fur clothing, so I see no reason for concern. We shall start looking for them as soon as the weather gives us a chance."

No messages were received from the stranded flyers today. The last contact with them was at 8 p. m. yesterday when Bowlin reported he had buried the plane in a hole dug in the snow to save it from being blown away by a high wind.

Unable to Give Position.

His gasoline supply was nearly exhausted, and he was unable to give his position, as he had flown blind about ten minutes before landing.

He reported, however, that he had landed on a high barrier not far from a wide crevasse. After calculating their speed and probable location Admiral Byrd described the place as one of the most dangerous in polar regions because of spires of shattered ice and crevasses.

The plane took off for the 100 mile depot at 11:32 a. m. yesterday. It carried a small amount of stores for the advance base and fresh meat. It landed at the depot at 1 p. m., dropped its load, and took off again at 1:20.

An hour later it was reported down. Before wireless communication with the craft was disrupted Byrd instructed the men to remain by the plane at least five days.

THIRD MAN DIES IN WAKE OF FRENCH BOND SCANDAL

FONTAINEBLEU, France, March 19.—(AP)—Death claimed today its third victim in the $60,000,000 Stavisky bond scandal. Emile Blanchard, high official of the ministry of agriculture, died in a hospital of complications arising from a suicide attempt.

First to die as a direct outgrowth of the collapse of the Bayonne municipal pawnshop was the founder, Serge Stavisky. Police say Stavisky shot himself. Some charge police slew him—fearing possible disclosures of corruption.

Judge Albert Prince, "the man who knew all" in the affair, was murdered the day before he was to have laid bare official records which pried deep into Stavisky's dealings. Blanchard was found dying Saturday at dawn. He cut his throat after he was suspended from office on the revelation that he served on two boards of directors of Stavisky companies.

REV. A. A. SCHMID DIES IN AURORA HOSPITAL AT 35

The Rev. Arthur Richard Schmid, 35 years old, pastor of SS. Peter and Paul church at Virgil, Ill., died unexpectedly yesterday in St. Joseph Mercy hospital in Aurora, following an operation for appendicitis.

Father Schmid frequently accompanied Leo [Gabby] Hartnett, catcher for the Chicago Cubs baseball team, on hunting trips. He had many friends among baseball players.

Father Schmid was born in Chicago. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Schmid, and five brothers and a sister, who survive, live in Chicago. Funeral services will be held in Father Schmid's church at 11 o'clock tomorrow. Bishop Edward F. Hoban of Rockford will officiate.

ELMWOOD PARK REPEALS WATER PLANT SCHEME

The Elmwood Park village board last night repealed an ordinance passed last June providing for the construction of a water reservoir costing $150,000. Since the ordinance's passage it had been constantly under attack by organized taxpayers of the suburb. Trustee John A. Cullerton led the fight for the repeal and the final vote was 5 to 1.

Blast and Flames Damage Two N. Clark Street Stores

Fire following an explosion in the basement early today damaged the Embassy Plumbing and Heating Supply company at 5238 North Clark street and spread next door to the Swedish bookstore. A 2-11 alarm was turned in when it appeared that the flames might attack the Uptown-Clark garage in the rear of the building, and various shops and flats. However, the blaze was confined to the two stores. Four families were routed from their homes by smoke. Property damage was estimated at $4,000.

ADMITS KINNEY DESTROYED SOME GAS TAX RECORDS

Admissions that state records were destroyed by Garrett de Forrest Kinney, former state director of finance, before he committed suicide in Peoria, were made yesterday in defense of three former officials of the Consumers Gas and Oil company. The defendants, Max and Al Johnson, brothers, and Sam Levin, are charged with conspiracy to evade payment of $200,000 gasoline taxes.

J. S. Wemple, former investigator for the department who acted as chief auditor, made the admission under cross-examination by Attorney William J. Robinson. Reports believed to show that the company made gas payments in August, September, and October of 1930 were never found, Wemple said, but neither was he certain they had been sent in.

"But you admit that Kinney stole some of the records and destroyed others?" Attorney Robinson asked.

"Yes," Wemple answered. "I found shortages, and an auditing company found a shortage of $170,000 when it examined the books."

The defense contention is that $120,000 paid by the company was never recorded in the state books.

MODIFIED BILL FOR CONTROL OF STOCKS DRAWN

Keeps U. S. Control Over Exchanges.

Washington, D. C., March 19.—(AP)—A redrafted compromise bill to place stock exchanges securely in the grip of governmental regulation emerged tonight from a committee of experts with many drastic provisions of the original measure retained, but embodying important concessions to conservative opinion as well.

The new measure was the fruit of a week's intensive collaboration by officials of the treasury, federal reserve board, Reconstruction Finance corporation, and the senate market investigating staf, undertaken after Wall street spokesmen and bankers had vigorously protested the rigid requirements of the bill as first introduced.

The new measure stipulates a cash margin of 60 per cent, as did the first bill, but that document's alternative provision was modified. It specified that the loan value of a security should not be more than 40 per cent of its current price nor 80 per cent of its lowest quotation in three years. The new bill made it 100 per cent.

Enforcement by Trade Commission.

While stock exchange officials were opposed to giving administration of the measure to the federal trade commission and urged the establishment of a separate agency, on which it would have representation, the new bill left enforcement with the commission and provided for its enlargement by two additional members.

However, control over margins, given to the commission originally, was vested with the federal reserve board under the new measure. The purpose of this change is to keep control of credit in one agency.

The margin requirements as first drawn were protested by Wall street on the ground that upon the bill's effective date the bulk of outstanding accounts would have to be sold out, with a resulting downward price movement. Under the new bill, margin requirements are inapplicable to present accounts until Jan. 31, 1939.

New Rule on Specialists.

Wall street also objected to the section of the first bill forbidding brokers also to be dealers and prohibiting specialists from trading for their own accounts. Under the redrafted measure, a broker may be an odd lot dealer. Instead of being confined to brokerage activities, specialists are required to be either brokers or dealers exclusively and are no longer forbidden to execute orders to buy or sell "at the market."

A major change demanded by the stock exchange was granted regarding liability for misleading statements. Under the original bill a person sued for misleading statements had to bear the burden of proof that he exercised due care. As the measure now stands that proof lies with the plaintif, and the defendant need only show that he acted in "good faith."

The new bill would confine to actual losses the amount a person victimized by misleading statements could recover. The first bill made it possible for him to obtain recompense to the extent of the difference between the price at which he bought or sold a security and the lowest or highest price of that security in three months.

Rule Asked by Pecora Dropped.

One provision demanded by Ferdinand Pecora and his associates of the senate committee was eliminated entirely. This would have made it unlawful for a director, officer, or principal security holder to disclose confidential information regarding the company's financial condition, and would have made the recipient of such information liable to the corporation for any profit obtained as a result.

The objections of bankers to the first bill, which made the margin requirements of the bill applicable to their loans on securities, were recognized by the experts by the provision that present accounts should not be subject to these provisions until Jan. 1, 1939.

The margin requirement section also was modified to permit brokers to carry accounts which were fully margined at the outset but became undermargined as the result of a small decline on the price of the stock purchased.

The new measure stipulates that such an account may be carried so long as the credit maintained does not exceed 60 per cent of market price or 100 per cent of the lowest price in three years. But in no case more than 85 per cent of current market value.

The new bill was made public by Chairman Rayburn of the house interstate commerce committee, who said hearings would begin tomororw.

John R. Thompson Board Delays Dividend Action

Directors of the John R. Thompson company at an adjourned meeting yesterday again failed to take action on the company's dividend. Action was scheduled at the March 6 meeting. The last regular quarterly dividend was voted by the directors Jan. 5, 1934. An official announcement said the subject again will be considered late in April.

Childs Asserts U.S. Aid Keeps Bond Prices Up

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Present high market prices for government bonds are no gauge of the true state of government credit, according to C. F. Childs, head of one of the leading firms in the country specializing in government bonds. Treasury interference in the market for its own bonds, Mr. Childs said in a bulletin published yesterday, has concealed the real picture. He describes this interference as the "sinister influence of artificial stimulation."

C. F. CHILDS. [U. & U. Photo.]

"Today," he says, "every banking institution is virtually starved for revnue from sound borrowers and surfeited with idle funds and credits. Subscriptions by banks to government loans may, therefore, be relied upon, and probably will suffice to support the national credit temporarily, thereby protecting their present holdings of government securities.

* *

"The treasury has realized the importance of buying its own securities in order to maintain a visible measure of stability to their market value. That open market operation has been performed in in orderly, masterly manner. However, a supported artificial market is no index of the government's true borrowing ability.

"As soon as government credit, represented by its obligations, can be left to itself to reflect a true market measure of real supply and demand, and interest rates are offered which will attract the savings of all people, the world will have a truer picture of how Americans rate their own nation's credit."

"When a fuller return of confidence makes unnecessary the sinister influence of artificial stimulation in the bond market," he continues, "and when there is no attempt to conceal confused budgetary balances obtained by segregated accounting; and when the undignified spokesmen for the government cease imitating the unsound whoopee fallacies of 1929 promoters, which congress properly condemns, then the wealth of the people will be forthcoming automatically for every worthy enterprise."

* *

"As the government borrows and spends," he goes on, "the debt is pyramided and excess bank reserves are increased which, in turn, are reinvested in government securities.

"That operation will repeatedly continue until the government stops its program spending. The big question is: Can a nation, independent of all others, borrow its way to prosperity. It is fantastic to attempt to borrow ourselves out of debt, or to tax ourselves to hold up world prices.

"When the government's daily deficit is transformed into a balanced budget, and when trade barriers are lowered, confidence and commerce, as well as resulting income, will return."

In the meantime, he insists, the politicians are merely postponing the day of settlement. The time of reckoning is ahead and the next generation will be confronted with the necessity of "redeeming the cost of this 1932-'36 battle at home in addition to our 1917-'18 battle abroad."

* *

"Nobody with a respected opinion," says Mr. Childs, "ventures a prediction of the ultimate outcome of the present governmental policies. However, general acquiescence or docile resignation characterizes the public's present attitude toward the government's adoption of many obsolete theories, veneered foibles, inconsistencies, experiments, and heterodox principles. The route to their achievement is over a badly charted sea."

Mr. Childs presents some interesting statistics, including an estimate that if the income of all persons in the United States earning $10,000 or more in 1932 were confiscated in taxation it would not pay one-third of this year's federal deficit.

He estimates that the average income per capita was $683 in 1929, but only about $316 in 1933 and then figures that the federal debt alone in 1936 will be $270 per capita.

"The real test," he says, "will not be the burden of debt but the ability of the national income to bear the weight."

U. S. BORROWS AT RECORD LOW OF 9-100S OF 1%

Rate Reflects Ease in Money Market.

Reflecting the easy situation existing in the money markets the federal treasury was able to sell its latest offering of 91 day bills at an average rate of about 0.09 per cent per year on a bank discount basis, equaling a record low rate of 0.09 per cent for which an issue sold in December, 1932.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announced in Washington yesterday that tenders for $100,000,000 of 91 day treasury bills, dated March 21 and maturing June 20, 1934, which were offered on March 16, were opened at the federal reserve banks yesterday.

Issue Subscribed Three Times.

The total amount applied for was $344,987,000 of which $100,110,000 was accepted. The accepted bids ranged in price from 999.987, equivalent to a rate of about 0.05 per cent per year, to 99.975, equivalent to a rate of about 0.10 per year on a bank discount basis.

Only part of the amount bid for at the latter price was accepted. The average price of the treasury bills to be issued is 99.978 and the average rate is about 0.09 per cent per year on a bank discount basis.

C. F. Childs, head of the house bearing his name and authority on government securities, stated that one factor contributing to the remarkably low yield was the fact that a number of states make assessments on personal property as of April 1. As a result there is a rush to put money in the treasury bills, which are exempt from personal property taxes, and a consequent increase in the demand for them.

The heavy demand for treasury bills is reflected in the price tables, which disclose that there are no sellers, only bids being in evidence.

BANK DEPOSITS SOAR

Bank deposits again soared sharply last week with reserve member banks in 91 principal clearing house cities reporting an increase of $234,000,000 in net demand deposits, an increase of $16,000,000 in time deposits and a decline of only $1,000,000 in government deposits. The figures covered the week ended March 14 and were released yesterday by the Federal Reserve bank.

However, the week marked a reversal of the recent trend, for instead of advancing the government additional funds, the banks decreased investments in government securities $49,000,000.

Investment in securities other than those of the government climbed $24,000,000, leaving a net decline of $25,000,000 in total investments.

Commercial loans expanded modestly, gaining $15,000,000 to $4,688,000,000, while security loans moved $98,000,000 higher to $3,893,000,000.

Am. National Bank Plans to Sell RFC Stock

Stockholders of the American National Bank and Trust company will be asked to approve a proposal for the issuance and sale of $750,000 of preferred stock to the Reconstruction Finance corporation, according to an announcement made yesterday by Melvin L. Straus, executive vice president.

M. L. STRAUS. [Moffett-Russell Photo.]

If the sale is approved, as is expected, this will make the third of the large downtown banks in which the federal government through the RFC will have a stake. The other two are the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company, in which the RFC has $50,000,000 of preferred stock, and the First National Bank of Chicago, in which it has $25,000,000.

Under the American National's plan the bank would sell 5 per cent retirable cumulative preferred stock to the RFC. The board of directors has already approved the proposal and the stockholders will be asked to vote on it at a special meeting on April 19. In a statement to stockholders, Mr. Straus said:

"Since the move to La Salle street our deposits have increased to such an extent that we find the additional capital would not only be justified, but, by increasing our resources, would make possible the greater development of our business. With deposits of approximately $17,000,000, an increase of our capital from $1,000,000 to $1,750,000 would, with our present surplus and undivided profits, provide an ample margin for future growth.

"As we are in accord with the recommendation of the government that we avail ourselves of the privilege of selling to the RFC $750,000 preferred stock."

Mr. Straus told the stockholders that they may exercise their right to purchase pro-rata shares of the new issue, but are neither obligated nor requested to do so as the RFC has agreed to purchase at par and accrued dividends the entire issue.

House Passes Bill to Force Limit on Cotton Production

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 19.—By a vote of 251 to 114 the house today passed the so called Bankhead bill, authorizing the Agricultural Adjustment administration to invoke compulsory methods in controling the cotton production of the south.

Passage of the bill was somewhat unexpected. During the days of debate which preceded the roll call indications were that many southern Democrats opposed the measure on principle despite the fact that a recent AAA poll showed southern cotton planters overwhelmingly in favor of the measure. The advocacy of the administration, however, coupled with yesterday's disclosure that Speaker Henry T. Rainey is keeping a "blacklist" of deserting Democrats, was regarded as responsible for throwing the Democratic majority to support of the compulsory control bill.

Broader Crop Control Predicted.

Involved in the legislation is a program of agricultural regimentation more drastic than any yet undertaken by the social planners of the AAA. Under its provisions a prohibitive tax will be levied on all ginnings of cotton in excess of the allotment prescribed for the crop year by the secretary of agriculture, and individual farmers will be compelled to comply with federal crop restrictions or be unable to market their excess production.

Senator Bankhead said he might propose an increase in the tax to make it more effective and to keep production down. The tax is not applicable until the excess cotton is sold, that portion stored being exempt.

The application of this program to cotton is regarded in some quarters as foreshadowing the adoption of similar compulsory crop control methods for wheat and other basic farm commodities.

Limit Is 10,000,000 Bales.

The bill imposes a rigid limitation of 10,000,000 bales for this year's cotton crop and imposes a tax of fifty per cent of its value upon all additional lint ginned.

The bill, called an emergency measure, has a two year life, but power is granted the President to continue it for a third crop year if necessary. Upon the approval of two-thirds of the growers the secretary of agriculture is authorized to fix the limit of production in the second and third years.

Production quotas are fixed according to the average production of the farmer over the last five years.

Amendments adopted included one striking out a section to authorize the President to enter trade agreements with foreign cotton producing countries on how much of the staple could be exported. The measure is designed to prevent an increase in production by fertilizing and other methods under the voluntary acreage reduction program.

STEEL OUTPUT PUT AT 46.8%; ABOVE WEEK AGO

New York, March 19.—(AP)—The American Iron and Steel institute today estimated current steel production at 46.8 per cent of capacity, compared with 46.2 per cent a week ago. The present rate is nine-tenths of a point under the recent high reported by the institute for the week beginning March 5. A month ago the industry was running at 43.6 per cent of capacity.

Senate Votes to Eliminate HOLC Politics

Washington, D. C., March 19.—(AP)—By a single vote the senate decreed today that politics should be taken out of the Home Owners' Loan corporation and then passed an administration bill to guarantee the principal of the bonds issued by the corporation.

The amendment to bar politics in appointments to the corporation was adopted by a vote of 40 to 33. Then Democrats rallied their forces and after a heated debate attempted to reconsider the action. They finally lost 35 to 34.

The bill, providing a government guarantee of the principal as well as the interest of the $2,000,000,000 of bonds designed to refinance home mortgages, now goes to the house. It was passed without even a record vote.

"Mess of Political Corruption."

While the galleries applauded, Senator Norris [Rad., Neb.] said the amendment was needed to block "a stinking mess of political corruption." Senator Neely [Dem., W. Va.] called the amendment "the worst species of hum-buggery."

Norris said he offered the amendment "at the request of a part of the Democratic administration who were afraid because they feared Democratic politicians would take their political lives if they dared to let it be known where they stood."

Charging that the Home Loan corporation was "a political machine, rotten to the core," Norris said "the man selected by Franklin D. Roosevelt to do that job is praying for the adoption of this amendment."

He did not mention any names, but was apparently referring to John H. Fahey, chairman of the corporation.

What Amendment Does.

The Norris amendment would write into the law a provision already guiding appointments to the Tennessee Valley authority. It would provide that "no partisan political test or qualification shall be permitted or given consideration, but all agents and employes shall be appointed, employed or promoted solely upon the basis of merit and efficiency."

The vote on reconsideration found seven Democrats supporting 28 Republicans for the amendment, with the 34 opponents all from Democratic ranks. The seven Democrats were Black, Bulkley, Fletcher, Hatch, Logan, Overton, and Pope.

1933 BEST YEAR OF MONTGOMERY WARD SINCE '29

Net $2,227,957; Had Loss in '31 and '32.

Emerging from a two year period of unprofitable operation, Montgomery Ward & Co. in 1933 made its best showing since 1929 by rolling up net earnings of $2,227,957, Sewell L. Avery, president, reported yesterday to shareholders.

SEWELL L. AVERY. [Moffett Photo.]

Seventy-five per cent of the company's retail stores operated at a profit during the year and in the final six months each of the nine mail order branches was out of the red. The company had incurred a loss of $5,636,784 in the preceding fiscal year, consisting of 13 months, and had a deficit of $8,712,000 in 1931.

The rapid improvement in the company's business in the last six months of the year was the significant feature of the year's operation. The fiscal year ended Jan. 31, 1934.

Mail Order Sales Improve.

The mail order branch of the business made a particularly significant comeback in the final six months and yielded a profit of $2,000,000. This was insufficient, however, to make up the loss incurred in the first half and for the full year this division of the business showed a net loss of $207,567. The retail stores showed a profit of $2,857,587 for the year, against a loss of $2,898,722 in the preceding 12 months period. The showing in each branch of the business was the best since 1929.

In his letter to stockholders President Avery gave much credit for the better results to the change in merchandising policies, the reorganization of personnel, the weeding out of unprofitable retail units and other changes made by the management in the last two years. Among the changes made were the closing of 106 stores, modernization of some old units, and relocation of others.

Avery Summarizes Results.

"In less than two years the company has emerged from losses to profits. It has made a profit for the first time since 1930 and is now on an increasingly profitable basis. With generally better business conditions, its earning power is steadily and substantially improving. It has resumed dividends on the 'A' stock.

"Sales during the last 12 months were 13 per cent more than in the pre-

THE STATE OF TEXAS, with an area of 262,398 square miles, was admitted into the Union in 1845, and is the largest State. On August 26, 1933 the voters of Texas, by approving a constitutional amendment, authorized $20,000,000 bonds for relief purposes, and in December, 1933 the State sold the first bonds under this authorization. This was the first public offering of bonds ever made by the State of Texas, and the bonds here offered are a portion of the second series of the above authorization.

The Constitution of the State of Texas provides that the Legislature shall make the necessary appropriations to pay such bonds, both principal and interest, except that such payments shall be from other sources than taxes on real property. The Legislature has made a continuing appropriation for such purpose and has directed the State Treasurer from the first monies received by him for the account of the general revenue fund (other than from taxes on real property) to annually set aside into a separate fund an amount sufficient to meet all interest and maturity requirements on said bonds for the fiscal year next succeeding. Information furnished us by the officials shows that for the fiscal year ending August 31, 1933 such funds available for the retirement of bonds were in excess of $10,000,000.

LABOR UNREST DRIVES DOWN STOCK PRICES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 19.—Caught in the backwash of labor strike talk in the automobile and railroad industries, the stock market turned weak today, leading issues closing down fractions to more than two points.

Due to strike fears, selling was heaviest against the stocks of automobile and steel companies, shares of which sagged through the bottoms of the recent trading range.

Issues of the class of U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, and General Motors were included among those to hit new lows on the movement. Railroad stocks also found speculative opinion somewhat against them, but met with better support.

Selling Covers List.

Losses in the leaders, however, were not much out of proportion to setbacks elsewhere in the list, for selling spread generally throughout the market.

Firmness developed in late trading, but the best the market could do in the way of a rally was to resume its recent quiet indecisive drift. The bulk of the liquidation was concentrated in the morning hours and from the noon period.

Subsequent steadiness was laid to the failure of the early dip to bring out more liquidation than it did, which was taken to indicate a sound market structure from a long term point of view.

The revival of the wage issue in the railroad industry was tempered by the realization that there was some means of arbitration to settle the argument.

In the noontime dip steel common retreated nearly 2 points, selling below the 50 level for the first time since the third week in January. The stock had sold as high as 59⅞ on the recent advance. It closed off 1⅝. Bethlehem and Republic Steel shared the onus of pressure with big steel, both finishing more than 2 points down.

Other Leaders Decline.

Similar losses were suffered by other industrial pace setters like American Can, Du Pont, Case, Radio, and Westinghouse. Although the margin was small, industrials on the average violated the lower limits of the narrow trading range the market has maintained during the last three weeks.

The better showing through the afternoon was credited more than anything else to the stout resistance by the rails close to their previous points of support. From noon on traders appeared to have taken a cue from the action of the rails, with selling petering out and prices rallying slowly from the lows.

Chrysler's net recession of 2¼ was the sharpest among motors, with General Motors, down 1⅛ and such independents as Hudson, Hupp, Nash, Packard, Mack Truck, Studebaker, and Pierce Arrow holding a little better.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 19.—German bonds broke sharply on the New York Stock exchange today, traders taking an unfavorable view of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht's warning of a possible moratorium and the publication on Saturday of a statement by the Reichsbank showing a drop of 47,000,000 marks in gold holdings.

The decline in the German issues was the most severe in months. It followed several days of selling.

German government 5½s of 1965 led the foreign group, dropping 1½ points in transactions of about $400,000. In sales of about $300,000 the 7s of 1949 fell 4 points. German agricultural bank issues fell 1½ to 5 points and German industrials as much as 5½ points.

U. S. Loans Irregular.

United States government issues advanced to new high ground in the early trading, but later turned irregular. Called Liberty 4s to 47½ lost some of their premium on rumors that the treasury would pay them with cash instead of making them the subject of another exchange offer.

An advance of 1.28 points in United States registered 3s of 1915-'55 was due to the fact that there had been no previous sale of that issue since Feb. 7. The coupon 3s had advanced since that time.

In conformity with the trend of stocks, domestic bonds turned generally downward. THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE averages of 10 foreign government issues declined .34, while in the domestic group declines ranged from .12 for industrials to .75 for utilities.

Alleghany Liens Weak.

Alleghany corporation issues were again weak, most activity centering in the 5s of 1950, which declined 1¼ points. The 5s of 1949 fell 2 points. Railroad issues provided numerous declines and the utilities shared in the weakness.

Bethlehem Steel refunding 5s of 1942 provided an exception to the general trend by gaining 1¾ points.

Sales of bonds reached $12,746,000, against $14,070,000 on Friday. Transactions in government issues were $1,624,000, against $1,801,000 on Friday.

Bayuk Cigar.

Investors' Guide: I would very much appreciate receiving a report on Bayuk Cigar company. Thank you for this and past favors.—P. H.

Answer: Although output of Bayuk Cigars, Inc., is distributed on a nation wide scale, the main markets are in New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania.

Shift in demand to five cent cigars and inventory adjustments were responsible for a heavy loss in 1932. A slash in price of its leading brand, Bayuk Phillies, from 10 cents to 5 cents, in January, 1933, resulted in a sharp increase in unit sales and was successful in again placing operations on a profitable basis.

The company operated at a profit in each of the four quarters of 1933. Net income for the full year was $645,000, which was 3.33 times preferred dividends and equal to $5.11 per common share. Sales in January, 1934, were 50 per cent ahead of those reported for January, 1933.

Net loss in 1932, after $860,000 extraordinary charges, was $1,263,000. Earnings for previous years are not directly comparable as results of Columbia Realty corporation, a wholly owned subsidiary, were not included.

Net income in 1931, before $1,107,000 inventory adjustments, was $256,000, or 1 cent per common share, against net income of $581,000 for 1930. Net income for 1929 was $1,516,000.

Current assets on Dec. 31, 1933, including cash of $306,000 and inventories of $5,085,000, totaled $6,584,000 and current liabilities, including $1,400,000 notes payable, were $1,621,000.

Long term debt was only $175,000. There are outstanding 27,668 shares of $100 par 7 per cent preferred and 90,851 shares of no par common. Dividend are being paid on the preferred, but nothing has been paid on the common since Jan. 15, 1932.

Canadian Exchange.

Investors' Guide: I will greatly appreciate it if you will give me information on the following: If a person in Canada wished to exchange his Canadian dollars [paper currency] at this time for United States dollars would the exchange be made at the present rate of exchange, approximately 99 cents for Canadian dollars and 59 cents for United States dollars, thereby giving the individual 40 per cent more American dollars for his Canadian money?—Mrs. W. B. J.

Answer: No. The exchange rates mean what they say. If the Canadian dollar is quoted at 99 cents, it means that it would take 99 cents [United States] to purchase one dollar [Canadian]. A Canadian would have to send about $1.01 of his money to purchase one United States dollar.

LOAN PAYMENTS BELIEVED SIGN OF BUSINESS GAIN

$3,000,000 Returned to RFC Each Day.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 19.—Repayments to the Reconstruction Finance corporation averaging $3,000,000 daily on outstanding loans by that agency were cited today by Chairman Jesse H. Jones as evidence of increasing improvement in business conditions.

He estimated that actual repayment for the 1934 fiscal year ending June 30 would total $728,000,000 and said this was undoubtedly conservative, since the liquidation of loans was proceeding at a rate much greater than had been originally estimated.

"Business is obviously getting better," said Mr. Jones, "and there is a consequent increase in employment."

Buys Billion of Stocks.

In contributing to the return of better times, the RFC has authorized the purchase of preferred stock in 6,331 banks to the amount of $1,043,117,350. Actual cash advances for this purchase have been made to 2,350 institutions in the amount of $557,213,000, and Mr. Jones estimated that the remainder from the amount authorized probably would be disbursed within the next 60 days.

In addition to its preferred stock purchases, the corporation has loaned $692,563,545 to 2,183 closed banks up to March 15, resulting in the release of substantial deposits and purchasing power.

Michigan was shown to have borrowed the largest amount for the purpose of liquidating assets of closed banks since the establishment of the RFC. A total of $172,426,832 was authorized up to March 15 to 170 institutions. Ohio followed with borrowings of $148,502,646 by 107 closed banks.

COTTON DROPS AFTER RISE ON PASSING OF CROP BILL

Cotton in yesterday's session declined early before the announcement that the house had passed the Bankhead bill. Buying support then developed a good rally, which met renewed selling, and the close was at intermediate prices. Net losses on futures in Chicago were 15 to 19 points; in New York, 13 to 19 points; in New Orleans, 14 to 20 points.

Spot prices at the latter market dropped 20 points to 12.05 cents; at New York, 15 points to 12.20 cents; at Houston and Galveston, 15 points to 12.10 cents.

Domestic cotton goods production is at the highest level since March, 1929. Domestic stocks at the end of February were 1,627,000 bales less than a year ago. Prices:

WHEAT REGAINS LARGE PART OF EARLY LOSSES

Late Rally Develops on Short Covering.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Liquidation developed in the grain markets early yesterday and wheat broke 1¾ cents and corn 1 cent from Saturday's finish before a rally set in. Heavy commission house selling of July wheat in evidence. July touched 86¼ cents at the lowest level and May corn sold down to 50⅛ cents.

Weakness in stocks and cotton and uneasiness over the labor situation were the main factors in causing the early decline. Later some local operators who sold early started to cover short sales and found offerings relatively light. The close was on a good rally, but net losses at ⅜ to ⅝ cent were registered on wheat. May closed at 87 to 87⅛ cents, and July at 87⅛ to 87¼ cents.

Corn Down Fractionally.

Corn lost ⅛ to ¼ cent for the day, with May at 50⅝ to 51 cents. Oats were ⅛ to ¾ cent lower, May at 33⅝ to 33¾ cents. Rye closed at losses of ⅛ to ⅜ cent, May at 59 cents. Barley was unchanged to ¼ cent higher, with May at 48¼ cents.

Grain traders paid more attention to the action of the stock and commodity markets than to reports regarding the supply and demand position of wheat and corn.

Winnipeg wheat closed ⅛ to ⅜ cent lower, and Liverpool was off ⅝ to ⅞ cent for the day. According to reports to the Canadian bureau of statistics the heavy exports of wheat from Argentina of late have been due in large part to the inability of shippers to fill room they had chartered for corn, and rather than pay demurrage on the vessels they had loaded wheat.

Visible Supply Lower.

A decrease of 2,184,000 bushels of wheat in the domestic visible supply was somewhat smaller than expected, but the total was down to a new low since July, 1929, at 94,908,000 bushels, compared with 139,073,000 bushels a year ago. The visible supply of oats decreased 1,023,000 bushels, the largest reduction so far this year, but the total was 39,348,000 bushels, against 23,718,000 bushels a year ago.

Nothing was heard of export sales of corn during the day, although there were intimations bids were close to a working basis. Rotterdam March corn closed at 54⅞ cents, or 3¾ cents above the same delivery of wheat. Buenos Aires had a holiday.

ILLINOIS AUTO TRUCK OWNERS REJECT CODE SIGNED BY ROOSEVELT

The Illinois Motor Truck Operators' association yesterday voted to reject the National Recovery administration code for the motor freight industry recently signed by President Roosevelt, Daniel F. McKeown, president, announced yesterday. The association embraces 235 local and highway truck operators in the Chicago area who employ a total of about 5,000 persons.

Mr. McKeown said that the reason the association voted not to go along with the code was that it contains no teeth for enforcement. He added that the association is in complete sympathy with the recommendation of Joseph B. Eastman, federal transportation coördinator, that the trucking industry be placed under the supervision of the interstate commerce commission.

Mr. McKeown explained that the code was drafted by the newly organized American Trucking association, a group whose code making activities have never been indorsed by the Illinois operators. He said the American association is naming the code authority for the trucking industry.

HOG PRICES RISE ON U. S. BUYING, LIGHT RECEIPTS

Regain Last Week's Loss; Cattle Irregular.

Hog prices rallied yesterday on federal support and the lightest receipts in several months. All of last week's losses were replaced, the general average for the session at $4.40 equaling the highest in ten days. Packers buying for the account of the Federal Surplus Relief corporation were in the market early with orders for 2,350 head and set the pace for the rest of the buying interests on a 10@15 cents higher basis than at the close of last week.

Hogs bought for the government were mostly of good to choice quality that cost $4.50 to $4.60, the latter price being the extreme top for full carload lots. One small lot of 20 head of fancy light butchers reached $4.65, as high as any hogs have sold since March 9. Arrivals at Chicago yesterday at 22,000 were equal to the smallest for a Monday since Jan. 1, when the run was smallest since Nov. 6.

Price Decline Curtails Receipts.

The setback in prices late last week curtailed the movement of supplies for early this week and reports from various sections indicated another light run for today. There has been some improvement in the quality of hogs lately, although more in the big weights, which some farmers had been carrying in hopes of higher prices, than in the light new crop. Several strings of 325 to 461 pound butchers sold within a range of $4 to $4.40. One consignment of 186 head from an Iowa feeder averaged 461 pounds at $4.

The unsettlement that has marked the cattle trade the last ten days was again evident in yesterday's session of mixed price trends. An early bulge was followed by a reaction that rubbed out the first gains, and later the price list was carried slightly under the closing quotations of last week.

Fancy Steers Bring $7.65.

A new top of $7.65 for eight fancy black steers averaging 1,053 pounds and paid by Armour. Full carloads of steers reached $7.50, averaging from 1,064 to 1,302 pounds, while the bulk sold at $5 to $7.15. Butcher stock also experienced a day of unevenness, early gains of 10 to 15 cents being counterbalanced by a later recession. Canners and cutters were mostly steady to weak.

Strong to 10 cents higher prices were paid for lambs yesterday after a deadlock between buyers and sellers was broken late in the afternoon by both sides offering some concession. Sellers were demanding sharply higher prices in face of heavier supplies during the forenoon. All interests bought readily at $9.35 at the close, with shippers and city butchers paying up to $9.50 for the best grades of wooled lambs. An advance of 25 to 40 cents carried tops to $10 at some of the eastern points. Lambs were at $10.15 at Chicago on March 1.

SELLING OF LARD OFFSETS HIGHER HOGS; PRICES OFF

Scattered selling attributed to local and eastern interests, with buying only fair, offset the advance of 10 cents in hogs and made the close on lard futures 12½ to 20 cents net lower yesterday. Bellies were 8 cents lower to 5 cents higher.

Cash lard was easier, with prices off 15 cents on regular and loose at $6.50, and off 25 cents on leaf at $6.25. Cash bellies were offered more freely at $8, a drop of 12½ cents. Liverpool lard was unchanged to 3d lower.

Export clearances of lard from New York on Saturday were 448,081 pounds, and of bacon, 303,500 pounds. Prices:

NEAR NORTH SIDE
Did you ever hear of our Italian and Malabry Courts and their delightful studios? Some with lofty ceilings, others built like bungalows, all with fireplaces and something that makes you feel far away from the city and yet they are only 10 blocks from the loop. No time spent commuting. Always walk to your office, always home quickly at night with a full evening before you. Do you want a small apt. or a large one with huge rooms and a flood of light? We have that, too. Some of these are furnished.

HOUSEHOLD'S LOW RATE POLICY

HAS SAVED
Chicago Borrowers
HUNDREDS
OF DOLLARS

For over 50 years we have given our customers a square deal. We were the first to reduce our charges below the legal maximum and we intend to continue lender money to worthy people at the lowest possible rate and to give them fair, courteous, businesslike treatment

The charge for a Household Loan of $300 is 2½% per month on the unpaid balance throughout the life of the loan. Rate on loans less than $300 is 2½% a month on that part of a loan over $100 plus 3½% a month on the first $100. All charges figured on unpaid balances only.

Amount Monthly of Loan.	Repaid in 6 mos.	Repaid in 12 mos.	Repaid in 20 mos.
